PRIESTLY VOCATIONS

FATHER YORKE ON THE CHURCH'S RECRUITING SOURCE.

Solution of Priest Supply Depends on the People—Need of Giving Children to the Sanctuary's Service. Dioceses Must Supply Their Clergy.

The priests of the church are taken from the people to serve the people. God does not send his angels from heaven to be ministers of the gospel. He takes men and sends them to preach, to offer sacrifice and to forgive sin. His priesthood is not a caste. It is not confined to one family or to a single race. It is the priesthood of Melchisedec, who was without father or mother. The church knows not family or condition. She asks merely for virtue and good will.

The priests of the church are not to be strangers in the household of the faith. They must be the children of the household. The man who stands at the altar must be taken from the people that worship round the altar. "For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in the things that belong to God that he may offer up gifts and sacrifices for sins, who can have compassion on them that are ignorant and that err because he himself also is compassed with infirmity."

This spirit of sympathy between the priest and the people, of which the apostle speaks, is ordinarily the result of human influences, race, education, family and social ties. Therefore the church recruits her ministers from the locality in which they are to serve. Her diocesan clergy come from the diocese, and in the normal condition of the church the diocese is every considerable town and the surrounding country. The diocesan clergy belong to the diocese and are not permitted to move freely from diocese to diocese. Some of the modern religious orders follow a different procedure, but even they have their provinces and districts within which their subjects are confined.

Hence in the mind of the church each diocese must supply its own clergy. If a diocese does not supply its own clergy, something is wrong somewhere. Of course I speak of dioceses that are settled. Where a country is filling up with immigrants the immigration must do its share in supplying the clergy. The newcomers have a right to priests of their own flesh and blood.

But when a diocese is settled and the increase of the population is the natural increase of the excess of births over deaths, the diocese itself must supply the priests. Ultimately the solution of the priest supply depends on the people. If the people will not give their children to the service of the sanctuary, there can be no priests. The question, therefore, is, Can the people be got to do their duty in this matter?

God is bound to have his own way. If he has not his way in this world, it is owing to neglect or perversity. It is his way to take his priests from the people. If he does not get them, the reason is either that the people don't know he wants them or they are not willing to give what he asks. The last reason may be put out of court. There is always a remnant in Israel. When Elias complained that the people had all forsaken the covenant of God and had destroyed his altars and had slain his prophets and that he alone was left, the Lord answered him, "I will leave me 7,000 men in Israel who have not bent the knee to Baal." That remnant is always sufficient to people the courts of the sanctuary. If they are few, they give generously.

Therefore, if there be a dearth of priests it arises from the fact that the people do not know their duty. In a settled Catholic land the customs of the country are an education in themselves. We are, however, dealing here with a community where all things are new. Hence there is need of frequent instruction on the duty of the people to supply priests for the altar. This duty must be impressed upon them again and again. They are willing, at least those of them who go to church, to do what is right, if they are only told.

To aid them in doing right comes the further fact that no one takes this honor to himself save he that is called even as Aaron was. God calls boys to the priesthood. This call means that God implants in their hearts a liking for the priestly state. Two things may stifle the liking—first, the parents' influence, conscious or unconscious; second, sin. Sin is the boy's own business, in families worthy of the name. In a decent home the child who sins sins of his own accord. The parents are not to be held responsible therefor. But it is otherwise with influence. The father may have other ideas for his son, the mother other dreams. They may be deaf to the angel voices and blind to the light from heaven. By keeping before the child the secular ambition of place and power and fortune they may stifle the liking for the things that are of God. In this are the parents guilty and therefore it is necessary to tell them of their duty and to warn them that they gain nothing by cheating God. God is a jealous God; if he does not get the soul he wants, he spoils it for any other use. The most pitiful thing on earth is the poor young fellow known to the Irish as a "spoiled priest."

But if the matter is brought home properly to them few will be the Catholic parents to refuse a son to God. Their faith is too deep, the reward too great. Theirs is the honor when the beloved son lifts up his hands in benediction on the people, theirs the reward when day by day the clean oblation is offered for them living, is offered for them dead.—Rev. P. C. Yorke in San Francisco Monitor.

THE GREGORIAN CHANT.

Its Influence Upon the Music of Modern Times.

The chant introduced into the service of the mass by Pope Gregory the Great in the seventh century has a quality intrinsically sacred, is full of the spirit of reverence and possesses an undefinable and mystical character. Its tones have been the foundation of the best hymns and anthems, and they have given rise to a style of music which for its simplicity and grandeur many look up to as the perfection of religious expression. It has a richness of melody that is different from anything founded upon the modern scale. Although the cloisters had developed the art of music to such an extent as to make it comprehensible and feasible and laid the foundation for its present magnificent structure, nothing seems to have been done by those in religious orders or those in the world who took up the art from them in the way of composing suitable music for the mass during the nine centuries succeeding the time of Pope Gregory.

Possibly, considering that for the purpose of the mass the institutions of Gregory could not be improved upon, workers in the art of music devoted their labors to mundane delectation. In lieu, though, of composing devotional music composers degraded the music of the church by setting the words of the liturgies to secular and popular tunes, and secular influences came to so dominate religious sentiment that in the beginning of the sixteenth century the sacred liturgy of the mass was sung to the lowest order of popular tunes. While the choir would be singing the sacred words the congregation would be humming the secular words belonging to the tunes. The council of Trent in the sixteenth century undertook the reformation of this abominable profanation of worship, and for its accomplishment the genius of Palestrina was invoked.—Donahoe's Magazine.

FATHER MATURIN.

Former Episcopalian Minister Joins the Order of the Oratory.

Information received in private letters from England is to the effect that the Rev. Father W. B. Maturin is about to enter the Order of the Oratory, a community whose houses are located in Birmingham and Brompton. The congregation of the oratory was founded by Philip S. Neri, who was afterward canonized, in the middle of the sixteenth century. In 1847 Cardinal John Henry Newman established a congregation of the order at Birmingham, and two years later another congregation was established in London by the Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Faber, which was subsequently settled at Brompton. Each community is wholly independent of the other, and neither has any substantial relation with the houses on the continent of Europe.

It was the principle of the founder of the order that there should be perfect equality among its members, even the superior taking his turn in serving the table. The members are not monks and do not renounce their private fortunes. Their functions are limited to prayer, the administration of the holy sacrament and preaching. In Cardinal Newman's time the membership was composed mostly of priests who had been in the church of England, and that complexion is largely retained up to the present. It is understood that Father Maturin will unite with the community at Brompton.—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Office of Papal Sacristan.

In the September number of St. Peter's the Very Rev. Prior O'Gorman, O. S. A., in a well illustrated article on the Austin friars, gives some interesting particulars in regard to the office of papal sacristan.

"An office which is always held by an Austin friar, who is invariably a bishop, is that of papal sacristan. The duties of this office consist in looking after the treasures contained in the Vatican sacristy, and more especially the sacred relics. Under the right reverend the sacristan are two or three assistant priests, also members of our order, who provide for the spiritual wants of the members of the pope's household as well as for all those living within the precincts of the Vatican, who never number less than some thousands of souls. Another duty of the papal sacristan is to administer the sacrament of extreme unction to the dying pontiff. Thus, when Pius IX was on the point of death he was anointed by Mgr. Marinelli, who then held the office of sacristan. The present holder of this position, Mgr. Pifferi, is the spiritual guide and adviser of the reigning pontiff, Leo XIII.

Life of Priests In Texas.

Referring to the hard life led by many priests in Texas, The Southern Messenger speaks of one parish in visiting which the missioner must travel 1,392 miles by railroad and 444 miles overland by stage. The district was formerly called No Man's Land, and comprises 69 counties. The number of churches in the mission is very small, but mass is offered in 25 private houses many miles apart. This largest parish in the United States—certainly there can be none larger—is in the diocese of Dallas, the area of which is 118,000 square miles.

The Pope's Memory.

The other day the French prelate had an audience with the pope, during which Leo XIII referred to the sensational stories that are being told about him. "People are saying and writing," he remarked, with a smile, "that I am weak; that I have frequent fainting fits; that I have actually lost my memory. Now listen!" And he recited a whole page of the "Æneid." "How many of them will be able to do that when they are 88?" he asked, with a smile of triumph as he finished.—Boston Herald.

FOOTBALL NOTES OF PARTICULAR LOCAL INTEREST.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

There is every prospect that the football game on Martine Field tomorrow morning will be well worth witnessing. The local boys are rapidly putting on the finishing touches for the game, and will meet at the Westervelt avenue grounds this evening for final practice. It is probable that there will be several changes in the lineup from that of the election day game, and that the team will be strengthened. The San Remo's are coming here with the expectation of winning again, and with that object in view will bring a particularly strong team. The Plainfield players will contest every inch of the ground, however, and a stubborn and well-fought game will be the result.

BASKET BALL.

The regular Y. M. C. A. basket ball team will go to Brooklyn tonight and play the Eastern District Branch of that city. The game is bound to be a hot one, as the Eastern District team is the second strongest team in the metropolitan district, and last season was only defeated by the Twenty-third Street branch, who won the league championship. There are two more formidable teams that the Plainfield boys must meet—the Knickerbocker team and the "Rubber Five," of Greenpoint, Brooklyn. There is no doubt but what one of these three teams will win the championship this season.

There is one way in which the "Rubber Five" of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A. has a great advantage over the local players. Twice a week they are given their gymnasium for two hours' practice which naturally keeps them in fine form. The local team, on the contrary, has had little or no time to practice except just before the games. The fault does not lie with the local players, however, as it is Physical Director Heywood's belief that it would be depriving the members of their just rights to reserve the gymnasium for the special use of the basket ball team except at the time of games.

Those who witnessed the game in Brooklyn Friday night, when the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A. boys defeated the basket ball team of the local Y. M. C.A., were more than pleased at the remarkably clean game played by both sides. There was no rough work but a quick active game that showed how basket ball can be played without any of the rough features that made the last game in this city so objectionable. While the score was 33 to 14, it must be remembered that the Greenpoint team is one of the strongest in all Brooklyn, and that it played in its own gymnasium. Considering those facts, the showing made by the Plainfield team was not at all bad. It is to be hoped that the Greenpoint boys will come to Plainfield and give the local enthusiasts as clean an exhibition as was played Friday night.

FOOTBALL TOMORROW.

GAME WILL BE PLAYED ON MARTINE FIELD IN THE MORNING.

How the Team Will Line up to Meet the San Remo Boys—It Will be the Last Appearance of Several of the Plainfield Boys

Tomorrow morning will see the last game of the Plainfield football eleven. The game will be played on Martine Field with the San Remos of the New York Athletic Club. There are several of the Plainfield boys who have announced that this will be positively their last appearance on the gridiron. Various circumstances have led to such a decision which will probably break up the team which has now played together for so many years. As it is the last game, the boys are going into it with determination to make their last appearance a rousing one and to carry out victory as a fitting conclusion.

The team will line up somewhat differently than it did election day. At centre there will be Harry Woltmann, formerly of the Alis team, and now a prominent candidate for the centre position on the Princeton freshman eleven. Raymond A. McGee, of this city, will return from Yale to play left guard. The right guard will be Livingston, a crack player from the same institution, who will be McGee's guest over Thanksgiving. Thoma A. Cuming will play right tackle, for which position he is better than his old one of centre. Harry L. McGee will fill the other tackle. On the ends of the line there will be Edgar I. Serrell on the right and Fletcher Hallock on the left.

Louis Waring will be back at his old place at quarter, where he will be particularly valuable. If Voight, the old Westfield player, is placed at fullback, George Cathcart and Thomas U. Smith will be the two halfbacks. It is expected that one of the substitute backs from the Yale 'varsity team will be present, in which case there will be some changes behind the line.

Restrained the Sale.

(Special to The Daily Press.

Bound Brook, November 23.—Under a chattel mortgage given by T. Steinberg & Co., grocers, of this place, to Myer Dubinsky, of New York, the latter attempted this morning to sell the stock of the firm.

Lawyer Suydam, of this place, representing creditors whose bills will amount to $2,200, stopped the sale by producing an injunction granted by Judge Kirkpatrick, of the Supreme Court, restraining the mortgagee from selling the goods. This is the first case in this State to be tried under the new bankrupt law, and will be watched with interest.

Inspected G. A. R. Post.

The annual inspection of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., took place last evening at headquarters on East Front street. Department Commander Wm. C. Smith and staff was present, also a large delegation of veterans from other Posts from nearby towns. On account of Commander Smith being a member of Post 73, Senior Vice Commander Gibbons was in charge of the work.

The Post was inspected by Assistant Inspector Totten, of Dahlgren Post, of Elizabeth. The work of the Post was up to the highest standard, and the initiation of Harvey Smith into membership was commented upon as being a fine piece of ritualistic work.

G. O. P. CANDIDATES WERE NOMINATED.

Republican City Convention Held Wednesday Night.

ROCKFELLOW FOR MAYOR.

UNANIMOUSLY CHOSEN TO STAND AT HEAD OF TICKET.

William N. Runyon Nominated for City Judge by Vote of 18 to 9—Judge Newcorn Also Named—James A. Martin for Collector—Rev. Dr. Richards Defeated Dr. O. L. Jenkins.

For Mayor,
GEORGE W. ROCKFELLOW.
For City Judge,
WILLIAM N. RUNYON.
For Tax Collector,
JAMES A. MARTIN.
For School Trustee,
REV. DR. W. R. RICHARDS.

With that combination, the Republican party will enter the campaign to the coming municipal election with plenty of enthusiasm. It is a strong ticket, composed entirely of Plainfield business men, but it needs to be as the coming election promises to be the most hotly contested on record.

Wednesday night the Republicans held their city convention at which the city ticket was to be nominated. Unlike those of past years the convention saw several contests which were continued right to the very last and showed that all was not peace and quietude in the G. O. P.

The convention was held in the Republican headquarters in the old City National Bank building on East Front street. Besides the delegates, twenty-seven in all, there were several score of well-known Republicans who assembled to see what was to be done.

Some fifteen minutes late the convention was called to order by Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee. Councilman E. T. Barrows then nominated Former Councilman John B. Dumont for chairman and he was unanimously chosen. Assemblyman Roger F. Murray was elected secretary.

The call was read and the chairman appointed the following convention officers: Judge, Thomas Hanna; inspector, Chas. S. Foote; clerk, Daniel Galbraith. They were sworn and then the chairman of the delegations made their report. The chairman were I. L. McVoy, of the First ward; Former Councilman S. A. Ginna, of the Second ward; Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of the Third ward and Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, of the Fourth ward.

The only changes in the delegates were Roger F. Murray for F. E. Marsh and E. T. Barrows for I. W. Rushmore in the Third ward delegation and Andrew McCardle for A. T. Ayres in the Fourth ward delegation. The delegations were as follows:

First ward—Thos. Hanna, Alexander D. Mallinson, Fred J. Vieweg, William J. Douglass, Isaiah L. McVoy.

Second ward—Stephen A. Ginna, Josiah Browne, Charles S. Foote, L. L. Croom, J. B. Dumont, B. VanD. Hedges.

Third ward—Alexander Gilbert, J. W. Murray, Jr., John Cose, J. Evarts Tracy, Roger F. Murray, Nathan R. Titsworth, E. T. Barrows.

Fourth ward—William A. Westphal, Andrew McCardle, Edward Mosher, James Huntington, Daniel Galbraith, James Porter, Neil Head, Richard Norwood, Charles Sheldon.

On a motion offered by J. W. Murray, Jr., the convention proceeded to the nominations. Nominations for Mayor were called by wards. Alexander Gilbert, as chairman of the Third ward delegation presented the name of George W. Rockfellow in a short speech. He called attention to the excellence of his candidate, his great popularity through the city and how he had built up a business for himself by thrift and industry. He has served one term as Mayor and his experience would make him all the more a valuable candidate. Then, too, Mr. Gilbert explained, he possessed negatively the perquisites required by the opposition in the party. He was not a New York business man, he was not a commuter and he does not ride in "club cars." The opposition, sarcastically observed Mr. Gilbert, considers that such a trinity of vices as being a New York business man, a commuter and a "club-car" man disqualify a man from holding office in Plainfield.

He went on to observe that Mr. Rockfellow possessed all the virtues demanded by the opposition, and had none of the vices they condemn.

He then told of Mr. Rockfellow's

GIRLS PLAY BASKET BALL

JUNIOR CLASS AT HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATS SENIORS.

First Public Games Between the Classes Played in Whittier School Wednesday Afternoon—Victorious Score of 6 to 4.

The girls of the Plainfield High School resumed their public exhibitions of basket ball Wednesday afternoon with a game between the teams from the Senior and Junior classes. The match was played in the gymnasium on the upper floor of the Whittier building before a number of spectators.

While the girls have been practicing now for over a month, the first match game was that of Wednesday afternoon. The rivalry between the classes of '99 and 1900 was high last year and was even greater this year. Both teams played well and at no time were the spectators sure as to the outcome. Both sides suffered from nervousness in the first part of the game but as it progressed, they forgot the audience and played their best. As a consequence there was a decided improvement. The first half ended with the score 4 to 4, with no advantage for either side.

In the second half, the Junior guards braced up and prevented their opponents from scoring at all. The Junior forwards were met with better playing, but managed to secure one goal from the field, giving them the game by a score of 6 to 4.

CLASS OF 1900.		CLASS OF 1899.
Beatrice Miner	l. f.	Bessie Randolph
Emily Runyon	c.	Jessie Pruden
Ruth Maxson	r. g.	Phemie Demaraest
Alice Morgan	l. g.	Alice Conant

Referee—Walter L. Long. Umpires—Prof. H. M. Maxson and George P. Smith. Goals from the field—Miner (3), Sterling, Randolph. Goals from fouls—None.

THE TWILIGHT BALL.

A Merry Gathering of Masqueraders Thanksgiving Eve.

Nearly one thousand people assembled in the Crescent Rink Wednesday evening to participate in or witness the fourth masquerade ball of the Twilight Social Club.

There was a great variety of costumes, many of which were very handsome. There were plenty with masks to dance, while the sides of the hall were lined with watchers. In the grand march the judges decided that Miss Nellie Parkinson had the most handsome costume.

At midnight there was a grand cakewalk. The couples all did so well that they required another trial before they could decide. The first prize was given to Miss Fitzgerald, of Perth Amboy, and Michael Higgins, of this city. Honorable mention was also given to Miss DeNise and Harry Milligan, and Miss Tunison and J. T. Young.

The judges were F. S. Jones, Clarence E. Teel, J. Blimm, W. W. St. John, Frank Whiteside and Nathan R. Titsworth.

Most of the masks were removed at midnight, but the dancing was continued until 5 o'clock Thursday morning. F. S. Moore acted as floor manager. The committee in charge consisted of F. S. Moore, E. C. Searing and Theo. Smith.

The music was well rendered by Rogers' full orchestra. The next dance of the Twilights will be held in the Crescent Rink on Easter Monday night.

ATTACHMENT QUASHED.

Max Wiertz Proved That He was Not an Absconding Debtor.

Early this week the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company got out an attachment, through Codington & Swackamer, against the goods belonging to Max Wiertz, the West Sixth street caterer. Mr. Wiertz sought to quash the writ Wednesday night in Justice Nash's court, by proving that he was not an absconding debtor, and that he had lived continuously in this city for seven years, and was even a resident at the time the attachment was made. Mr. Wiertz was represented by Craig A. Marsh, who turned the case over to W. S. Angleman, and Mr. Angleman through the defendant's testimony and that of the defendant's neighbors and friends, succeeded in showing to the satisfaction of the Court that he was not an absconding debtor, and the attachment was quashed.

A WHITE THANKSGIVING

SNOW AND RAIN MADE THE DAY UNPLEASANT OUT OF DOORS.

The Big Storm Was Delayed a Day and So Brought Snow for Thanksgiving—Two Inches of Snow Fell.

If the good folk of Plainfield were not particularly thankful to greet the first snow storm of the year on Thanksgiving Day, it certainly brought out the comforts and joys of home in contrast to the bleakness out doors. The storm has swept over the western states leaving snow and cold weather in its track. The weather bureau men said that it was to reach here Wednesday but there was something in the road and the storm dragged over a day.

Thanksgiving Day dawned wet and drear. It rained, misted and was otherwise uncomfortable outdoors in the morning. Then the rain began to fall heavily. Half an hour changed it to stinging sleet and hail, and later the snow began to fall and continued to do so until sundown. Two inches of the feathery flakes fell and were distributed rather unevenly by the bitter north wind that appeared as the storm prepared to depart.

It was soft and damp when it fell and the carriages and pedestrians soon converted it into muddy slush that hardened as the mercury fell below freezing at nightfall. Few sidewalks had been cleaned, and the slush froze giving the stones a rough coating of ice that caused the pedestrians this morning to perform all kinds of antics in their efforts to retain their equilibrium.

Where the people did not go, the snow made a beautiful mantle of white that covered the ground and sparkled in the morning sunlight. The snow stopped falling at sundown while the cold increased. At 9 o'clock, the clouds broke away and the moon came out. The wind blew and the night was cold. This morning at 7 o'clock the thermometer registered 26 degrees above zero. It was the first time for many years that such a heavy snowfall has been reported in Plainfield so early in the season.

A GOLF DANCE.

Informal Affair Given at the Park Club Last Night.

A novel dance was held in the Park Club hast night, in which the guests were all supposed to appear in golf costume. It was called a golf dance, and was intended to be very informal.

The ladies who received were Mrs. Edward Douglass, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. William L. Saunders and Mrs. Samuel McCutchen. There were a few complete golf suits to be seen, crimson coats and bright ties, one or two in business suits, but the majority of the men were in conventional evening dress. The ladies wore white duck skirts and white waists, trimmed with red ribbons. The colors of the golf club, red and white, were shown in this way. The men, too, displayed their colors either in their dress or else in the shape of a ribbon on the coats. Musicians from Newark furnished the music.

WEDDING IN COLORED SOCIETY.

Joseph Barrett and Cora Ada Wood United in Holy Wedlock.

Rev. James E. Groves, of the Mt. Zion A. E. church, officiated at a wedding last night, and united in matrimony Joseph Barrett and Miss Cora Ada Wood. The wedding took place at the home of David Martin, 305 Arlington avenue, and was attended by about 50 guests.

The bride wore a white satin gown, and carried a bunch of white flowers. The bridesmaid was Miss Lemma Coles, and she was dressed in a white dotted swiss, and carried a bunch of yellow chrysanthemums. William Burton was best man. After the wedding a reception was held, and then the couple took possession of their new apartments at 305 Arlington avenue, where they will reside.

GOOD CHEER FOR THE POOR.

Organized Aid Association Sent Out Sixty-nine Dinners.

The Organized Aid Association spread Thanksgiving cheer among the unfortunate and needy in the city and borough yesterday by distributing 69 Thanksgiving dinners, fifteen of which went to the inmates of the City Industrial Home. Others were sent to poor families in the city and borough who were unable to enjoy from their own resources the usual articles that go to make up a Thanksgiving dinner.

The dinners were delivered Wednesday afternoon through the generosity of A. L. Dunavan, who annually donates his team and services for this purpose. Each dinner consisted of poultry, celery, cranberries, sugar, tea, coffee, potatoes, onions and fruit.

NOT ALL HARMONY WITH THE CITIZENS.

Former Councilman Spangenberg Bolts the Convention.

WANTED TO NAME JUDGE.

FRED C. LOUNSBURY FINALLY NOMINATED FOR MAYOR.

Mr. Spangenberg Wanted to Force the Selection of Isaac P. Runyon for City Judge—Led to Exciting Argument—W. S. Angleman for Judge, and A. T. Gallup for Tax Collector.

For Mayor,
F. C. LOUNSBURY.
WINFIELD S. ANGLEMAN.
For Tax Collector,
ARTHUR T. GALLUP.
For School Trustee,
CHARLES BURNETT.

This is a portion of the Citizens' ticket that was nominated at a meeting of citizens last Wednesday evening in Justice Moffett's office on North avenue. It was a meeting of Citizens, that is those present comprised the "committee of forty," selected from the four wards in the city.

The meeting was of the "star chamber" order and was very exclusive. Only members of the committee were admitted to the room, and as far as possible all business was transacted with the utmost secrecy. It was nearly 9 o'clock when W. T. Banks called the meeting to order. Mr.

F. C. LOUNSBURY.
Citizens' Candidate for Mayor.

Banks was chairman and Irving Brady was chosen secretary.

The first business to be considered was the selection of a man to head the ticket for Mayoralty honors. Former Councilman Leonard Spangenberg and School Commissioner F. C. Lounsbury were the two possibilities. The former stated at the outset that he would accept the nomination, provided Lawyer Isaac Runyon would be nominated for City Judge. No other alternative would he accept.

This proviso was not pleasantly received, and Mr. Spangenberg in a flurry of excitement withdrew from the meeting, refusing to have anything more to do with the Citizens' movement. It is also said that Mr. Runyon withdrew his support.

Mr. Spangenberg received 21 votes on the first ballot for Mayor. He states that he could have had the nomination but withdrew because the committee would not pledge themselves to nominate Isaac Runyon for City Judge.

The next nomination, that of City Judge, fell to Winfield S. Angleman. There was no contest and he was unanimously chosen for the nomination.

In the contest for Tax Collector there were two aspirants, Arthur T. Gallup and George O. Stevens. It required two ballots to decide the contest and Mr. Gallup won out, he receiving the majority of votes. This nomination was made unanimous.

For School Commissioner, Charles Burnett, of the Third ward, received the unanimous vote of the "committee of forty," and he was declared the nominee.

As regard the ward nominations for Councilmen, this part of the performance has not yet been completed. It is understood, however, that J. C. Blimm will be nominated in the First ward; G. W. V. Moy in the Third ward, and James Davis in the Fourth ward. The Second ward candidate has not yet been selected.

It was nearly 12 o'clock when the meeting adjourned

BURGLARS FOILED.

Broke Open Blinds to Lister's Store But Did Not Enter.

An attempt was made to enter the store of C. C. Lister & Brother on North avenue last evening between 6 and 7:30 o'clock. The blinds to the window in the back of the store were forced back at the bottom, the hinges and bolt broken and easy access gained to the window. No attempt was made to open the window. Either the would-be burglars were frightened away or else they did not dare enter the lighted store. Two panes of glass in the windows to the little shop in the rear were broken but apparently no other attempt was made to gain entrance there.

Mr. Lister left the store shortly before 6 o'clock, leaving the gas burning. When he returned at 7:30 o'clock he found the blinds broken.

INNOCENT COW TO BLAME.

Trespassed on Forbidden Property and Now its Owner is Under Arrest.

Justice Mosher issued a warrant Wednesday for the arrest of James McCarthy, of Webster place, upon complaint of Mary Couglin, a neighbor, who charges him with assault and battery.

The alleged offence took place early this week, and was caused by an innocent cow that in some way trespassed on land that did not belong to its owner, which raised such a rumpus that McCarthy and Mary got into a quarrel, and Mary claims McCarthy was arrested Wednesday and will come up Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock for trial.

DIDN'T GO TO PORTO RICO.

Geo. B. Snediker Characterizes News Story as a Simple Fairy Tale.

A member of the staff of The Daily Press is in receipt of a letter from George B. Snediker, of Grove street, who is now in Philadelphia. Mr. Snediker characterizes the "fairy tale" that appeared in the News telling of his alleged experiences in Porto Rico, as entirely false and suggests that the writer thereof might do better in following in the footsteps of Laura Jeane Libbey than remaining in journalism. Mr. Snediker is now in Philadelphia in good health and doing well and has not been out of his own country at all.

Dan Shea Has Returned.

IMPORTANT LAW POINT.

DECIDED BY JUDGE VAIL AND OF MUCH INTEREST TO MERCHANTS.

It is Held That Payment on a Book Account Within Six Years of Time of Bringing Action Does Not Remove Statutory Bar.

The case of James B. Guttridge against Benjamin Sutton was tried on appeal before Judge Vail at Elizabeth Wednesday. Pope & Runyon represented Mr. Guttridge and Codington & Swackhamer Mr. Sutton. The question for decision was whether the claim was barred by the statute of limitations which had been pleaded by the defendant. The case was originally heard by Justice Moffett, who held the claim to be out-lawed, and since the original trial there has been much controversy as to the real law of the case. On Wednesday Mr. Swackhamer, appearing for the defendant, allowed the plaintiff to put in his evidence and without putting the defendant or any of his witnesses upon the stand, moved to non-suit on the ground that the claim was out-lawed and produced several authorities to prove his position. Mr. Pope replied in opposition to the motion, but the court sustained the defendant's position and granted the non-suit, thereby sustaining Justice Moffett's decision. The decision is important to merchants as it was held that a mere payment on a book account within six years of the time of bringing the action does not remove the statutory bar.

THANKSGIVING PRAISE FROM LOCAL PULPITS.

Union Services Held in Two Churches Yesterday.

INSPIRING WORDS HEARD.

SERMONS PREACHED BY DR. YERKES AND DR. RICHARDS.

Both Clergymen Referred to the Great Victories and Blessings the Nation Has Experienced During the Last Year, But We Should Not Forget He Who Led Us to Our Present Proud Place.

Those who braved the storm yesterday morning to attend Thanksgiving services in Trinity Reformed church were well repaid for their efforts, for they had the pleasure of listening to a powerful and interesting discourse by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church.

There was not a large attendance of people, although the main part of the church was well filled. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, opened the devotional exercises by reading the Scripture lesson. This was followed with prayer by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church During the offertory a beautiful anthem was rendered by Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Etta Krymer, Horace Martin and A. J. Moore.

Dr. Yerkes' discourse had to do with recent events in National affairs. He spoke of the very many things that Americans have reason to be thankful for. He dwelt at length upon the recent war with Spain, and how victorious the American arms were. He spoke of National prosperity, of how marvelously the Lord had preserved this Nation and so signally blessed the people. He also spoke regarding the friendly feeling existing between great Britain and this country, and of the great possibilities in the future. The doctor said that he felt proud of the fact that he was a free born American citizen, and that he was thankful that he was not born in Russia, Turkey or Spain. In conclusion he mentioned the increased responsibilities cast upon this Nation through the addition of new territory, and he expressed the thought that there should be careful consideration on the part of leaders as to the right sort of administration in this new territory.

The service closed with a prayer by Rev. G. W. Smith, of this city, and the singing of "America," by the congregation.

In spite of the stormy morning yesterday, the Thanksgiving service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church was so well attended that some of the members of the congregation had to find seats in the Sabbath-school room. Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., preached the sermon, and Rev. A. E. Main, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., and Rev. M. Chamberlin assisted in the service.

Dr. Richards' text was the first verse of the 115th Psalm, and he likened the United States to the kingdom of Israel. In speaking about the late war Dr. Richards said that we as a nation had much to be thankful for, and hoped we would not be puffed up with pride at our great success, and forget the hand that all the time lead us.

Dr. Richards referred to the Sunday night when rumors reached us of a great victory across the water. He said that he for one could hardly sleep that night and was delighted next morning when the news was read at every breakfast table, and later when the rumors were confirmed. The speaker said he regretted that politics and corruption had drifted into the management of the army, as it seemed it has, and men who had no real claim for their positions, except that they had earned a reward by being good politicians, were placed at the head of the affairs, and regretted that so much illness and death had prevailed in the army as a result.

Several anthems were sung by the choir during the service, Miss Jessie Utter presiding at the organ. The collection taken was a large one.

CHARLES L. STANLEY.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.—Prov. i: 10. Nov. 27, '98.

10. "Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings, and the years of thy life shall be many." We may think of David addressing Solomon (see verse 3), but it will be more profitable for us to receive the words as from God our Father to all who are His children by faith in Christ Jesus. We may hear His words and not receive Him, but when we hear and receive, or believe, for believing is receiving (John i, 12), we thus have life (John v, 24). It will make this teaching simple if when we read of wisdom, as in verses 5, 7, etc., we think of Him who is the wisdom of God (I Cor. i, 24, 30). In Jas. i, 21, we are taught that the word must be received with meekness.

11. "I have taught thee in the way of wisdom; I have led thee in right paths." Her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace (chapter iii, 17). He always leads by a right way to our city of habitation (Ps. cvii, 7). He is the Way, and He is our Peace; when He putteth forth His sheep, He goeth before, and to follow Him is to go in perfect peace, for His will is always wisest, and His way is always best, and in perfect acquiescence there is always perfect rest. Abide in His love.

12. "When thou goest, thy steps shall not be straightened, and when thou runnest thou shalt not stumble." There is no straightness with Him; His is an abundant way; abundant grace and glory; all our need supplied according to His riches (Phil. iv, 19). Philip's 200 pence would have given each of the 5,000 a little, but our Lord's way was to fill them with as much as they desired (John vi, 1-12). When His people hearken unto Him and walk in His ways, He fills and satisfies them (Ps. lxxxi, 10-16). He makes them to be satisfied with favor and full with the blessing of the Lord (Deut. xxxiii, 23). The blessing which maketh rich and to which our toil addeth nothing (Prov. x, 22, R. V.).

13. "Take fast hold of instruction, let her not go, keep her, for she is thy life." She is a tree of life—life unto thy soul (chapter iii, 18, 22). By comparing text with text we get the unity of the Scriptures, the oneness of thought, for all centers in Him who is our life (Deut. xxx, 20; Col. iii, 4). To walk in His way and keep His commandments is life and righteousness (Deut. v, 33; vi, 25), but He is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone that believeth; so it is summed up in receiving and walking in Him (Rom. x, 4; Col. ii, 6). Having received the word with meekness, the next thing is to hold it fast, for it is a faithful word (Titus i, 9; Rev. iii, 25). When satan by his servants questions any part of the word of God, the believer should take the hint to hold that portion all the more firmly.

14. "Enter not into the path of the wicked and go not in the way of evil men." Since the devil tempted Eve in the Garden of Eden he has been ever seeking whom he may devour, and he seems to find multitudes willing to be devoured.

15. "Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." Be not deceived; evil communications corrupt good manners. Awake to righteousness and sin not, for some have not the knowledge of God (I Cor. xv, 33, 34). Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful (Ps. i, 1). If Eve had not stopped to look at the tree, the fruit of which she was forbidden to eat, she might not have fallen. If Achan had not looked upon the gold and the garment, he, too, might not have sinned. All that is not of God we must turn away from lest we fall into temptation. Looking unto Jesus is the only way to run our race. Beholding the glory of the Lord is the way to become like Him.

16. "For they sleep not except they had done mischief, and their sleep is taken away unless they cause some to fall." To kill and to destroy, to give torment and anxiety, is their master's business and theirs. They speak loftily, they set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth (Ps. lxxiii, 8, 9). David said concerning them, "They that seek my hurt speak mischievous things and imagine deceits all the day long" (Ps. xxxviii, 12). The Son of Man came to save, not to destroy; He gives life and life abundant and joy and peace and glory. The followers of the devil are ever taking all they can get and giving nothing real in return. The Son of God gave Himself for us and bore all the devil's hate that He might redeem us from his power.

17. "For they eat the bread of wickedness and drink the wine of violence." Contrast the bread and wine of Melchisedec in connection with the blessing of the Most High God, possessor of heaven and earth (Gen. xiv, 18, 19); also the bread and wine of the communion, representing our Lord's body given for us, and His blood shed for us that we, eating Him, might live by Him (John vi, 54, 57).

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Nov. 27—Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.—Topic, Total Abstinence and Prohibition.

Scripture Reading.—Rom. xiv, 13-21.—"It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth or is offended or is made weak."

It was Laurence Sterne who said: "I never drink. I cannot do it on equal terms with others. It costs them only one day, but me three—the first in sinning, the second in suffering and the third in repenting."

The demon of drink has two horns. One gores the individual and the other the state. To successfully prosecute the temperance warfare there must be an intelligent appreciation of this two sided fact.

Principle and pleasure both cost. The man who seeks pleasure often sacrifices principle for it. Whoever will possess principle must sometimes do so at the cost of bodily ease, fame, social advantage and financial gain, but it proves to be a good bargain. Character is above price. Principle adhered to for its own worth brings the highest pleasure possible—self approval.

There is in Philadelphia a firm of glass bottle manufacturers who have never in 75 years of business made any kind of bottle or flask for liquors either malt or distilled. Their Quaker principles have been adhered to in spite of the large financial loss which it has cost. This is but a specimen of thousands through the land who hold integrity as more valuable than gain in money. Such cases are unobtrusive and make less show than open violations of law and decency. The Lord still has a people zealous of righteousness.

No one can give the subject of intemperance sober thought without being appalled by its evils and the magnitude of the curse. The results to the individual in effects on the body and mind, the ruin of all the finer qualities of the soul, are appalling. The direct loss to the family of the drinker is incalculable. Whether the father drinks or abstains means in the family of the ordinary workingman all the difference between abject poverty and comfort. It means to community the difference between a thinking citizen of productive value and social help and a claimant of police oversight and a burden on community for support in part in reformatory, jail and prison, and the cost of a pauper burial. The effects of total abstinence and intemperance are worldwide apart.

The arguments for total abstinence are mostly old and well known, but their repetition is needed constantly. A new generation is always coming forward and must learn the rules of right living for itself and put them in personal practice. Constant teaching of the evil effects of intoxicating liquors on body, mind and morals is needed. The curse of God on him who becomes a drunkard or aids in making his brother such a one must be reiterated again and again. Leagues and all young people's societies should make the social and literary and religious side of temperance work prominent in their meetings. "An ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure" is as true in this matter as in any realm of life.

The enormous drain the drinking habit makes on the wealth and productive capacity of a country is slowly coming to be appreciated. Men are slow to recognize the cost of their indulgences until forced to do so. The direct cost of vice and crime due to drunkenness is the heaviest drain on the resources of our nation. The greater part of the cost of maintaining penal and reformatory institutions, police and criminal courts is directly chargeable to the saloon. It is an expense which returns no corresponding benefit to the individual or community. The manufacture and sale and use of intoxicating liquors are a curse from first to last and infect all who come within the scope of their influence. How shall the evil be suppressed is the burning question.

Personal liberty has been greatly emphasized during the last 100 years or more, and especially in our own land. The oppressions of the past by the rulers of the people and disregard for the rights of others have caused unwonted and sometimes undue emphasis to be placed on the individual's rights. We are bound together in society and have duties to the community and the nation as well as to self. We have neighbors and must show ourselves neighborly, or we become violators of rights. While we emphasize our own worth and power we must accord to every other one equal rights. Each one finds his highest level in the uplift of all the others. "United we stand." If divided, we fall.

There are many causes which conspire to sustain the saloon and make it difficult to obtain its banishment. The money that is in the business is enormous, the profit on the investment is large, the work is not laborious, and many find in it an easy means of making a living. This is one side of it. On the other hand, great numbers of laboring men find in the saloon a congenial clubhouse. Home is bare of comforts and often destitute of love, while the saloon is warm, pleasant with company, music and congenial conversation. Hard labor and poor food awaken an appetite for stimulants. The saloon fills a place which nothing else supplies. Its evil influence is not usually seen by either the keeper or the customer. People of drinking habits will not be likely to use any influence against it. Even if they do not frequent it they will see no harm in it and will hold to the right of a man to do as he pleases about drinking what he will and where he will.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 27—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—"Great reforms that need our help."—John ii, 13-25. (International temperance Sunday.)

The topical reference is the story of Christ's cleansing of the temple. By the divine authority invested in Him He drove from the house of God those who were making it a den of thieves instead of a house of prayer. Besides the example of Christ in the Old Testament, we have many others to give to us the authority and the inspiration to try to do something in correcting the abuses of society, the church or the state. God has frequently, both in sacred and secular history, called out great reformers, who have vigorously denounced existing abuses and have brought order out of chaos. We are living in an age of reforms and reformers, and while we cannot hope to interest ourselves in every hobby of pretended reformers, yet there are several great and important reforms today that do demand our most earnest study, prayerful consideration and judicious action.

1. Temperance reform needs our help. A tremendous crusade is being made against the saloon and intemperance today. A political party, legions of societies, Christian churches, a religious press and many influential individual reformers are arrayed against them. The saloon is the greatest enemy of our country. It blasts thousands of lives; it ruins multitudes of homes; it is a constant lawbreaker and daily educates lawbreakers. Every time it deals out its poison, contrary to law, it not only breaks the law itself, but teaches a citizen of the country to disregard and trample under foot the law of the land. Every endeavor should be arrayed unalterably against the saloon and should be an earnest advocate of temperance reform. How these positions are to be manifested must be determined by each one for himself in accordance with his individual surroundings and opportunities.

2. Sabbath reform needs our help. The Sabbath is being constantly encroached upon. Pleasure and business are usurping the most sacred rights of God. "It is the only day I have for pleasure," says the advocate of a continental Sabbath. This is just contrary to the truth. The Sabbath is the only day that we have not got. It is the one day that God kept for Himself. The man who takes it for pleasure or unnecessary business robs God. There is need for a better observance of the Sabbath in our land. Endeavorers should stand firmly, by precept and example, in favor of a Christian, American Sabbath.

3. Social reform needs our help. There is great social unrest throughout the world today. It manifests itself in the deeds of anarchists, the enormous amount of socialistic literature and in various societies and organizations looking toward social reform. It advocates almost everything from anarchy to communism. Here is a work for Christianity. It should teach the world that the principles of Jesus alone can solve these problems. When the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, as taught by Christ, are believed in and acted upon, all social differences will be easily adjusted.

4. Political reform needs our help. There is a clamorous cry today against debauchery in politics. Bossism and partyism are arrayed against piety and patriotism. We cannot divorce our politics from our religion. Piety and patriotism must go hand in hand. The man who will not render unto God the things that are God's cannot be depended upon to render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Let us do all in our power to raise the standard of American citizenship.

All these reforms can be best advanced by advancing Christ. Let us strive in the face of these great needs more earnestly to get Christ into men. Christ in the hearts and lives of men will solve all temperance, Sabbath, social and political problems.

Bible Readings.—Ex. xx, 8-11; I Kings xv, 11-14; II Kings x, 20-28; xviii, 1-5; xxiii, 1-8; Ps. xxxiii, 12; Prov. xxiii, 29-31; Isa. i, 1-18; Amos vi, 1-8; Gal. vi, 1, 2; Phil. iv, 8, 9.

The Lesson of the Cross.

It is the cross of Christ that furnishes not only the programmes of philanthropy, but as well the power necessary for humanitarian effort. The motive truths of the cross are the great dynamic forces of missions and ministries the world over. Faith in the One who loved us and gave Himself for us moves to faith in the men whom He can redeem. The exhibition of the supreme sacrifice of a Divine sufferer to produce an imitative impulse in the wondering worshipers of that Saviour. The grace of God energizing the soul pushes it out along lines of lowly and kindly service. Love to God becomes the strongest and steadiest inspiration to love for man.—New York Observer.

Sunday a Necessity.

Mr. Gladstone's daughter once stated in a letter that her father said "He did not believe he would be alive now if he had not always kept his Sundays quite apart from his ordinary, and especially his political life, not only because of the pure refreshment it has always been to him to turn to holier things on that day, but because it has enabled him to learn more on religious subjects than perhaps any other layman, and so has given him that firm and splendid ground which has ennobled and hallowed all his actions through life."

God's Promise.

God does not promise supplies in advance. If we have only bread for today and are doing our duty faithfully, we may trust Him for tomorrow for tomorrow's food, and it surely comes, for God's word fails not. As the days come, each one will bring with it its own little basket, carrying a day's supplies, but no more.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Evidence Which is Right to the Point and Reliable.

Judge Frank Ives of District Court of Crookston, Minn., says: For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit with few exceptions, I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years.

George W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen apptite, perfect digestion.

Mr. W. D. Tomlin, mechanical engineer, Duluth, Minn.: One box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has done its work, and I am again gaining flesh and strength.

O. E. Ransom, Hustonville, Ky.: I was distressed and annoyed for two or three years with throwing up food, often two or three times a day; had no certainty of retaining a meal if I ate one. Four boxes of the tablets from my druggist have fully cured me. I find them pleasant to take, convenient to carry.

Rev. G. D. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.: The effects of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is simply marvelous; a quite hearty dinner of broiled beefsteak causes no distress since I begun their use.

Over six thousand people in the state of Michigan alone in 1894 were cured of stomach troubles by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

JOE WHEELER AN EXPANSIONIST.

The General Says We Can Give American Civilization to Any People on Earth.

Chattanooga, Nov. 25.—General Joseph Wheeler, who is here attending the meeting of the Tennessee River Improvement Association, said yesterday in his address:

"No country can control the commerce of a country unless it has a voice in the government of that country. I don't think the great men of a century ago who laid down the rules for the conduct of our government would repent their recommendations if they lived to-day. In the days of Monroe, Jefferson and Madison we were not the producing nation we are to-day. We must reach the markets of the world with our products, and I believe the government will now most wisely solve the problem before it. Some people will say our country is not adapted to controlling the people who have fallen under our control.

"History shows we have managed the five civilized tribes of Indians and all others that have become dependent upon us. We are capable of extending the principles of American civilization to any people on the face of the earth. Some people say the people of the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico are shiftless. That is not true. They are thrifty and will become heavy purchasers of the products of America. In Manila, Porto Rico and Havana they are already alive to the need of railroads, sanitary improvements, etc. We of the South will be the greatest beneficiaries of this new trade which is to come to us."

$6,000,000 Postal Gain.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—First Assistant Postmaster General Heath has completed his annual report. The general business of the department shows an increase of over six million dollars during the fiscal year.

In all departments of the service the influence of prosperous times has made itself apparent. This year there were 27,793,078 domestic money orders issued, against 25,169,059 last year, the amount carried was $191,354,121, as against $174,482,676.

There were 2,358 new money order offices established.

Mr. Heath recommends that clerks in postoffices be classified and placed upon a fixed scale of salaries similar to that of letter carriers, so as to give fair prospects of advancement and certainty of compensation.

Forming a Cuban Regimet.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 25—Captain Ord, he Judge Advocae, has a plan, which has he indorsemen of he Cuban Generals Rodriguez, Lacret and Oolazo, of forming a regiment composed entirely of Cubans, with the exception of the colonel, lieutenant colonel and one major. The plan also comprises the formation of several such regiments.

The captain has done good work here and was a resident for several years in Mexico. He speaks Spanish fluently and intends to obtain permission to see the President personally on the subject.

Owing to the difficulty of obtaining labor in Cuba the mining companies are importing labor from Spain. About four hundred Spanish laborers arrived here a few days ago, two hundred for the Spanish-American Company and two hundred for the Juragua Company. Upon the arrival of these men at Daiquiri thirty-five of them refused to land, saying that their contracts called for work at Santiago. The men are now here and they have been notified that they will be sent to jail if they cause trouble.

Judge Gordon Resgns.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—Judge James Gay Gorden, of the Common Pleas Court, of Pennsylvania, has resigned from the bench. The act caused a profound sensation from the fact that he was to have presided at the trial of Senator Quay, whose bitter political enemy he was. Judge Finletter succeeds to the bench and the Quay trial.

Judge Gordon is a Democrat and one of the party leaders in the State. Had he presided at the hearing, a friend of Senator Quay asserted, affidavits would have been presented declaring that Judge Gordon had arranged the prosecution and had no right to preside at the trial. All rumors were set at rest when it was announced from Harrisburg that Judge Gordon's resignation had been accepted by Governor Hastings.

When seen about the matter Judge Gordon expressed surprise that the well kept secret had leaked out, saying:—A month ago I appraised Governor Hastings of my intention to resign, and have had my written resignation in his hands nearly a fortnnight. My purpose in resigning is that I may take up again the practice of law.

Roosevelt's Slate.

Oyster Bay, Nov. 25.—Governor-elect Roosevelt passed the day quietly at his home. He has made fairly good figures with his slate and it seems to be practically decided that Major Avery D. Andrews will be Adjutant General, Dr. Alvin H. Doty will be re-appointed Health Officer of the Port. Frederick D. Kilburn will succeed himself as Bank Examiner and Charles A. Wieting will serve another term as Commissioner of Agriculture.

A Jack The Ripper.

Amsterdam, Nov 2.5—Two women were stabbed here last night under mysterious circumstances.

There bodies were horribly out and mutilated, and the work resembles the famous "Jack the Ripper" murders in the White Chapel district of London several years ago.

There have been four other cases of stabbing under similar circumstances here recently.

BLANCO TO STEP DOWN

GEN. PARADO MAY SUCCEED

His Resignation Accepted and Gen. Parrado Named as His Successor- The Retiring Captain-General and His Newspaper Foster Dissension Among Cubans.

Madrid, Nov. 25.—The Official Gazette has published a decree accepting the resignation of General Blanco as captain general of Cuba.

It is announced that General Parrado, second in command under Captain General Blanco, and president of the Spanish evacuation commission in Cuba, will succeed General Blanco in the captain generalcy of the island.

Havana, Nov. 25.—It is an open secret now that General Blanco will leave for Spain in a few days. Different dates are given for his departure. The local press decided that the date would be December 10, but the press censor would not allow the papers to publish their guess. It is probable that he will depart from Havana before that date.

What is beyond doubt is, that after many requests from General Blanco, the Madrid government has accepted his resignation in order that he may leave the island before the sovereignty of Spain is completely surrendered. The question now is who will replace him until the Americans take control, and who will be the best man to keep the country peaceful under such difficult circumstances.

It is learned that the place has been offered by the Madrid government to General Gonzales Parrado, president of the Spanish evacuation commission, but he has guided the Madrid government refusing to accept it owing to private reasons.

General Parrado's declination is due to the fact that his son is held as a prisoner by the Philippine insurgents and he is eager to return to Europe in order to try to effect his release.

General Parrado enjoys the confidence and sympathy of the American commissioners, who respect him both as a diplomat and a gentleman, and it is possible that the Madrid authorities will therefore force him to accept the post as a patriotic duty under the circumstances.

Should it so happen that General Parrado is allowed to decline the post, General Jimenez Castellanos will probably be appointed.

The American commissioners are deeply interested in the appointment of General Blanco's successor.

Though only a few days more remain for Spain to exercise sovereignty in the island, it is important that the man appointed shall be congenial to the Americans in order that the last details of the evacuation may be satisfactorily arranged.

The Spanish commissioners have notified the Americans that the Spanish troops in the province of Pinar del Rio will embark at Havana; those in Matanzas at Matanzas ports, and those in Las Villas or Santa Clara at Cienfuegos.

The note adds that the evacuation of Matanzas, Trinidad and Sancti Spiritus will be completed by November 30.

On December 1 the Spanish troops will concentrate at Cienfuegos.

Two Lake Vessels Lost.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 25.—The steamers Tampa and Arthur Orr are wrecked on the north shore of Lake Superior. The two vessels represent about $450,000 with their cargoes and they lie within one mile of each other.

The Tampa, Duluth bound, with coal from Buffalo, is a complete wreck on the rocks at Beaver Bay, sixty miles east of Duluth. She went ashore about two o'clock Tuesday morning in the fearful gale and snowstorm that swept Lake Superior all of Monday and Tuesday. Her crew is safe at Beaver Bay.

She is a total loss and was insured for $100,000. Her cargo was insured for $8,000.

The Arthur Orr was wrecked at Baptism River, nine miles east of the Tampa. She went on the rocks at about the same hour the Tampa was wrecked. She is broken in two.

The Orr had a cargo of flour and copper for Buffalo and is valued at $150,000.

Six New Ocean Liners.

Glasgow, Nov. 25.—The Glasgow Herald learns that orders for the construction of six transatlantic liners have been placed with British shipbuilding firms.

The vessels are nominally to be built for the American line, but are intended for the Red Star service.

Two of the ships will be cargo boats 53 feet long, and will be built by Hawthorne, Leslie & Co., at Newcastle.

The other four will be passenger steamships 560 feet long, and much faster than the freighters. The passenger boats will be built by the Clydebank Engineering and Shipbuilding Company. All the vessels will be of the twin screw type.

Charge and Counter Charge.

Cleveland, Nov. 25.—With reference to the "round robin" from the officers of the Eighth regiment of Ohio volunteers asking for the resignation of Colonel Hard and Lieutenant Colonel Dick, Major Charles C. Weybrecht said yesterday that "No request was made for Lieutenant Colonel Dick's resignation by anybody or for Colonel Hard's by officers of the regiment.

Corea Going in for Reform.

Yokohama, Nov. 25.—Advices from Seoul say that the reform party in Corea is gaining ground and under its influence various officers have been banished.

The emperor has assured the foreign ministers of his desire to institute reforms.

BISHOP TURNER'S GLOOMY VIEW.

He Sees No Attractive Futur for the Negro in This Country.

Macon, Ga., Nov. 25.—At the African Methodist Episcopal conference, which closed here yesterday, Bishop H. M. Turner had this to say on the race question:

"I see no manhood future for the negro in this country, and the man not able to discover that fact from existing conditions, must be void of common sense.

"Our civil, political and social status is degrading, and as degradation begets degradation, the negro must go from bad to worse, ad infinitum. Neither education nor wealth can ever elevate us to the grade of respectability. I say this because we are surrounded by so many influences that militate against our manhood. The best thing the negro can do is to call a great national convention and ask the United States congress for $100,000,000 to meet the expense of starting a line of steamers between this country and Africa, thus pioneering a domain for our settlement."

Miss Gould Feeds Soldiers.

New York, Nov. 25.—Contrary to her usual custom Miss Helen M. Gould gave a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday to the soldiers sheltered at Wody Crest.

Woody Crest is an old-fashioned mansion on the summit of a high hill and for a number of years has been used as a home for poor children, whom Miss Gould picked out of the slums of New York.

After the war with Spain ceased Miss Gould turned Woody Crest into a retreat for convalescent soldiers.

There are a score of sufferers from the Cuban climate there now, and at noon they were treated to a fine dinner, consisting of roast turkey, cranberries, potatoes, mince pie and other luxuries of the season.

A Thanksgiving dinner was also given by Miss Helen Gould to the two hundred soldiers whose names appear upon the books of the Soldiers' Comfort Association, at No. 316 East Fifteenth street.

To those who could not be accommodated and who applied for a meal a Thanksgiving basket was given instead.

The Presidents Thanksgiving.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—President McKinley, after attending church in the morning, spent a quiet Thanksgiving at the White House yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Abner McKinley took dinner with the president and Mrs. McKinley, and the Thanksgiving turkey, furnished by H. Vose of Westerly, R. I., was served with proper accompaniments.

Mr. Vose sends every year the finest turkey in Rhode Island to grace the president's table at the Thanksgiving day dinner.

Miss Alice Nielson of "The Fortune Teller" Company, playing an engagement here this week, was invited to breakfast with the president and Mrs. McKinley. She sang for them Wednesday, and has been asked to sing on Sunday morning at the Metropolitan M. E. church, which is attended by the president.

The Fake Fight.

New York, Nov. 25.—Perhaps the most resounding echo of the Corbett-Sharkey fight is the well grounded report that the total receipts of the fiasco, $46,355, were divided in thirds among the fighters and the club, making each share over $15,000.

The $20,000 purse never existed, but the fighters and those connected with the club succeeded admirably in keeping this fact a secret.

This leaves no room for doubt as to the fake nature of the fight.

Such arrangements put pugilists and pugilism in a bad light and it will be a long while before the public will forget Tuesday night's swindle.

Earl of Strafford Here.

New York, Nov. 25.—The Earl of Strafford, who is said to be engaged to the widow of Samuel J. Colgate, arrived Wednesday on the White Star steamship Teutonic.

The earl is a widower and owns fifteen hundred acres in England. He refused to deny or confirm the report of his engagement.

Other passengers on the Teutonic were Gilbert Colgate, Mrs. W. Earl Dodge, E. M. Padelford and Lord Stratheona, the Canadian Pacific Railroad millionaire.

Erteu by Sharks.

Shields, Eng., Nov. 25.—News of the wreck of the Norwegian bark Safir has been received through the survivors who were landed here yesterday.

They tell a frightful tale of disaster and suffering.

The Safir capsized in the mid-Atlantic. Her crew of fifteen clung to the keel for some time, when the great sea washed them away.

While struggling to regain the boat five men were eaten by sharks. Others became exhausted and drowned.

Only five of the fifteen were alive when rescue came.

Wisconsi [illegible]

Washington, Nov. 25. The navy department has been notified that the battleship Wisconsin will be launched at the yards of the Union Iron Works, San Francisco, on Saturday, November 26.

She will be the third of the three sister armorclads, of which the Alabama and the Illinois are the others, to take the water.

Her builders are the same who built the Oregon and who have the contract for the construction of the Ohio.

Volunteer Engineers Return.

New York, Nov. 25.—The First regiment volunteer engineers were fortunate enough to return yesterday from Porto Rico, and accordingly had their Thanksgiving dinner on American soil.

They were the guests of Lafayette Post, G. A. R., and in the evening enjoyed an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner at the armory of the National Society of the New England Women.

The Nominations.

The Repulicans and Citizens' have completed their nominations for the administrative offices of the city government, and it now remains with the voters to determine which is the most worthy, in the view of what they will probably accomplish if elevated to official positions.

The Republicans have changed their usual practice in making nominations by naming a man for Mayor whose business interests are centered in the city, and in this way they hope to secure victory that perhaps another commuter-Mayor nominee might not bring at this time. The views of a large number of influential Republicans were clearly presented by former Mayor Gilbert in his speech nominating Mr. Rockfellow, though at times Mr. Gilbert waxed more sarcastic than good politics would warrant under the circumstances. But leaving aside the feeling of the commuter element, who evidently believe that their efforts to serve the city have been poorly appreciated by the "home" element, the party now appears as having gratified the prevailing sentiment and no doubt think that they have ample claims for enthusiastic support.

The Citizens' have put forward a candidate for Mayor who represents what they assert is in no sense a partisan movement, but one designed to inaugurate reforms which the Republicans have made necessary by their party administration, and which are essentail to the welfare of the city. The Citizens' complaints are, so to speak, too numerous to mention. It is on the promise to grapple forcibly and honestly with the municipal problems that they ask for support.

Reed's Grip is Strong.

The Trenton correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, one of the most astute of the legislative observers, regards Senator Reed's candidacy for the Presidency of the Senate as quite formidable. The Record says:

The Senators-elect and the holdovers who were present listened patiently to Senator Ketcham, but refused to pledge themselves. Ketcham, however, closed the day's work with the declaration that he had good reason for believing that he would land when the time came for casting the vote.

The consensus of opinion among the leaders and the members of the "third House," who usually keep a pretty sharp eye on the drifting straw, is that Charles A. Reed, of Somerset county, will get the coveted office. This is Senator Reed's last year. He is a lawyer of ability, has the friendship of the "powers that be," and while the canvass he is making is quiet, it is strong and will probably land him in the president's chair.

Nothing would be more gratifying to Plainfield—city and borough—than to see Senator Reed elevated to the position from which Mr. Voorhees stepped into the highest office of the State. Mr. Reed's legislative experience, his ability as a lawyer and his courteous and suave personal manner would make him a popular presiding officer of the upper house of the Legislature. The Senator would be austere enough to lend dignity to the position, but withal that there is plenty of humor in him to keep the Senate in a pleasant frame of mind.

The City Judgeship.

According to the city charter the vacancy on the City Court bench, made by the death of the late George W. DeMeza, must be filled by special appointment of the Common Council within thirty days from the time the vacancy existed. If desired, a special meeting of the Common Council could be called for that purpose in three days, but as the regular Council meeting is Monday, December 5th, the appointment will not be made till that date. In the meantime Mayor Fisk will officiate in the City Court.

The Council will appoint a City Judge to act until the next relularly-elected Judge takes his oath of office, which will be the first of January.

We do not know whether or not Former Judge Nelson Runyon is willing to accept the appointment to serve for the one month, but we suggest his name to the Council as a man who would occupy the position with dignity and credit to the city. Mr. Runyon was one of the best City Judges Plainfield has ever had.

FORBIDDEN PORTRAIT OF CAPT. DREYFUS.

This portrait of Captain Dreyfus was made by the French authorities immediately after his degradation by the military authorities. Its circulation is forbidden in France, but a copy was recently secured by Black and White of London, and through that publication it is given to the world.

New Jersey to Honor Dead Heroes.

Within a month there is to be erected by the State of New Jersey at Andersonville, Ga., a monument in memory of the New Jersey soldiers buried there. The monument of Quincy granite, twenty three feet high, will stand on two bases ten feet in height of a conglomerate blue stone quarried near Boonton. On the granite capital surmounting the upper part of the monument will be a carved figure of a soldier at "parade rest." On the highly polished die of the monument will be the following inscription in sunken letters:

"Go, stranger, to New Jersey. Tell her that we lie here in fulfilment of her mandate and our pledge to maintain the proud name of our State unsullied, and place it high on the scroll of honor among the States of this great nation."

The manner in which the leaders of the Citizens' movement treat the newspapers, and especially when they ejected the reporters from the nominating conference Wednesday night, is decidedly ungenerous, as well as impolitic. Without the publicity given to the Citizens' movement by the newspapers it would not amount to a row of beans. If the newspapers were as narrow and as exclusive as the Citizens' leaders seem to be in this matter, the movement would be totally ignored in the current of news. But the newspapers are not constituted thusly.

Commissioner N. B. Scott, of the Internal Revenue Department, has made a decision which is of much importance to bankers and depositors. The decision is based upon the opinion of the Attorney-General and is to the effect that depositors of a bank drawing out their own money personally are not required to stamp their checks. This decision does not apply, of course, where the checks are negotiable, or are made payable to another partv.

Assemblyman Wood McKee, of Passaic, has announced that he will not accept the position of leader of the Assembly for which he had been slated, and some of the members urge Mr. Guenther, of Essex, to take the place. He has refused to permit his name to be considered and it is considered probable that the place will go to either Assemblyman McMurray, of Camden; Bell, of Bergen, or Squire, of Union.

Assemblyman Murray seems to be traveling all by himself in his opposition to the re-election of Speaker Watkins. But many a man with as little hope of carrying his point at the outset has won with flying colors on the homestretch. In these days of whirligig politics there is no telling what may happen.

The making of candidates has now ceased for the city election; the making of votes for the candidates is now the work in hand.

connection with the committee of citizens to confer with the Council in securing a sewage system for the city. He was a regular attendant at the meetings and took a deep interest. He knows much about the system in use in Plainfield, said Mr. Gilbert, and knows that it is in successful operation today. He also knows of the serious attention given to the plan to carry the sewage to tide-water and great difficulties and enormous expense in the way. If the time ever comes, remarked Mr. Gilbert, that the candidates of the Citizens' ticket get possession of the Council, and attempt to carry through their wild schemes, they will find a man in the Mayor's chair who will know how to deal with them.

J. W. Murray, Jr., moved that the secretary cast a ballot for Mr. Rockfellow for the Mayoralty nomination and it was done.

There was a little break when it came to the nominations for Tax Collector. The First ward forgot to put up its candidate and so the Fourth ward did it for them, naming James A. Martin, who was unanimously nominated.

S. A. Ginna then presented the name of William N. Runyon for City Judge as the choice of the Second ward. W. A. Westphal, of the Fourth ward named William Newcorn. The delegates then ballotted for the candidate and William N. Runyon was nominated by a vote of 18 to 9. The nomination was made unanimous.

The First ward was again in trouble when it came to name the candidate for School Trustee. They had two men for the place and so Chairman McVoy put them both up. They were Dr. Olin L. Jenkins and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards. The Second and Third wards seconded the nomination of Dr. Richards and the Fourth ward that of Dr. Jenkins. The balloting resulted in a victory for Dr. Richards by a vote of 16 to 11.

A short speech was made by Former Councilman W. A. Westphal, telling of the sad loss to the city and the Republican party in the sudden death of City Judge George W. DeMeza. He suggested that a committee of five be appointed to draft suitable resolutions of condolence to be sent to the family and relatives of the late Judge. Mr. Barrows seconded the idea with a few well-chosen words. Chairman Dumont appointed W. A. Westphal, chairman; James Huntington, Roger F. Murray, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and I. L. McVoy as the committee.

A committee composed of the chairman of the meeting and the chairmen of the ward delegations was empowered to fill all vacancies on the ticket. Then the convention adjourned to talk it all over

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Phillip Harman spent yesterday with relatives in Somerville.

There was a good attendance yesterday morning at the union Thanksgiving service held in the Methodist church. The sermon, which was a patriotic one, was preached by Rev. Mr. Peterson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and Revs. Jamison, Martine and Todd were in the pulpit and assisted.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church held a pie, bread and cake sale Wednesday afternoon in the W. C. T. U. rooms. The sale was well attended and almost everything sold. These sales are becoming a popular way of raising money for the different churches.

Ever since Raphael Meister came from Newark nearly three months ago to take charge of Lynus Walpole's candy store, a number of the boys in town have tried to make life miserable for him. Wednesday he went before Judge Clark and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Willie Trayno, charging him with insulting him, using profane language and otherwise acting in a disorderly manner Sunday evening. Trayno was brought before the Judge Wednesday afternoon, and after hearing the case Trayno was adjudged guilty. The Judge after severely reprimanding the young man suspended sentence, but warned him and the rest of the boys that they must leave Meister alone or he would not be so lenient the next time.

JEWELS OF THE GOVERNMENT.

At Washington, in the bond vault of the treasury, is a great store of diamonds and other precious stones that belong to nobody. Most of them have been in the custody of the officials for about sixty years, but some of the gems have been there much longer, and their history rests mainly on hazy tradition.

There is a bottle four or five inches long filled with diamonds, there are various other loose stones, and there are many set in gold ornaments. The value of the whole lot is variously estimated, the computations ranging from $50,000 to $100,000.

Most of these gems were sent as a present to President Van Buren by the Imaum of Muscat in 1839. This Asian potentate conceived the idea that he had received some service from this country, and this was his way of acknowledging his obligation. President Van Buren could not accept them, for there is a clause in the constitution forbidding any person connected with the government from accepting any present or decoration from any foreign power or ruler.

But the Oriental's present could not be returned; he would look upon that as an insult. So at last the jewels were turned over to the treasury to keep till something was done about them, and nothing has ever been done.

In similar ways has the entire collection accumulated; Kings and Princes are frequently not as familiar with the constitution of the United States as they should be, and government officers of various grades have sent here gifts they have received, and found it inconvenient to return and impossible to keep.

No Cure—No Pay.

TO YIELD BUT PROTEST

Spain's Answer Likely to Be Out Saturday'

DAY HAS NOT BEEN FIXED

Significant Remark Made by Senor Abarzuza in Paris. Expects to Stay in Paris a Fortnight Yet. A Drear Thanksgiving Day. Whitelaw Reid Entertains the Peace Commissioners.

Paris, Niv. 25.—The Spanish peace cimmissioners have fixed upon the day to submit their final answer to the American propositions.

It is deemed most likely, however, that Saturdaythat Saturday will be the day appointed and the opinion gains ground that the Spaniards will accept the proposals of the United States.

A significant indication of this view of the situation was a remark dropped by Senor Abarzuza of the Spanish commission yesterday, that they expected to remain here about a fortnight longer.

The secretary of the Spanish commission, Senor Ojeda, said that the instructions from Madrid were not sufficiently matured to enable them to appoint the next meeting.

The correspondent of the Associated Press asked Senor Abarzuza if the commissions would be able to leave Paris next week with the treaty, and he replied with a sidelong glance, as though to observe whether his questioner noted the significance of the reply:

"I suppose we shall be here for another fortnight."

"Why," the Spanish commissioner was asked, "is the opinion expressed so emphatically by a portion of the Paris press that you will decline the $20,000,000, but will sign the treaty with a protest that you did so only on account of the pressure of superior power?"

"Well, it does seem that $20,000,000 is not very satisfactory."

This was the semi-evasive manner in which the Spanish diplomat answered that question. His questioner continued:

"Then, it has been affirmed that Spain will refuse to sign the treaty, decline the money offered and make a protest to the powers, and that her commissioners will go home. Is that the most likely result?"

"Ah! But we should not anticipate. We should know day by day what happens day by day."

"And so you anticipate a fortnight more of daily development here?"

"Ah, yes. A fortnight! Perhaps some affairs may be attended to in that time."

Thanksgiving day here was cold, wet and drear. The United States peace commissioners were the guests of Mr. Whitelaw Reid at a Thanksgiving day luncheon at the hotel.

The Petit Bleu reaffirms as a certainty that the Spanish commissioners will refuse the American offer of $20,000,000 for a treaty cession of the Philippines.

Brice After the Alton.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—Negotiations for the purchase of the Alton road are still hanging fire. The syndicate, it is said, is willing to pay the price that President Blackstone wants for his stock, but objects to the condition that the minority stockholders must have a chance to accept the same price.

It is now asserted that President Stillwell of the Kansas City, Pittsburg & Gulf is merely an agent for Calvin S. Brice, and that the main object is to bring about a consolidation of the Lake Erie & Western, Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw and other roads controlled by ex-Senator Brice with the Chicago & Alton and the Kansas City, Pittsburg & Gulf.

The Lake Erie & Western would make a direct eastern outlet for the Alton.

The other Brice roads would fit in the combination and give the Alton an outlet to northern Michigan.

Mr. Brice has been seeking eastern and western connections for his system of roads in Ohio and the Alton would fill the want so far as the west is concerned.

Should a combination then be formed with the Baltimore & Ohio, as has been reported, Mr. Brice's dream would be realized and an independent system of roads created extending from Philadelphia and Baltimore to Kansas City and Omaha and to the Gulf of Mexico.

Steamer Huntcliff Anchored in Peril.

London, Nov. 25.—The British steamer Huntcliff, Captain Howell, when bound down the channel from Bremen for Mobile, lost her propeller yesterday and drifted near St. Catherin's Point, Isle of Wight, where she anchored close inshore in an extremely dangerous position.

Tugs from Cowes, Southampton and Portsmouth have gone to her assistance, but the task of saving her is rendered very difficult, by a strong southwest wind and much sea.

Blood Shed in Duel.

Budapest, Nov. 25.—A duel has been fought between the minister of the interior, Dosiderius de Perczel, and Deputy Hotto, a member of the Independent party, as an outcome of the minister's speech in Parliament on November 22, in which the deputy considered himself insulted.

Court-Martial for Picquart.

Paris, Nov. 25.—General Zurlinden, military governor of Paris, has signed an order for the court martial of Colonel Picquart on charges of forgery and the use of forged documents. The court will will meet on the 12th of December.

Kaiser Nearing Home.

Munich, Nov. 25.—The kaiser arrived here on his way to Berlin yesterday. He remained here only long enough to take luncheon, after which he resumed his journey.

OUR PHILIPPINE POLICY.

British Opinion Differ as to the Construction of Our Intentions.

London, Nov. 25.—The question of the future tariff arrangements in the Philippines attracts universal interest, but opinions differ diametrically as to the construction to be placed on the intentions of the United States so far as they have been indicated.

Mr. Herbert Alsquith, formerly home secretary, in a speech at Sunderland yesterday expressed pleasure at the announcement of the United States that the door would be open to her new Asiatic possessions.

He hailed the declaration as a further step on the road that the United States and Great Britain had begun to travel together. It was, he said, a further safeguard for the partnership of the two peoples.

This view was loudly applauded and was accorded a place in the papers ahead of Secretary of State Hay's statement.

The Daily News, noting that opinion is divided in the United States itself on the question, adds:

"The enthusiasm for American expansion will be considerably abated if it means a proportionate extension of the Dingley tariff."

The Times, on the other hand, says: "We have always been aware that there were difficulties in the way of the adoption by the United States of an 'open door' policy in the Philippines as that policy is usually understood in Great Britain, but we never doubted for an instant the sincerity of the United States government or its ability to devise means of substantially securing the results aimed at. The policy, as explained by Secretary of State Hay, is for all international purposes the policy of the 'open door.' Equality of treatment and the absence of differential duties are the essence of that policy which would be secured by the arrangements described by Mr. Hay just as truly as under a purely free trade system."

Berlin, Nov. 25.—Certain critics of the Anglo-American relations eagerly contend that the English hopes for an "open door" in the Philippines are destined to disappointment.

They say that while the United States will be cordially grateful to England if the latter can keep the open door on the east Asiatic continent, reciprocity in this regard is the last thing the shrewd Americans contemplate.

Home to Die Spaniards' Fate.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 25.—Advices from Spain are to the effect that the several thousand Spanish soldiers who have returned from their campaign in the Philippines and Cuba, and landed at Cadiz and Barcelona are in a most pitiful condition after terrible voyages, in which many of their number died and were buried at sea.

The soldiers complain that their quarters and the care of the sick have been most deplorable and that there has been absolutely no medicine for the sick.

Those who have landed after having been held in quarantine are for the most part physical wrecks, and if mustered out of the service will become public charges or beggars upon the streets.

As it is those who are still in the service have been suffering for the want of food and clothing, to say nothing of medicines.

In many instances the rations have been cut down two-thirds, and even then the food is almost unfit to eat. Disease has gotten among them and they are dying rapidly.

With thousands yet to return, the indications are that the conditions will grow worse instead of better. The soldiers would be inclined to revolt and create riot and trouble were it not for the fact that they are too weak from want of proper nourishment.

The government has been appealed to to aid the suffering soldiers, but for lack of funds it is practically unable to do so, and the soldiers are to a large extent dependent upon public charity.

Santiago's First Thanksgiving.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 25.—Thanksgiving Day was observed here yesterday for the first time in the three hundred years' history of the city. By a special proclamation issued by General Wood all business was suspended at the palace, and on the streets and wharves.

The employes of the municipality had a vacation, and only absolutely necessary work was done by the American troops. The day was given over to rest and enjoyment.

The American ships in the harbor observed the day by displaying their gayest flags. Many prominent Cubans followed the example of the Americans and little business was transacted by anyone.

It was a novel Thanksgiving Day for the Americans. The thermometer registered ninety-five degrees in the shade and there was no breeze stirring. Several projected baseball and football games were postponed on account of the heat.

In the evening dinners and entertainments were given by American officers and Cubans. The most important dinner was given at the governor's residence, where General and Mrs. Wood entertained a number of department officers and several American civilians.

Few of the soldiers were remembered by their friends in the United States. Turkeys were scarce, but there were plenty of wild guinea fowl and the troops fared well.

FOOTBALL IN A SEA OF MUD

The Ithacans Started at a Rapid Pace and Made the First Touchdown. The Weight of the Pennsylvania Team too Much for Corn ll. How the Game Was Played.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24.—Football was in everybody's head to-day, although hardly in the atmosphere. Seldom has the Cornell-U. of P. annual game seemed of so much interest to the followers of both universities. Red and blue and carnelian and white were in every shop window throughout Quakertown, and the hospitality of Pennsy's home city was extended to the great crowd of Ithacan sympathizers.

Notwithstanding the distressing weather prospects the streets were crowded with pigskin enthusiasts at an early hour, and the scene was even more animated than in any previous year.

Speculators, who had counted on selling tickets for the game at a premium, met with rebuffs wherever they offered their wares for sale, as it seemed everybody had already secured a seat in the big stands and had made their preparations for the day's sport long ago.

Betting was done only spasmodically, and Pennsylvania ruled favorite at odds of 2 to 1. Cornell men were not anxious to bet on the result of the game, but quickly covered all even money offers that the cornelian and white eleven would not score.

The weather was most wretched. Rain had fallen lightly since Tuesday night, and this was augmented this morning by occasional light snow squalls.

The air was cold and most unpleasant for spectators as well as players, and in every way it was fully up to what sea captains term a "dirty day."

The gridiron at Franklin field was transformed into a veritable quagmire. Many of the purchasers were deterred by visions of pneumonia from making use of their tickets. This in some degree affected the attendance at the game.

Notwithstanding these conditions an enormous crowd witnessed the contest and the fair sex constituted their full proportion of he assemblage. Heavy wraps and mackinoshes were the order of the day.

The crowd did not begin to assemble as early as it would on a more propitious day, and it was fully half past one o'clock before the vast stands began to fill up.

The snow began falling about noon and continued without abatement until the teams came on the field. A stiff breeze blew from the north.

Pennsylvania.	Positions.	Cornell
Reugenberg	Left tackle	Wyvell
Hare	Left guard	Reed
Overfield	Center	Dormer
McCracken	Right guard	Lueder
Carnett	Right tackle	Sweetland
Hedges	Right end	Grimshaw
Gardiner	Quarter back	G. Young
Coombs	Left half back	Whiting
Outland	Right half back	C. Young
Folwell	Full back	Perkins

Referee, W. A. McClung, Lehigh. umpire, Paul J. Dashiel, Lehigh.

Pennsylvania came on the field at 2.03 and Cornell a moment later. The wind had shifted to the west and a strong breeze blew directly toward the east goal.

The game from start to finish was a fast one, and on the first half the Ithacans played a sharp clip which was quite surprising to the Pennsylvanians and when the first half of the game was called the score stood Cornell 6, Pennsylvania 0.

In the second half the heavy weight of the quakers proved too much for their opponents and two touchdowns were made, giving Pennsylvania the game by a score of 12 to 6.

Carlist Guns Siezed by French.

Bayonne, France, Nov. 25.—Startling confirmation of the reports of preparations for Carlist risings in Spain was afforded yesterday by the seizure of arms which were about to be smuggled across the border from France.

French guards seized near Trun a large consignment of Mauser rifles and other munitions of war destined for the Basqua provinces, as well as many copies of a carlist manifesto.

These Carlist provinces lying along the Spanish coast of the Bay of Biscay, and just over the French border, have been the backbone of all the Carlist risings, and are intensely loyal to the pretender's cause.

Their faith has been kept alive by an energetic Carlist propaganda during the past six months.

The seized manifestos, printed both in Spanish and Basque, promise a full autonomous government to all the provinces of Spain and the restoration of provincial rights.

There is also promised, on behalf of Don Carlos, a revival of the national prestige, so nearly extinguished by Bourbon rule, and an equitable system of taxation.

According to trustworthy advices from Madrid the physicians of Queen Regent Cristina have decided that she is suffering from nervous strain and advised that she go to some quiet resort abroad where absolute rest can be assured.

She refuses steadfastly to heed this advice, fearing that the Carlists, taking advantage of her absence, will start the long heralded uprising.

Ultimatum to Moor.

A week has been given him in which to reply, and the Italian warship Umbria will fetch the answer of the sultan.

CHAPTER X.

In the garden Roxane waited for her friend. She bent over her embroidery frame and watched the sisters bring the armchair where he was wont to sit beside her.

"He's late," she said. "What can it be? My faithful 'Court Gazette' behind his time after so many years? The portress keeps him—preaching how to save his soul. Ah, yes, that must be it!"

She played with her needle, scanned the sky, mused, smiling, on his goodness to her, fumbled in her workbag for her thimble, frowned at her pattern, tapped her foot impatiently, then resolved to work and began her stitching. Still the minutes dragged by, and he did not appear.

"M. de Bergerac," at last announced a little sister, coming up behind her.

"At last," said Roxane. She did not turn or raise her eyes. Some faint coquetry even in that she called her friendship bade her play thus with him. Besides his coming was the punctual coming of the sun, and she took it with the same calm habit. She searched among her silks as she spoke to him.

Cyrano's face was very white. He had walked toward her stiffly, as one holds himself who fears to fall. Each step was taken with a pulling at the legs. His hat, jammed low upon his face, concealed a bandage round his head.

"I was staid," he apologized in a voice he could control with difficulty, "by a most unwelcome visitor." He spoke jokingly and with assumed playfulness, but he seemed to wrench the words out from his chest by jerks, as he had pulled himself along to where she sat.

"Some creditor?" said Roxane lightly.

"The last creditor who has a debt to collect from me!"

"Ah, fortunate man, so nearly clear of debt! And is it paid?"

"Not yet. I bade him wait. I said I had a rendezvous which nothing should defer. I told him to call again in just an hour."

"A creditor can always wait," said Roxane airily. "You shall not leave me until twilight time. But what's the matter? You have not teased Sister Martha?"

Sister Martha was walking by. Cyrano called to her. Then he rages at her with burlesqued fury for her so called preaching at him. But his teasing lacked its old ring, and suddenly he said:

"Listen, sister! I give you leave to pray for me tonight at chapel time."

"I have not waited your permission to pray for you," said she, smiling, and walked on. A light breeze causes the yellow leaves to come showering down. Cyrano watched Roxane's fingers over her embroidery.

"I'll never see it finished," he said.

"Ah! I knew that time worn jest would come," laughed Roxane. Then a silence fell between them, broken only by the swirling of the leaves.

"My 'Court Gazette' seems dull today," she ventured finally.

With a great effort Cyrano forces back his faintness. "Ah, yes, to be sure," he laughed. "Well, listen. On Saturday, the 19th, having eaten to excess of peach preserves, the king felt feverish, but the doctor, with his lancet, soon quelled the treasonable revolt. The august pulse now beats normal. At the queen's ball on Sunday thirtyscore of the very best white wax tapers were burned up. Our troops, they say, have chased the Austrians. Four sorcerers were hanged. The little dog of Mme. d'Athis took a dose"—

"M. de Bergerac!" cried Roxane, with mock sternness, "I bid you hold your tongue, sir!"

"Monday," went on Cyrano, growing whiter and whiter, "not much took place. Claire changed protectors. Tuesday the court repaired to Fontainebleau. Wednesday the Montglat said to Comte de Fiesque"—

But suddenly his eyes close; his voice breaks, and his head falls forward. He had fainted in his chair. In alarm Roxane ran toward him.

"It's nothing," he said, recovering himself. "My old wound—got at Arras—it still troubles me." He smiles with an effort.

"Ah, both of us were wounded there, and both still bear the marks of our hurt," said Roxane. "I have his letter still above my heart."

"You said that some day I should read it."

"And so you shall today. See, here it is, hung in this bag. Open it and read."

"I have your leave to read it now?" he asked, holding it tenderly with a queer smile about the corners of his ashy lips.

"I should like to hear you read it," she said softly.

The smile deepened, but it was not all a smile. It was a long regret, a memory and an adoration blent in one look. He opened it and looked on Christian's last words to his wife.

On Cyrano's face the tender light deepened. Roxane watched him with a curious eagerness. From the chapel came the full notes of the organ. The purple twilight began to gloom among the golden tinted leaves.

"Roxane, farewell!" read he in a voice that pulsed with feeling. Then he repeated it:

"Roxane, farewell! Death waits for me—
This very night he claims me, dear,
And all my soul, bowed with the weight
Of love untold, feels him draw near."

"How you read it!" cried Roxane. But Cyrano did not hear. He was reading with his heart, full of the stored love of years:

"I die. I never more shall watch
With wistful eyes the quiet grace
With which you move your hand to brush
Your little curls or touch your face."

The purple deepened into black about them. Roxane waited. Still he read on:

"I cry to you, my dear, my sweet!
Not once has my heart swerved, my own.
And I am he who now—and then—
Beyond the stars—is yours alone."

His voice rang out, triumphant, glorious. The letter rested in his hand. Roxane touched him. It had come to her like a great revelation.

"You read the letter you had never seen, and look—it is too dark to see!"

"Roxane!" he cried, with a great start.

laugh and chat. Ah, blind that I was! I should have known, I should have felt your voice each time he spoke my name!"

"Roxane!" cried Cyrano again, past all other speech.

"Those words of fire and honey dew—all yours, all yours! The voice that thrilled my jasmine vine to me—yours, yours! Your soul, your soul in everything!"

"Indeed, indeed it is not so," protested he. "It was your husband."

"You loved me!" cried Roxane.

"I loved you not!"

"See how you falter!"

"No, no, my dear! I swear I never loved you."

"Your letter and your tears I've worn above my heart—the letter every word of which was yours."

"But all the blood stains his."

"Why did you keep such silence? Why?" begged Roxane.

Cyrano hesitated, and while she looked to him for answer through the gates there broke Ragueneau and Le Bret.

"Madman!" cried Le Bret. "Ah, madame, pardon me, but he has courted death by coming here."

"True!" laughed Cyrano. "I forgot. The chronicle was never finished. Here is an item—'On Saturday at dinner time the assassination of De Bergerac.' Mark you my bandages!"

He took his hat off, and for the first time Roxane saw the bandaged head. Half wild, she begged for enlightenment.

"All that I asked or hoped," said Cyrano, "was but to die a hero's death—'a point upon my lip, a point within my heart.' And see! I am struck down by a footman from the rear. Mocked even in death! There, Ragueneau! Why weep you so? Come, come! What is it you do now?"

"I trimmed the lights for Moliere's stage," sobbed Ragueneau, "but I'll do so no more; but yesterday he brought on 'Scapin'—and a whole scene was yours—the one beginning 'Que diable allait—il faire.' Ah! How they laughed!"

"That was life," said Cyrano. "To be the one who prompted them and whom they all forget. Roxane, do you recall the night when Christian talked to you beneath your balcony? Ah, well! That was the story of my whole life there. While I stood low, deep in the shadow, the others climbed to snatch the kiss of glory. 'Tis justice, and here upon my grave's dim sill I approve it. Moliere's genius, Christian's beauty."

Down the chapel alleyway the sisters, darkly seen through the afterglow, walked. The chapel bell rang.

"Sister!" cried Roxane, starting toward them.

"Nay!" pleaded Cyrano. "Do not go for any one. When you came back, I should be gone. Listen! The organ plays!"

"I love you!" cried Roxane. "Live, live for me!"

"Nay!" smiled Cyrano sadly. "In fairy tales alone do the ill starred grow beautiful when at the end the lady says, 'I love you!' I, you see, am the same up to the last!"

"I made your misery. I—I"—

"You made my happiness. I never knew the sweetness of a woman's love. My mother could not find me fair. I never had a sister. Later I feared a mistress would but mock at me. But I have had a friend. Grace to you, a woman's robe has fluttered in my life!"

"I loved but once," cried Roxane, "yet twice I must lose my love!"

The moon came up through the branches. Cyrano looked at it, but Roxane looked on him.

"Tonight" he smiled with whimsical remembrance, "I'll make my lunar trip with no projectile's aid. There they will send me for my paradise. More than one soul I have loved is there in exile. I shall find again—Galileo, Socrates— Come, come, you weep! Le Bret, you used to scold me. What? Ah, yes! Cadets of Gascony are there! Copernicus has said"—

"Oh," wailed Roxane, "I cannot bear it!"

"Mais que diable allait—il faire en cette galire?" he raved on.

"Philosopher, physician, versifier and musician. Made an aerial expedition and many famous duels fought. Lover, too—after a fashion. Here lies Hercule Savinien de Cyrano de Bergerac—a bit of everything, yet naught!"

He fell exhausted in his chair. He raised his eyes to Roxane and seemed again himself.

"Be not less faithful to his memory," he said, "but wear your weeds for two."

"I swear it."

His glazing eyes were fixed upon the trees. He started to his feet. They rushed to hold him, but he waved them back.

"It comes," he said. "I feel my feet shod with marble, my hands gloved heavily with lead. But not here, sitting—no, standing, standing to the last, let me meet him—standing and sword in hand!" The old soldier raised his weapon defiantly.

"Cyrano!" cried Roxane, half fainting. But he did not hear her. His eyes were still fixed straight ahead.

"He looks upon my nose! The impudent! What's that you say? It's useless? Ah, I know it. But no one fights for mere success. No, no! It is more beautiful because it's fruitless. Who are you, there, you thousands? I know you, every one. All my old enemies. Ah, Falsehood, there! Have at you! Have at you!"—his sword was aimed at the shadows. "And you, old Compromise? And Prejudice and Treachery! See how I strike you! Treat with you? Never! And you there, too, Folly, you? I always knew that at the end you'd throw me to the earth. What matters it? I fight, I fight, I fight you still!"

They watched him strike at his old foes, the few who loved him, seeing him moment by moment growing weaker. He stopped, breathless. Then, after a pause, he went on:

"Yes, you have snatched from me the laurel and the rose. Take all! In spite of you there is one thing, one thing, I bear, and when tonight I enter into heaven and make obeisance at the threshold, one thing without a crease—without a stain—I bear away with me in spite of you."

In the moonlight they strained their eyes to see him. They listened, holding their breath for the last word.

"And that—and that?" whispered Roxane.

He fell back into Le Bret's outstretched arms. His sword falls from his hand. But through the blue and silver of the night she saw his smile. She bent over him. She kissed his forehead. She whispered once again:

"And that?"

"And that," he answered, smiling into her eyes, "is my soldier's plume, unstained."

THE END.

Revenues of the City of London.

Limited as is the extent of the ancient city of London, its revenues are on a vast and lordly scale. An abstract account of the produce and expenditure of the city's estate—commonly called "city's cash"—for the year ending Dec. 31, 1897, showed that the receipts amounted to £1,015,257 14s. 5½d. The expenditure amounted to £1,004,048 9s. 7d. The accounts form a printed volume of 323 pages.—Household Words.

Literally Made Him Eat His Words.

"While I was at Moscow," writes a traveller, "a volume was published in favor of the liberty of the people. In this book the iniquitous conduct of the public functionaries and even of the sovereign were censured severely. The book created great indignation, and the offender was at once taken into custody. After being tried in a summary way, he was condemned to eat his own words. A seaffold was erected in a public square, the imperial provost, the magistrates and the physicians of the Czar attending; the book was separated from the binding, and the margin cut off. The author was then served, leaf by leaf, by the provost, and was obliged to swallow this unpalatable stuff on pain of the knout, more feared in Russia than death. As soon as the medical gentlemen were of the opinion that he had eaten as much as he could with safety, the transgressor was returned to prison. This punishment was renewed the following days until, after several hearty meals, every leaf of the book was actually swallowed."—Detroit Free Press.

Cattle Used for Smuggling Opium.

"Some of the shrewdest tricks ever played are by the smugglers of opium," said H. A. Fanning, of Seattle. "A very unique smuggling scheme was unearthed a few years ago by United States Secret Service officers in North Dakota. It was noticed that an unusually large number of cattle were being driven across the line to the North Dakota markets, and the Secret Service men planned an investigation. For some time their work was in vain, and they had about given up hope of discovering any unlawful operations when an accident revealed the fact that the nostrils of the cattle were stuffed with opium wrapped carefully in tin foil. In this way each steer was worth twice its normal value. Hundreds upon hundreds of animals had been driven across the border with their nostrils loaded with opium, and it was estimated that the smugglers had cleaned up a profit of $25,000 before the discovery was made. But the smugglers were sly and they escaped and were never captured."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EDMOND ROSTAND.

Edmond Rostand, the Parisian playwright, who has suddenly shed the light of his genius over the entire world, is still a young man. At the age of 31 he has stepped forward and swept D'Ennery, Scribe and Sardou aside as literary flies. Fame and fortune came to him veritably in one night, for it was his dramatization of the life of Cyrano de Bergerac which placed him at once among the foremost French dramatists. Before the production of his "Cyrano" in Paris M. Rostand was known as the author of three insignificant plays, none of them revealing the power which he was to show in his latest production. When M. Rostand was but 20 years of age, "Le Gant Rouge," his first play, was performed at the Theatre Cluny in Paris, but with little success. Six years later his "Les Romanesques" was acted at the Theatre Francaise. About the same time, too, Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt appeared in an overetherealized romantic drama, entitled "La Princesse Leontaine," and made very little impression on dramatic Paris. M. Rostand persevered, however, and wrote a second play for Mlle. Bernhardt, which was received with considerable favor. This was "La Samaritaine."

Then came "Cyrano." Coquelin took the title role, and after its first performance its author was given the cross of the Legion of Honor. Parisian critics said that a peer of Victor Hugo had at last been found. A quarter of a million copies of the drama were quickly snatched up by eager Parisians. The play was taken to the provinces, then to England, where its initial success was repeated. Certain English critics even affirmed that "Cyrano" was equal to the best work of Corneille, Racine and Moliere. The success of the play in America is already well known.

M. Rostand is at present in Vienna collecting material for a new drama, which is being written under contract for Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt. His profession, by the way, was never a necessity to the young playwright, as his family is both wealthy and distinguished. Not long ago he married Mlle. Rosemonde Lee, a poetess, who takes a great interest in all her husband's work, and revised for him the proofsheets of "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Sensation and Pain.

Sensation is really a mental impression or special state of consciousness, resulting from the application of an external stimulus acting under normal conditions and therefore mostly pleasurable.

Pain, on the other hand, is a physical state resulting from injury to and consequent change in the material tissues affected.

Thus the pressure of the hand in love or friendship is a normal stimulus giving rise to corresponding mental emotions, while the crushing grasp of a strong hand upon a weaker dislocates the nerves, muscles and bones and induces pain.

Warmth and burning, coolness and freezing, cheerful light and an intolerable glare are a few of the many other illustrations that will suggest themselves on consideration of the subject.

The Burmese.

The Burmese will sacrifice any prospect of money making to go to a feast. These are called pives, and often the entertainment is elaborate. I remember going to one in upper Burma. There was a good deal of dancing, but neither the host nor his guests danced; that would have been undignified. The dancers were paid, and they twirled lazily or jumped excitedly as occasion required. Most of the time, however, was spent in chatter and smoking. Smoking is the only thing at which the Burmese are industrious. They start smoking at the early age of 3, and they smoke themselves into the next world. Girls smoke quite as arduously as the men, and as the cigars are very big many a pretty mouth is strained to accommodate a giant cheroot.—Pall Mall Magazine.

Night Scenes at Oxford.

Not rarely in going by night through the deserted quads one may hear the exclamation, accompanied by the rattle of a spinning ball, loudly telling that "rien ne va plus." Then may he who pauses know that in the room is going on a game of roulette, and, if he be in the mood for excitement, thither will he bend his steps, climbing up the dark stairs to the place where men are gambling. Take your seat, a cigarette, your tumbler of whisky and soda. Now, then, "Stakes, gentlemen, please." The room is hushed into silence, broken only by the ring of coins on the table, as the ball begins to spin. What is it to be, red or black?—Oxford University Isis.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

The Alis second team went to Bayonne yesterday afternoon and played the Bergen Point Field Club on the N. J. A. C. grounds. The game was played in vast mud. Woltman scored a touchdown for the Alis team. The goal was kicked. Alis won 6 to 0.

Despite the mud and rain, the members of the Plainfield eleven turned out yesterday morning prepared to meet the San Remos of the New York Athletic Club in a match game. At the last moment a telegram arrived stating that the San Remos could not come. A scrub game was then played, seven men on a side. T. U. Smith made a run during the game rivalling that of Poe's famous sprint in the Yale-Princeton game. H picked up the ball on a fumble on one goal line and ran through the slush clear to the other goal.

WHIST

Last Wednesday evening the Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club team came to Plainfield and played a match with the team from the Park Club for the championship of the Central Division of the New Jersey Whist Association. The home team lost the match by three points. The visitors made nine tricks, while the Parks were only able to make six tricks. The playing throughout was close and exciting, and it was not until the last round was played that the vistors could be picked. This is the first game that the Parks have lost, and they stand a good show of being near the top at the windup. The visiting team was composed of Messrs. Roberts, Brown, Edison and Laing. The Park Club team was F. H. Freeman, Peter B. Matthews, A. E. Woltman and A. F. Freeman.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The Bound Brook bowling team will roll a game with the team from the Plainfield Catholic Club next Monday evening in this city.

There was an interesting bowling game yesterday at the Plainfield Catholic Club when the married and single members contested for the honors. The married men were captained by Thomas Cumerford, and they made a score of 1449. The single men had for their captain Mr. Moran, and their score was 1325.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

The Burrill company played to full houses at Music Hall yesterday afternoon and evening, and gave satisfaction in their treatment of the pieces produced. Tonight the attraction is the stirling old piece, made famous by Joseph Jefferson, "Rip Van Winckle." Tomorrow night the engagement will end with "Nobody's Daughter."

* * * * *

The attraction at Music Hall Tuesday night of next week will be the presentation of the famous American comedy, "The Nancy Hanks." The story of the play involves the life of a popular actor, a lively and extremely pretty actress, a worldly man, a marquis in hard luck, a new woman and several other characters.

"The Nancy Hanks" will be found by the audience not to be the famous racehorse of that name, but a gold mine that is supposed to exist only on paper, but which turns out fabulously rich. It is a comedy presenting many amusing situations, at all times humorous, merry in its conceits, rollicking in its actions, and brilliant in the art of repartee, which finds utterance in the dialogue of the play.

—Winter clothing! How timely and welcome is the sentence. Biting weather, with snow on the ground, means that unless you are well clothed you will suffer. Perhaps your stock of cash is limited. If so, don't worry. It don't require a fortune to be comfortably clothed in Plainfield. A little money will fix you out stylishly and comfortably at Weinberger's clothing store, next to Music Hall. THE FLAG THAT TRIPPED BOOTH.

Grand Army of the Republic Wants It in the National Museum.

Removal from one room in the Treasury Building to another of the flag which tripped John Wilkes Booth and caused him to fall and break his leg the night he shot Abraham Lincoln has raised the question as to the proper disposition of that famous bit of bunting. Grand Army of the Republic men want it sent to the National Museum, where it can be properly taken care of. It is one of the most interesting historic relics in the country, and should be carefully preserved. The flag happens to be in the Treasury Department because it was presented to the Treasury Light Guard along with another in 1864 by the women of the Department. This banner guard was of good use when Jubal Early was threatening the Capital, but it did not have any fighting to do.

April 12, 1865, two nights before the assassination of President Lincoln, the Treasury Guard gave an entertainment at Ford's Theatre for charitable purposes. The theatre was beautifully decorated. On the boxes occupied two nights later by President Lincoln and the White House party were the two flags mentioned. They gave the boxes such a prettty appearance that the manager of the theatre requested that the flags be allowed to remain until the night of the 14th, when the President was expected to be in attendance at a play. The request was granted, and on the arrival of the President at the theatre the fatal night he commented with pleasure on the decorations, and expressed admiration for the flag which hangs in the Treasury. In jumping from the box after the shooting the President to the stage below, one of the spurs on Booth's boot caught in the folds of the flag, causing him to lose his balance and fall, thereby breaking his leg. The rent in the flag is shown to visitors, and has been on exhibition for years.—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

WILLIAM'S COSTLY PRESENT.

The Emperor Displayed Great Taste in Designing.

Kaiser Wilhelm, Emperor of Germany, has started a fad in jewelry which promises to become universal. He wished to make the Empress a rich present recently, and could find nothing in stock lines of gems and manufactured jewelry to suit his fancy. So this man of ideas put his wits to work and originated a brand new design in the shape of a novel bracelet, or "arm-band," as the Germans call it.

The bracelet is one of the most costly as well as novel articles of its kind ever made. It is a jewelled miniature art gallery. The Emperor had miniature portraits painted of each of his six boys, his five-year-old daughter and himself, and, connected by wreaths of diamonds and bands of gold, these were made into a bracelet for the Empress.

All of the paintings are oval excepting that of the Emperor, which is heart shape and hangs as a pendant below the painting of little Victoria Louise, who holds the position of honor, with three brothers on each side. The pictures of August Wilhelm, Adalbert and Eitel Frederick are on the right, and those of Crown Prince Wilhelm, Oscar and Joachim on the left.

The bracelet is set with 253 of the finest diamonds that could be procured. The German jewellers and miniature painters are busy now making bracelets after this design, and the fad has extended to necklaces, especially where families are so large that to get portraits of all the children in a row would make a bracelet too long to be worn.—New York World.

Dog Can Tell Time by the Clock.

Carlo, a half spaniel, is the property of Walter W. Hunt, a newsdeader, of Auburn, N. Y., and is only two years old. His specialty is telling the time of day by the town clock.

"I want you to run up street, Carlo look at the town clock and return here again in just fifteen minutes," said Mr. Hunt the other day in the presence of several men.

Carlo trotted up street and at the expiration of just fifteen minutes had returned. He was sent out again with instructions to return in half an hour. One of the men present followed him to watch his actions. The dog went up State street to a point where he could see the clock and soon engaged in play with several other dogs. The watcher noticed that Carlo frequently glanced in the direction of the clock. Suddenly he stopped short, wagged his tail and started on a run down the street. It lacked two minutes of the appointed time and at the end of that two minutes the dog was back in the store.—New York World.

Edison Brown, formerly night operator at the telephone office, will leave Plainfield Friday for Bristol, Conn., where he has secured a lucrative position in the electrical business.

A HISTORIC ELEPHANT.

Carried the Prince of Wales Through India—Is Sixty Years Old.

There was landed at a London wharf the other day the historical elephant which had the honor of carrying the Prince of Wales during his tour in India. The animal is now over sixty years of age and is an object of interest to many zoologists, owing to the massive frontal development of its skull. It is believed to be the finest specimen of the race in captivity and has displayed some most remarkable traits of intelligence. Its enormous tusks are fully four feet in length and at the end of each a large brass ball, weighing nine pounds, has been fixed. It would appear that the same native attendant had been in charge of the elephant ever since the day on which he carried the Prince of Wales and the Governor General of India. The native Indian attendant, whose name is Thanyo, was by some mistake discharged when the animal was about to be shipped. The elephant, however, missing his old friend, refused to touch any food and was rapidly pining to death, though he did not show any active resentment against those who had charge of him. As soon as Lord George Sanger, the purchaser, was made aware of the fact, he immediately gave his agents instructions to re-employ Thanyo. From that time forth the animal regained his usual good spirits and there was no further trouble with him.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Got Out of Bed to Vote.

Judah P. Benjamin was the first Jew elected to a seat in the American Senate, and the contest was a notable one. Col. W. L. Knox was a member of the Louisiana Legislature, and when the Senatorial fight began he was lying at the point of death at a hotel in Baton Rouge. There was a tie vote in the Legislature. Col. Knox was a great admirer of Benjamin and he determined to break the tie, and send Benjamin to the Senate, even at the cost of his own life. He was placed on a cot, carried to the House of Representatives and when his name was called he voted for Judah P. Benjamin for United States Senator. Amid great excitement and the wildest sort of applause Benjamin was declared elected, and, more dead than alive, Knox was carried to his hotel. He rallied in a few days, and in the course of time recovered his health.—Dallas News.

WHAT MR. LOUNSBURY WILL DO IF ELECTED.

Presents Platform In Letter of Acceptance.

THE CITIZENS' CANDIDATE.

SAYS THERE IS GREAT DISSATISFACTION WITH PRESENT PARTY.

He Would Govern City In Accordance With Wishes of Majority of People—Says Franchises Should Be Granted Sparingly and With Greatest Care—Says Republicans are Hedging.

Fred C. Lounsbury, Citizens' candidate for Mayor, has written the following letter of acceptance:

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 25, 1898.

Messrs. Geo. O. Stevens, Henry Liefke and Chas. C. Burnett, Committee.

Gentlemen—Referring to my nomination to the office of Mayor, by the General Committee of Citizens' of which you notified me yesterday morning, I beg to say that, after careful consideration of the matter, I have decided to accept the proffered honor.

In reaching this conclusion I have been influenced not only by the desire of the public meeting as expressed through your committee, but also by requests made directly to me by many of our citizens from both political parties.

There can be no doubt but that there is considerable dissatisfaction among our people in regard to municipal affairs, not only with those directly responsible for the management of same but quite as much with the "power behind the throne" which at times for the sake of party policy has brought about results contrary to the will of the people. That those in power have recognized the existence of this dissatisfaction, is evident by their recent efforts to "hedge," so far at least as outside appearances are concerned, but the satisfactory element in the present situation is that even with a different engineer and stoker, the machine will remain practically the same.

From a personal standpoint I would say that, as you are well aware, this nomination has come to me entirely unsolicited, and you have not asked, neither have I given, or will give any pledge of any kind which, should I be elected, might hinder in any way the free and unbiased administration of the duties of the office.

It is my contention not only that municipal matters should be handled in accordance with the wishes of the majority of the people but that those in charge should use every available means to satisfy themselves as to what are the actual wishes of the people, and not take their information from any certain set or coterie, no matter how influential that set may be. I am aware that there is a sentiment among certain classes that the people in general do not always know just what is best for them but I am not in sympathy with this view, which belongs to the government by aristocracy, and is contrary to the principles of the Republican form of government under which we as a people enjoy such freedom and prosperity.

The people will undoubtedly make some mistakes, and we all know that rulers do the same, but on the average the people will be found not far out of the way in their views on public matters, and especially is this true in such an enlightened community as that in which we dwell.

Public franchises of all kinds should be granted sparingly and with greatest care, and the interest of the city fully guarded, without making the conditions so onerous as to check the general improvement and growth. Stoppage of growth is stagnation and stagnation is death; we must grow or die and to induce growth must surround ourselves with the elements which make for growth.

Should the majority of the citizens of Plainfield see fit to endorse your action with their votes, it will be my aim to administer the office of Mayor to the best of my ability, in an unbiased and non-partisan spirit and on the broad platform of the greatest amount of good to the greatest number of people.

Thanking you and the general committee which you represent, for the honor you have conferred upon me, I remain. Very respectfully yours,

Fred C Lounsbury.

CHICKENS IN COURT.

THEIR PERFORMANCES CAUSE TROUBLE BETWEEN NEIGHBORS.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, November 26—A few innocent chickens caused a feud to spring between two neighbors here last summer which finally culminated yesterday in a suit before Justice Storms for damages. The two neighbors are Clarence Hallett and Fred Crouse. Crouse owns the chickens, handsome pullets, some of them are, black and white and all colors, and just like chickens in general, always ready to skip through a hole in the fence and scratch up a neighbor's garden or flower beds.

That is what these chickers are alleged to have done to Hallett's garden last summer. Hallett says the birds played havoc with his garden, dug up his turnips and radishes, picked his ripe strawberries off the vines, took dust baths under his currant bushes, and had a good time in general.

Through William Newcorn, of Plainfield, Hallett brought suit against Crouse, and the case came to trial yesterday afternoon. One of the parties demanded a jury, but the jury couldn't agree on the verdict, so at 8:30 o'clock they were discharged. They stood 9 to 3 in favor of Hallett.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER MARRIED.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Roselle, Nov. 26—The marriage of Miss Florence Moore, of this place, to Clarence Johnson, of New York, but formerly of Plainfield, took place last Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Elliott, pastor of the M. E. church, of this place. John and Alexander Johnson, brothers of the groom, stood up with the bridal party. There were present about fifty guests including relatives and friends of the groom from Plainfield. Following the wedding a reception was held and early in the evening the happy couple left to enjoy a honeymoon trip. On their return they will reside in Roselle, where the groom is building a handsome residence. The groom is now employed at 43 John street, New York, and is engaged in furnishing shipping supplies. His many friends will wish both him and his bride a long life and a successful one.

Privacy for Women Witnesses.

Somerville, Nov. 26.—The Board of Freeholders will hold a meeting at the Court House Tuesday to see what changes can be made to the rooms upstairs in that building. Complaints have been made that female witnesses called by the Grand Jury, have no place to wait, where they can have any privacy. The Board will see if some alterations cannot be made.

A Hundred New Members.

Next Friday will be red letter day in the history of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men. At the meeting last evening thirty five more applications for membership were received making 89 in all. A special dispensation will be secured allowing another meeting Thursday night when sufficient applications will be received to bring to total number up to an even hundred.

TROLLEY TO METUCHEN IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

Necessary Consents Secured For the New Road.

WILL CONNECT WITH BRUNSWICK TRACTION COMPANY.

The Trolley Line Will Start On Prospect Avenue and Pass Out Through Woodland Avenue, Passing the Crescent Oval, the Hillside Golf Links and the Gentlemen's Driving Park.

Several years ago, when the extension of the trolley roads through the suburban districts was first considered and the line connecting New York and Philadelphia suggested, it was said that it would only be a question of a few years before the square formed by Plainfield, Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Metuchen was connected by trolley lines. Part of that prediction has come to pass and the gong of the trolley car can be heard on three sides of the square. The remaining side, from Plainfield to Metuchen, has for some time been considered a good territory, but no active measures have, until recently, been taken to put such a plan through. For over a month, however, there has been a quiet effort to secure the necessary consents for a trolley line between the places mentioned. That has now been practically accomplished.

The necessary capital has been interested in the scheme and all that was lacked was the permission of the Freeholders and local governing bodies to lay the tracks and the permission of the property owners to allow them to pass in front of their property. These latter have been striven for and are now secured from Plainfield to Oak Tree and for a portion of the remainder of the way to Metuchen. F. M. Bacon, of this city, has been working early and late to get the consents and his efforts have met with success.

It is generally conceded that a trolley is much needed in the very section that this company proposes to operate. The line, as proposed, will start in this city on Prospect avenue and run east to Woodland avenue. There the line will swing to the south and follow that thoroughfare out by the Crescent Oval, the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the track of the Plainfield Driving Association.

At Avon Park, where Woodland avenue ends, the trolley line will swing to the left and follow the road to Mount Pleasant connecting with the back road to Oak Tree and thence to that settlement. On leaving Oak Tree, the line will take the regular Oak Tree road leading past Pumptown, under the Port Reading railroad and connecting with the lines of the Brunswick Traction Company at Metuchen.

From Metuchen it is the intention of those behind this plan to extend their lines out to Iselin, thence to Woodbridge, there connecting with Boynton Beach, Rahway and so on to Elizabeth, Newark, the Oranges and finally Jersey City and the New York ferries.

No company has yet been incorporated which will control this line. The necessary capital is promised and, if there is no unexpected obstacle, the company will soon be organized. It is claimed that it is an entirely independent organization from the other trolley companies in this vicinity. They claim that there is no alliance, as yet, with the Brunswick Traction Company. It seems likely, however, that a satisfactory agreement will be made with that company, even if it does not pass into their hands altogether.

On Prospect avenue, the single track will be run in the middle of the road way. The property-owners along Woodland avenue realize that that thoroughfare is narrow and they have all agreed to widen it to the regulation sixty six feet. There, it is expected, the trolley track will be placed on one side of the road Part of the way to Metuchen it may be necessary to purchase a strip of land parallel with the road and run the tracks there.

There is a very strong sentiment in favor of a trolley line through that section, and it will not be difficult for the trolley company and the Common Council to come to terms While Prospect avenue is some distance out from the centre of the city, it will probably only be a question of a little time before proper connection is made with the centre of the city.

The name of the proposed company will be the Plainfield and Metuchen Street Railway Company.

MADE HER DEBUT IN SOCIAL WHIRL.

The Coming Out Party of Miss Helen Frances Bushnell.

VERY DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

MISS BUSHNELL WAS ASSISTED BY A NUMBER OF FRIENDS.

Mr. Bushnell's Residence Was Very Handsomely Decorated for the Event—Pink and White the Prevailing Colors—Effect Charming—Jolly House Party Will Remain for a Few Days

Last night Miss Helen Frances Bushnell, daughter of John Bushnell, made her formal debut into Plainfield society at a charming social event held at the handsome residence of her parents on Central avenue. The affair was one of the first of the social events of the season.

The hostess, wearing a gown of white silk, received the guests assisted by Miss Louise Porter, of Ottewa, Illinois; Miss Edith Johnson, of Washington, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Nancy Lawson, Miss Mary Bushnell, Miss Jessie Bushnell, Miss Lowe, Miss Bushnell, Miss Lulu Holly and Miss Ethel VanBoskerck, all of this city.

The parlors, hall and stairway were prettily decorated with smilax, roses, chrysanthemums and potted plants. In one corner of the reception hall the musicians were hidden behind a green screen of palms and ferns. The front parlor was set off with great bunches of pink and white roses, and the open fire place was hidden by bunches of large yellow and white chrysanthemums. The prevailing colors were pink and white.

Davis, of Newark, was the caterer and also furnished the music. There were about 300 guests present, among them being a number of out of town people. Three college men, Fred Scott, 1900, of Princeton, Bascom Johnson, of Yale, and Ernest Mulford, of Elizabeth, a Harvard man, make up a jolly house party who will remain for a few days after the party.

ANNUAL INSPECTION.

Winfield Scott Relief Corps Did Very Satisfactory Work.

The annual inspection of Winfield Scott Relief Corps, No. 10, took place last evening in the rooms on East Front street. There was a large attendance of the members. Mrs. McCauley, of Paterson, Department President of the Corps, was present and inspected the corps. The work was performed in a highly commendable manner and Mrs. McCauley commented favorably upon it. After the work and routine business a number of excellent remarks were made by the Deparment President, and Mrs. Jennie Atwood, of Trenton, who is a member of the Corps, also by the officers and members of the corps.

Didn't Know of the Attachment.

In yesterday's issue of The Daily Press, it was stated that the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company got out an attachment, through Codington & Swackhamer, against the goods belonging to Max Wiertz, the Sixth street caterer. This was an error as it has since been learned that Messrs. Codington & Swackhamer knew nothing of the attachment proceedings until after they had been completed and a levy had been made by the Constable upon defendant's goods.

LAWYERS HONORED THE DEPARTED JUDGE.

Plainfield Bar Association Passed Suitable Resolutions.

WILL ATTEND FUNERAL.

LOCAL AND UNION COUNTY LAWYERS WILL ATTEND IN A BODY.

Met Yesterday Afternoon at the Office of H. C. Runyon—Many Tributes Paid to the Late Judge By His Associates—Resolutions Passed—J. B. Coward Was Chairman of the Meeting.

The feelings of regret and tender sympathy regarding the death of City Judge George W. DeMeza, were eloquently expressed at a meeting of the Plainfield lawyers held yesterday afternoon in the offices of Lawyer Harry C. Runyon in the Babcock building. The following members of the Plainfield Bar were present; J. B. Coward, Craig Adams Marsh, William R. Codington, William A. Coddington, Charles A. Reed, William M. Stillman, William N. Runyon, Walter L. Hetfield, Charles J. McNabb, S. S. Swackhamer, Frank J. Blatz, George Bird, Charles L. Moffett, Isaac P. Runyon and J. P. D. Kirch.

Joseph B. Coward was made chairman of the meeting and, on a motion offered by Mr. Marsh, a committee, consisting of Wm. N. Runyon, Wm. M. Stillman and Mr. Marsh, was appointed to draft suitable resolutions the same to be sent to the family of the deceased and published in the local papers.

The resolutions will be found in another part of The Daily Press, and they fully express the feelings of the Plainfield lawyers for their late brother.

Harry C. Runyon, who was chosen secretary of the meeting, read a communication from A. M. Runyon & Son, which stated that seats would be reserved at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow for the lawyers who will attend the funeral services. This communication was received and a motion was made that the lawyers attend in a body. They will meet at Mr. Runyon's offices in the Babcock building tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and a committee, consisting of Walter L Hetfield and Nelson Runyon, will meet the members of the Union County Bar at the North Avenue station on the arrival of the 2 o'clock train to escort them to the general meeting place.

W. R. Codington, who attended the meeting of the Union County Bar at Elizabeth yesterday morning, stated that a committee, consisting of Chas. A. Reed, H. C. Runyon, E. M. Wood, James Connolly and W. R. Codington, was appointed to draft resolutions which would be presented at the next term of Court, and that the same would be spread upon the minutes. He also stated that the members of the Bar expect to attend the funeral services of the late Judge DeMeza in a body.

The resolutions presented by the Plainfield lawyers were adopted by a rising vote, after which Mr. Marsh arose and stated that he could not let such an opportunity pass without saying something regarding Judge DeMeza. He said that Judge DeMeza had a high ideal of what constitutes a true lawyer, and always believed that dignity should be added to the profession. Early in his career he thoroughly mastered the idea that a lawyer's profession is not a trade and whenever the occasion offered he expressed it. He possessed a modesty in approaching older members of the Bar that always won for him any assistance that he required. As a man, he deserved great credit for his treatment of his brothers and the other members of the family. Mr. Marsh stated that he knew Judge DeMeza in young and humble life, when he brought wood to his door, when he was employed at the business house of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., and he never ceased to wonder at his remarkable progress, the result of pure grit. Mr. Marsh also spoke of Judge DeMeza's kindness in and out of business, and said that his sudden taking off was a shock to all. He then paid a tribute to the memory of the late Mr. Suydam and Mr. Jackson, honored members of the Plainfield Bar.

Mr. Marsh was followed by Senator Reed, who endorsed the former's remarks and also paid rich tribute to the departed. He said that Mr. DeMeza was a very likable fellow, that there was nothing mean or tricky about him. His heart was of the right sort and he won many friends because of his kindly and genial dis-

MAYOR IN CITY COURT.

DIDN'T FIND ANYTHING STARTLING THIS MORNING.

He Dealt Out Justice With a Lenient Hand to the Few Offenders Arraigned—Reckless Drivers Were Not Fined.

The sessions of the City Court were resumed this morning, Mayor Charles J. Fisk presiding. The Mayor did not find anything particularly startling to cope with. C. V. D Corle, N. B. Smalley and Wm. Baldwin, who were found guilty of reckless driving by Judge DeMeza last Saturday, came up for sentence. His Honor delivered a long lecture on the subject of fast driving. Then he told the trio to go forth and sin no more, that they were forgiven this time.

Patrick Gannon and John Brennon were haled before His Honor on the charge of being disorderly on Liberty street last Sunday. There was nothing very wicked that they had done and the Mayor suspended sentence. They were arrested by Special Officer Mattox.

Frank Hand, who was accused of punching the features of one James White, was discharged.

TEN YEARS' HISTORY OF ENDEAVOR LIFE.

REV. DR. BRETT PRESENT.

FORMER PRESIDENTS TELL OF THE GROWTH OF THE SOCIETY.

Miss Hawkins Told History of the First Five Years—Miss Myra Runyon Sketched the Happenings of the Last Half of the Decade—Report of Treasurer by Miss Cuming—Dr. Brett's Talk.

The tenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last night. The exercises consisted of the reading of reports of the work done during the ten years just passed, an address by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, president of the State Union, and letters from past presidents who were unable to be present.

On the platform of the pulpit sat the president, Mrs. W. S Lowry; Rev. J. W. Richardson, Rev. Dr. Brett, E. E. Anthony, Mrs. D. M. Runyon, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Emma V. Fish, the three last former presidents; Miss Anna Wyckoff, vice president, Miss Myra Runyon, secretary, and Miss Henriett Cuming, treasurer.

Mrs. Lowry, the president, had charge of the exercises, which opened with a song service led by a volunteer choir. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, read the lesson, and Mr. Anthony led in prayer.

An interesting part of the exercises was the reading of reports of the ten years' work. Miss Forence G. Hawkins took the first five years from the organization of the society, November 23d, 1888, when twelve young people of the Young People's Society got together and concluded that they could do better work as a Christian Endeavor than as a Young People's Society. During the five years the membership increased to 54, a gain of 42. But in the way of prayer and personal testimony they had increased five times as much.

During the first five years the members engaged in all the work of the society, interested themselves in foreign and home missionary work, and supplied two of the barber shops of the city with religious literature.

Miss Myra Runyon told about what had been done during the last five years. The members of the society remain about the same. Several new ones have been added, but to offset this others have gone away, and at present there are 44 active members and 5 associate members of the society. There are also a few honorary members, consisting of the deacons and a few others.

Four of the past presidents were not able to be present, so sent letters which were read by the secretary, Miss Myra Runyon. These letters were from Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, of North Hampton, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. D. W. C. Skadin, of Minneapolis, Minn., and A. D. VanSciver, who is in New York State.

Miss Cuming, the treasurer, read a financial report extending over a period of eight years, the records of the first two years having been mislaid. The reports showed that $861.29 had been raised through the general fund, $8 8.46 expended, leaving a balance, November 25th, of $2 83. Through the missionary fund $537.48 had been raised, the expenditures were $517.86, balance $19 62.

Dr. Brett's topic was "The Relation of the Christian Endeavor Society to the Local Church," and was a bright, interesting address, full of encouragement to the Endeavorers. Miss Charlotte Messeramith sang a solo during the services, and Arthur Mosher assisted the choir with his violin. The evening closed with a sociable in one of the upper rooms at which refreshments were served.

LAYING ELECTRIC LIGHT CONDUITS.

Work Pushed Rapidly and Trenches Will be Leveled Tonight.

Work on the electric light wire trenches has not been pushed very rapidly this week, and so far the men have only dug the trenches and laid the pipes from Front street a little above Second street. But in this short space the work has been done thoroughly, so that where the trenches have been dug up the pipes have all been laid, and the trenches covered.

Today Patsy Christmas, the contractor, is digging across Front street. By night this section of the streets will be finished, and the trenches covered from Front to Second streets. Tomorrow they will be level, and there will be nothing to impede travel through those streets.

FEW CARE TO WITNESS

Commission Will Not Hear of the Regimental Quarrels.

INQUIRY WILL SOON END

What is Wanted Is Testimony Regarding Negligence, Carelessness or Unmilitary Conduct. Says Son's Death Was Due to Inattention on the Part of Some One.

New York, Nov. 26.—Internal troubles of the Seventy-first regiment are not to be considered by the war investigating committee, which convened again at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday after a recess since Wednesday.

Before the session was called to order General Anson G. McCook, talking to several Seventy-first men who had come to offer their testimony, said no witnesses were desired unless they could tell of negligence, carelessness or unmilitary conduct of some kind on the part of officers connected with the war or campaign. Any attempt to talk about regimental difficulties, according to General McCook, will promptly be suppressed.

Fifteen persons, mostly professional men, had volunteered to give testimony, but when the session was called to order at half past nine o'clock none of them was present.

The commission, for this reason, consented to hear Daniel McKeever, a lawyer, at No. 120 Broadway, whose son, E. Percy McKeever, Company K, Seventy-first regiment, died of typhoid fever at Mount Sinai Hospital.

Mr. McKeever says his son, who was twenty-one years old, was brought from Santiago on a transport while ill with typhoid fever, and that he was unable to eat the regular rations given him on the vessel.

The boy was taken to Camp Wikoff, where Mr. McKeever went to see him on August 20. He found his son, but was not allowed to go near him, nor was he able to procure a furlough for him.

When he returned on August 26, Mr. McKeever says, a colored guard, after consulting Dr. Cronin, the hospital surgeon in charge, told him no such person as McKeever was in the hospital.

Unwilling to be put off in that way, the father sent the guard back to the surgeon. Just as both returned and gave the same answer, some one raised the flap of a tent, Mr. McKeever says, and asked for whom he was looking.

When he answered he was told that his son was in that very tent. Mr. McKeever said he found that his son, though very ill with typhoid and dysentery, had been without any attention for six days.

General Alger was at Camp Wikoff at the time, and when he heard Mr. McKeever's story at once issued a furlough to the young man.

Dr. Monae Lesser of the Red Cross Society was the first witness yesterday afternoon. He testified that in no instance had the services of the Red Cross nurses been discourteously declined in Cuba.

There was never any clashing between the army people and the Red Cross nurses. We worked together frequently in the hospitals at Siboney from June 29 to July 14. The relations of the army medical department force and the Red Cross were at all times most pleasant."

Dr. Lesser said that the fever cases were attended to in two buildings, and the wounded were cared for in tents of all kinds, which Major Lagarde found.

"And if I may be permitted," said he, "I think too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Major Lagarde for his untiring efforts."

Dr. Lesser said that the Cuban hospitals had plenty of medicine for yellow fever.

In speaking of the trip from Cuba on the transport Concho, he said that there was no way of telling that 175 men were going to develop genuine Cuban malaria after they got out to sea.

Preparations had been made to treat about twenty-five patients should that number of cases develop. But when one hundred and fifty more cases of malaria developed than had been contemplated there was not sufficient medicine.

"Still," said Dr. Lesser, "not a death occurred in that ship which was not due to the carelessness of the soldier himself or to some kind-hearted but misguided comrade, who let him eat too much. I might say, parenthetically, that more men died from overeating than from insufficient food."

The members of the commission declare that they are disappointed so far in the testimony taken in this city. They had had enough testimony relative to the condition of affairs, and what they sought in this city was the fixing of the responsibility.

The members of the commission are also disappointed in the non-appearance of witnesses they depended upon, such as Dr. Delafield and Colonel Downs, the latter of the Seventy-first regiment.

They have not appeared and say they will not appear.

Another Cut in Sugar.

New York, Nov. 26.—All grades of refined sugars have been reduced in price 1-16c a pound, which brings the price to 5 1-4c a pound for granulated.

The reduction was participated in by both the American Sugar Refining Company and the independent refining interests. Lack of demand was stated to be responsible for the cut.

Oregon at Montevideo.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—The navy department has received a telegram from Captain Barker of the battleship Oregon reporting the arrival of that vessel, the battleship Iowa and the supply ship Celtic at Montevideo Thursday.

Indo-China Railway System.

Paris, Nov. 26.—The cabinet has decided to authorize a loan of 160,000,000 francs to establish an Indo-China railroad system, in connection with the Chinese railroads.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.
Better put the cough out.
That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.
But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

WANT INDEPENDENCE NOW.

Cuban Commissioners Will Leave for Washington Early Next Week.

New York, Nov. 26.—The members of the Cuban commission now in this city expect to go to Washington either on Sunday night or on Monday, where they will lay their case before President McKinley.

They expect to finish their business there in a very short time and be back in Cuba in about twenty days.

Upon their return to Cuba a meeting of the general assembly, which they represent, will be called at once and the results of their mission placed before it.

General Garcia and the other members of the commission hope for the success of their mission to Washington.

Though they have not said so in so many words, it is now understood that they intend to ask this country either for a loan or to assist them in raising a loan.

The first use to which this money, if secured, will be put, will be toward paying off the officers and men of the Cuban army.

Word comes from Cuba that lists of the officers and men have already been completed, and as soon as the men can be paid in part for their services the army will be disbanded.

The members of the commission were a little startled at the utterances of Domingo Mendez Capote, formerly vice president of the Cuban republic, which have been cabled to this country. Capote, who was here not many months ago, declares that Cuba will in the end be annexed to this country and that in the end he has no doubt that ninety-five per cent. of the Cubans will vote for annexation.

At present, however, he declares the sole wish of every Cuban is for independence pure and simple. The Cubans want to have the satisfaction of seeing their flag in the galaxy of republics, and will stop at nothing short of that for which they fought so long.

After they have had a taste of liberty, however, under their own management, they will want to come into the United States, Capote declares. As to what he himself wants he does not say.

THE BALDWIN HOTEL FIRE.

Five Bodies Recovered So Far. A Charge of Incendiarism.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—So far as is now known, the victims of the Baldwin Hotel fire number five, as follows:

J. L. White, Louis Meyers, J. M. Lighthead, Tate Pryor and J. J. Carter.

It is expected, however, that other bodies will be found. The bodies of Lighthead and Pryor have been recovered. That of J. J. Carter, the racing judge, has not yet been found, but it is considered certain that he perished.

The body of Pryor will be forwarded to St. Louis, where his widow resides. It was found under a mass of timbers and debris. It was badly burned but was identified by the gold filling of the teeth.

Charles McCarthy, a commercial traveller, for an eastern whiskey firm, may also have perished in the fire. He went to the hotel on Tuesday evening and has not been seen since by his friends.

There are rumors of incendiarism in connection with the fire, the crime being attributed to a discharged employe, who, it is said, had made threats to burn the place.

Estimates place the total loss at about $1,500,000. Mr. Baldwin, the owner, says that he had expended $2,500,000 in building, furnishing and equipping the hotel.

Tin Plate Combination.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 26.—The Iron Trade Review says:

"The tin plate consolidation is now an assurtd fact. Most of the details have been arranged and nothing is left undone which could cause a miscarriage of the plans at the last moment. Probably ninety per cent. of those who are selling out to the promoters are taking stock in exchange. The consolidated company will be in actual working order by the first of the new year.

"It is generally agreed that G. D. Reid, now treasurer of the American Tin Plate Company, Elwood, Ind., will be president. His only formidable opponent is W. T. Graham, president of the Aetna Standard Steel Company of Bridgeport, O.

Evacuation Day.

New York, Nov. 26.—The anniversary of the evacuation of New York by the British troops in 1783 was marked by fewer celebrations yesterday than usual.

The flag raising at the Battery was done at sunrise by a park department laborer, Christopher R. Forbes, a descendant of Abram Van Arsdale, having been refused permission to continue to act, as he has done for some years past.

Flags were also displayed on the public buildings, on the Central Park blockhouse, and at various places of historic interest.

GRAVE CHARGES MADE

First Volunteer Engineers Repeat Some Strange Tales.

ILL TREATED BY OFFICERS

Some Alleged to Have Been Triced Up and Other Men Beaten. Scarcity of Water and Poor Food. Officers Deny the Stories and Say Strict Discipline Was Necessary.

New York, Nov. 26.—The First Volunteer Engineers, to the number of nearly nine hundred men, returned from Porto Rico on the transport Minnewaska Thursday.

Yesterday they were transferred to the foot of East Twenty-sixth street and were marched up Fifth avenue to the Eighth regiment armory at Ninety-fourth street and Park avenue.

The First Volunteer Engineers were recruited from all sections between Maine and Virginia.

The charges made by the men, as set forth below, were not only not made by any particular individual, but by bodies of men from the various companies, who promised after reaching the armory yesterday afternoon and receiving their pay, to volunteer to appear before the war commission, and make it hot for those responsible for the brutal treatment and shameful neglect which the men claim they were subjected to.

That a private, named Scott, a member of Company L, and a resident of Troy, was spread eagled for intoxication while the regiment was at Ponce; that he was pinioned to the ground for thirty-six consecutive hours, the most of which time he spent with his body in six inches of water unable to move hand or foot; that the members of his company were told that the guard had positive orders to kill the first man other than an officer who attempted to approach him; that several of the men asked permission to give the unfortunate man a drink of water and were met with the rebuff: "No, a thirst will do him good."

Charge 2.—Private Lewis of Company H, was, according to the men, hung or tried up by the thumbs at Ponce by order of a lieutenant whose name is withheld because he could not be found to defend himself.

The man had been under the influence of liquor, it was charged, and became unconscious twice before being finally cut down.

He had to be taken to the hospital, where he remained for a week.

Charge 3.—Running a sword into the calf of the leg of a private because the latter failed to properly obey the order of an officer, who is said to have committed the assault.

Charge 4.—Poor and insufficient food and confiscation and subsequent use by some of the officers of stores and delicacies furnished by the Red Cross Society for the men.

Twelve members of Company L say that there are seventy-seven witnesses to the fact that certain officers, whose names are to be given to the war commission, took provisions that were intended for the sick.

Charge 5.—Unjustifiable assault upon Thomas Finn of Company L, a resident of Bridgeport, Conn., by a sergeant and corporal. Finn was intoxicated, tied in his hammock; was ordered to pull one of his legs in, refused to do so, and was beaten, it is charged, by one of the men while being held by the other.

Charge 6.—Unjustifiable assault upon Private Sullivan of Company G, by a sergeant, who subsequently is said to have told Sullivan to go to his superior officer and be hanged, or words to that effect. Sullivan was placed in the guard house for forty-four days after the assault.

Charge 7.—Deprivation of the men on the trip South on the transport Chester, which left this city for Porto Rico on August 5.

The men claim that there was an insufficient quantity of fresh water on hand, that even while the transport was lying at anchor off Liberty island, within hailing distance practically of three big cities, they were obliged to pay twenty-five cents cash for a canteen of fresh water; that frequently on the way south they had to pay ten cents each for a piece of ice the size of an egg; that their sole mess on the trip was canned corned beef too fat to eat, inferior coffee that was served without either milk or sugar, and hard tack that could not be broken by the teeth; that the trip to Ponce lasted five days and thirteen hours, and that during the whole of this time few, if any, of the men were permitted to bathe because of the scarcity of water.

In justice to the officers, many of whom were seen and questioned, they replied that to their personal knowledge the majority of the charges were untrue.

There was some hardship, but officers suffered as well as the men.

There was intoxication among the men and radical means had to be resorted to.

Havana, Nov. 26.—The United States transport Florida arrived in front of Morro Castle at six o'clock yesterday morning and took a pilot on board and proceeded. At 7 o'clock she arrived in front of Marianao Beach.

General Greene and his staff left the Hotel Inglaterra yesterday morning for Marianao to superintend the landing of American troops there.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Largest Crops and Most Profitable Business for Thirty Years.

New York, Nov. 26.—Thanksgiving in 1898 means more than for thirty years. The "Harvest Home" has never recognized larger crops on the whole in this country, and the general prosperity is attested by the largest volume of business ever recorded. The year so exceptional in magnitude and variety of blessings draws near its end with yet another good gift, a marked increase of confidence in prospects for the year which is to close the century.

The industries are doing remarkably well, considering hindrance until of late by unseasonable weather. With storms and cold many branches now get larger orders. There has been more liberal buying of cotton goods.

Sales of wool have been 35,975,000 pounds for four weeks, including about 5,000,000 for export, but mostly at concessions which have been this week a little increased on fine unwashed fleeces.

Wheat has again advanced a shade, though for spot only 1-4 cent during the week, while western receipts are heavy, and for four weeks have been 38,034,291 bushels, against 29,119,104 last year.

The Atlantic exports, flour included, have been 3,957,876 bushels for the week against 3,628,446 last year.

Pacific exports have been 371,185 bushels, against 1,626,959 last year, making for the three weks of November 13,642,066 bushels, against 15,195,209 last year.

The volume of business again exceeds two hundred and fifty millions per business day, being for the week 27.1 per cent. larger than last year, and 23.1 per cent. larger than in 1892, and for the month 22.2 per cent. larger than last year, and 19.9 per cent. larger than in 1892.

Frequently most of the principal cities outside of New York now show an increase of 20 per cent. or more over the most prosperous year hitherto.

Manufacturing failures this month have been for $2,594,822, against $3,909,340 last year, and trading $2,896,684, against $4,206,531 last year.

A Dinner to Schley.

Brooklyn, Nov. 26.—The complimentary dinner given to Rear Admiral Schley at the Brooklyn Club last evening was one of the most notable events which have occurred in this borough in some time.

It was remarkable for the fact of its being the first time that Admiral Schley has been honored north of Washington, and adds another to the long list of eminent men who have been similarly honored by the Brooklyn Club.

Over one hundred covers were laid and the club rooms were especially decorated for the occasion.

The admiral, who arrived in Manhattan yesterday morning, was escorted to the club by Congressman Chas. G. Barrett and Chauncey Marshall.

Colonel William Hester, the president of the club, presided at the dinner. Among those who responded to toasts were Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, General B. F. Tracy and Dr. Sa. Clair McKelway.

To Launch the Wisconsin.

San Francisco, Nov. 26.—A party of seventy-five persons has arrived from Wisconsin to take part in the ceremonies of the launching of the United States battleship Wisconsin this morning. They are headed by ex-Congressman Isaac Stevenson, whose daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stevenson, will name the vessel, and the Hon. S. M. Stephenson, and members of their families.

Some question arose as to whether the launch should be under the management of the Wisconsin delegation or of the Union Works, the constructors of the battleship.

It has been decided in favor of the builders. Whether French or California champagne shall be used in the naming is a matter for diplomatic arrangement between the Wisconsin party and the San Franciscans.

Gen. Butler to Return.

Washington, Nov. 26.—In the army orders published yesterday the announcement is made that, under instructions of the president, Major General Matthew C. Butler of the Cuban evacuation commission, is to report in person to the secretary of war for temporary duty in Washington and upon its completion to return to Havana.

It is believed that the president and Secretary Alger desire to consult General Butler about the progress of the work of the commission.

A College Building Burned.

Indianapolis, Nov. 26.—The building of the Indiana Medical College, a department of the University of Indiana, was burned early yesterday morning. Dr. Norman Shobe attempted to escape by means of the stairway, but was caught between the second and third floors and perhaps fatally burned.

He was rescued later. The loss will amount to forty thousand dollars, with an insurance of thirty-five thousand dollars.

The Rioting at Anniston.

Anniston, Ala., Nov. 26.—The city has quieted down after last evening's rioting and it is believed that the full extent of the shooting has been ascertained.

Two negro soldiers were killed and three wounded, and six or eight white enlisted men were more or less seriously hurt.

The two members of the white provost guard who were missing have reported for duty.

Col. Henry Lee Dead.

Boston, Nov. 26.—Colonel Henry Lee, for many years the head of the well known banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., has just died at his home in Brookline.

Colonel Lee was 81 years of age. He was a lover of literature and often had written for magazines. He also published a book on "The Militia of the United States: What It has Been and What It Should Be."

A DECISION AT MADRID

Spain's Cabinet Approves Instructions to Commission.

LIKELY TO TAKE FULL TIME

A Counter Proposal That We Give for the Philippines $100,000,000 Instead of $20,000,000. No Doubt That Spain Will Sign the Treaty of Peace.

Madrid, Nov. 26.—After visiting the queen regent yesterday in order to condole with her majesty on the anniversary of the death of her husband, King Alfonso XII, who died on November 25, 1885, the ministers met in council.

They were occupied exclusively with the consideration of the peace question.

Eventually the council unanimously approved the instructions to Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission, drawn up by the foreign and colonial ministers, which were telegraphed to Paris in the evening.

While the ministers were reserved regarding the instructions sent to the Spanish commissioners, it is believed the Philippine question will be settled on Monday next.

Premier Sagasta was asked if Monday's session would see the close of the Paris conference, and the signing of the treaty of peace. He replied:

"Who knows? May be a fresh incident will arise or further consultations or exchanges of views will be necessary."

The Liberal says: "The cabinet disagreed yesterday as to the reply that should be sent to Senor Rios. But it is believed that it has decided whether it will or will not instruct the Spanish commissioners to sign the treaty of peace."

Spain's Proposals.

Paris, Nov. 26.—It is now known that Spain will exhaust her time limit, which expires on Monday, before replying to the American offer regarding the Philippine islands.

In the meanwhile the Spaniards are canvassing the entire field and exhausting every resource to postpone the inevitable.

As cabled on Wednesday, they could not accept the American ultimatum as ultimate without asking if it really were so. That applied to the time limit. Now the Spaniards apparently doubt the fixedness of the amount the Americans offered for the Philippines, and yesterday they sent a communication to the American commissioners asking if the latter would accept a counter proposal by Spain to cede the Philippines for $100,000,000.

Spain imagines the Americans might be willing to lop off the great island of Mindanao from the Philippines and pay Spain $50,000,000 for what would remain, instead of the $20,000,000 now offered for the entire archipelago.

Before giving up or turning away Spain will also propose that the United States hold some part of the Carolines or the Canary islands, in addition to the Philippines, on condition that Spain be permitted to retain her sovereignty in the Philippines.

In other words, Spain will cede certain territory in the Carolinas and Canaries in return for a nominal Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines, and, as a further inducement, will propose that the United States shall pay Spain no money on account of the Philippines.

Night Meeting of Cabinet.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—A special meeting of the cabinet was held at ten o'clock last night. All the members were with the president, except Secretary Long, who is out of the city.

The meeting was called by the president in order that his advisors might consider with him advices received last evening from the American peace commissioners at Paris.

It is understood that the advices related to counter proposals informally made to the American commissioners by the representatives of the Madrid government.

At the close of the meeting, which lasted only forty minutes, and was held in the parlors of the White House, Secretary of State Hay said that the president had received some advices from Paris that he desired to lay before the cabinet and that he had called the members together to consider them. The nature of the advices Mr. Hay declined to state.

The Administration Confident.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—The Spanish commissioners are evidently going to take the full time allowed them by the United States in the ultimatum.

The president and his cabinet now feel fully assured that Spain will sign the treaty of peace, and that the answer at the next meeting of the commission will be satisfactory.

A New Naval Station.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Our government has secured a site and taken steps to establish a naval and coaling station at the Chiriqui Lagoon in the Carribean side of Southern Costa Rica.

The harbor is said to be one of the finest in the world, with anchorage in all parts of it; the climate is the best anywhere near the isthmus, and it is understood that a practically limitless supply of good coal is to be mined in the immediate neighborhoid.

Negotiations for this acquisition were in progress when our civil war interrupted them, and were renewed under President Grant's administration, but have only now been brought to a definite conclusion.

Valuable Land Claimed.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 26.—A bill in equity has been filed in the superior court of New London county claiming, on behalf of the remnants of the Mohegan Indian tribe, the site of an ancient Indian burying ground in the city of Norwich, Conn., covered with buildings, and very valuable. The claim is based on old Indian deeds.

LOSS OF THE MARIA TERESA.

Arrival of the Vulcan and the Potomac With Important Witnesses.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 26.—The naval court of inquiry to inquire into the abandonment of the cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa resumed its session yesterday after having secured important papers bearing on the case.

The examination of witnesses has just fairly begun and, being necessarily slow, the court may be in session for several weeks.

The United States ships Vulcan and Potomac arrived in Hampton Roads yesterday morning from the scene of the Teresa wreck at Cat island. They report that the cruiser has been left to her fate.

She was stripped of everything that would be valuable as a relic.

Both vessels came up to the navy yard in the afternoon, when Captain McCalla and Naval Constructor Hobson reported to the commandant of the yard.

The arrival of the Vulcan brings important witnesses, and the actual facts connected with the casting adrift of the Teresa are expected to be brought out.

The court will try and ascertain whether any persons on board opened the port holes so that the ship should sink before she drifted far.

Another vessel expected is the tug Merritt, which had the Teresa in tow. It is thought that Captain Chittenden, who had charge of the wreckers, will be summoned before the court of inquiry.

The Merritt's representatives here believe that the published interview with the second mate of the Antilla, Webber, who is credited with saying that the Teresa's port holes were found open, was incorrect. They think that the port holes were closed, and doubt whether the British officer ever said they were open.

The President's Message.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—The president is devoting all of his spare time to the preparation of his message to Congress. Minor matters will be considered only briefly and by far the larger share of the message will be devoted to the great questions which have been raised by the war. Sections of the message have been gone over by the president with the members of the cabinet to whose departments they particularly relate, and the indications now are that the message will exceed in length any sent to Congress during the last several years.

Secretary Long's Report.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Mr. Long, secretary of the navy, has submitted his annual report to the president, the most important recommendation in it, perhaps, being the immediate addition of fifteen warships to the American navy, beyond the fifty-five vessels now under construction, which include eight first class battleships, four coast defence monitors and one cruiser.

The total cost of this formidable addition to our navy is estimated at $25,000,000.

President Iglesias to Prolong His Visit.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 26.—Don Rafael Iglesias, president of Costa Rica, has decided to prolong his visit to Washington and does not contemplate returning to New York until some time next week.

He is much interested in the work performed by the various executive departments here, and will make a thorough examination of their organization and operation.

He visited the Congressional Library yesterday afternoon and spent several hours inspecting the treasury department.

The Battleship Texas to Sail.

New York, Nov. 26.—Officers, marines and sailors of the battleship Texas attended a ball in LenoxLy ceum last night. It was complimentary and was paid for by the sailors, as a farewell to their wives and sweethearts on shore.

The big Texas is now being coaled at Tompkinsville. She will have her bunkers filled when she puts to sea under sealed orders on Monday.

Her sailors believe that she will sail on a long trip to Manila, so they gave their farewell dance last night.

Photographs of a New Comet.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 26.—The Yale observatory has just secured four new photographic plates of the new comet, which was first discovered ten days ago.

It was then found on two plates used in photographing the Leonid meteors.

Death of a Prominent Chicago Lawyer.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Edward G. Asay, a prominent member of the Chicago bar for the last forty years, is dead at his home on Forty-seventh street, after a lingering illness.

Dropsy was the cause of death. Mr. Asay was born in Philadelphia in the year 1825.

Speedy Torpedoboat Davis.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 26.—The torpedo boat Davis, constructed at the Wolff & Zwicker Iron Works in this city, on her official trial trip of two hours, made an average speed of twenty-three and one-half knots per hour, a full knot in excess of rtquirements.

Battery K, 2d Artillery Starts.

No Continental Sunday.

Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City, has stirred up a veritable hornet's nest by his announcement that he was in favor of a wide-open town, especially in the matter of having Sunday performances at the theatres. The whole voice of the pulpit and the respectable element of Jersey City has been raised in indignant protest against the utterances of the Mayor, and none more strongly than Charles B. Brown, formerly of Plainfield, but now general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Jersey City. At the association meeting last Sunday Mr. Brown gave voice to the following effective sentences:

We want no continental Sunday. Jersey City has a bright future, but its fall would be swift and sure if Satan was given full swing. From a purely moral or financial point of view, without regard to creed or politics, every man in Jersey City, especially the property owner, ought to view with deep anxiety and utterly repudiate the opinions so recently expressed by the Mayor.

Chicago's Foolish Craze.

The antivaccination craze in England, which resulted last summer in some very foolish legislation in parliament and brought out such a flood of bitter protest from medical men, is not confined to the other side of the water. It has organized itself in Chicago as the People's Liberty league. Superintendent Andrews fears that it may compel the board of education to abandon compulsory vaccination in the schools, as there is no law on the statute books enforcing it. It is extraordinary that in this age of the world so bitter a prejudice can exist in the minds of large numbers of people, by no means confined to the ignorant, against a preventive method which has almost eradicated one of the great scourges of the human race. Where 50 deaths by smallpox occurred two centuries ago, not more than one is recorded now.

The Paterson Press, referring to the fact that gas is being sold twenty-five cents per 1,000 cubic feet in Trenton, terms it "Trenton's Crazy Gas War." It is a pity that there is not more insanity of this sort.

Mayor Fisk entered on the duties of the City Judge this morning until an acting Judge shall be appointed His treatment of such offenders as were haled before him was lenient.

Winter is beginning early this year. One snow storm already and another in prospect. It has been many years since Plainfield has seen a white Thanksgiving.

It is well to hear what both sides have to say in the campaign preceding the municipal election.

Mary Anderson in Her English Home.

Every American will be interested in a page of photographic reproductions in the Christmas Ladies' Home Journal which presents "Mary Anderson in Her English Home." The pictures were made expressly for The Journal, and show Mary Anderson de Navarro as she is today, her two-year-old son, and the exteriors and interiors of the de Navarros' delightful English home. These pictures will be treasured by the beloved actress' admirers in this country, as they give an interesting glimpse of Mrs. de Navarro's daily life and her surroundings.

—Edward Mundy, of Metuchen, who was injured sometime ago in this city, and who has been confined to the hospital, has been discharged, having recovered from his injuries.

WASHINGTON'S HOME DOOMED.

The ruthless hand of what we call progress is to be laid upon one of the few remaining relics of our country's most interesting period. The old Jumel mansion, on Washington Heights, New York City, is to be removed from its beautiful site to a less valuable location. This house was the home of Washington during the most trying time of the Revolutionary War. In its drawing room Hamilton and Burr met just before their tragic duel.

HONOR FOR LATE JUDGE.

position. He considered Mr. DeMeza's death a great loss to the Plainfield Bar. Another tribute paid to him by Mr. Reed was that one could always depend on him. If he said hat he would do a thing he would keep his word.

The next speaker was W. R. Codington, with whom Judge DeMeza first studied law. Mr. Codington said: "It is only due to Mr. DeMeza that I should say something. He started in the office of Jackson & Codington, and I desire to say that during his entire clerkship he was never known to tell an untruth. He was always honest and fair, and while his salary was limited we were always glad to help him in any way possible. He didn't have the advantages of others, but it is to his credit that he persevered, and his work showed that he did. It was always a pleasure to assist him, and I cannot emphasize too strongly the help he gave his widowed mother and the members of the family."

In conclusion Mr. Swackhamer made a few remarks in view of the fact that he will be unable to attend the funeral services. He said that he fully sympathized with the bereaved family, that he was proud to be a member of the Plainfield Bar which had for a member George DeMeza. He added, that when he came to Plainfield and learned of Mr. DeMeza's success, it proved a great inspiration to him and that it had to other young men.

Lawyer Bird suggested that a floral tribute be given by the Plainfield Bar, and the suggestion was heartily concurred in. The meeting then adjourned.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Manager Maze Edwards, of Music Hall, has arranged through George Rogers, the well-known musical director, for the services of Prof. P. L. Conde, violinist, and Ernest Wilcox, flutist, as permanent members of the Music Hall orchestra. Some good music may be anticipated in the future, in addition to the very superior line of attractions which will be presented the coming winter months.

* * * *

"The Nancy Hanks" will be the attraction at Music Hall next Tuesday night. "The Nancy Hanks" was never brighter or more popular than it is today. A prominent paper has this to say of it, and some of its company: "Frank Tannehill, Jr., heads his own play acceptably, and he has surrounded himself with a good comedy organization. Miss Lillian Allyn, as a continuance performance favorite, infuses a quantity of ginger into her movements and songs. Miss Georgie Lingard, Miss Ollie Lowe, and Miss Carlotta all contribute, while Mrs. Tannehill, Sr., as Aunt Hetty, impresses one that she is exactly what she seems, whether her mind is made up or not. Taylor Williams has quite likely tramped Broadway, and incidentally sings in excellent voice a selection quite above the ordinary. Harry Beresford, as an eccentric Frenchman, who prizes his decoration and later disguised as a woman, sings capitally a half English, half French song, rendered his part in a humorous manner."

* * * * *

Manager Maze Edwards has secured as a Christmas attraction a card that should prove the event of the season. George Thatcher's Fashionable Vaudevilles will give a matinee and night performance Monday, December 26th Particular care has been given to the selection of the artists comprising this coterie of entertainers, which in its entirety is made up of versatile acts that have each and every one made distinctive hits at Kieth's Theatres, which not alone insures the cleanliness of the performance to be given but is a guarantee of its merit. Of course, George Thatcher and Ed Marble will be seen in their new blackface absurdity, and the other artists, who comprise the ensemble, will give "Our George" a close race for first honors.

* * * * *

James K. Hackett, one of the youngest of prominent American actors and quite the most youthful dramatic star who will appear here in Anthony Hope's dramatization of "Rupert of Hentzau," has been before the critical New York Lyceum audiences for two years. He crowned his previous excellent work by a decided hit as Rassendyll in "The Prisoner of Zenda." Subsequently he went on tour in the Hope romance and met with success. Previous to joining forces with Daniel Frohman, his present manager, Mr. Hackett was a valued member of the Daly Company and later appeared in a principal part in Madame Sans Gene. He thus had the advantage of dramatic training under Augustin Daly and Daniel Frohman than whom perhaps there are no better stage managers anywhere. A fine looking sturdy young man, this actor has proved himself a great favorite with all classes of theatregoers who know him as one who does what he has to do in the very best way.

—The Thursday Night Whist Club which meets next week Thursday will probably adjourn to some future date on account of the death of City Judge DeMeza, who was a member of the club.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The following resolutions were passed by the members of the Plainfield Bar at a meeting held yesterday afternoon:

Resolved, That in the sudden death of Judge DeMeza the city of Plainfield has sustained the loss of a just Judge and upright citizen, and the Bar of the county an honored member.

Called to preside at the early age of twenty-four years, over a court at whose Bar were often submitted the rights and obligations of the friends, neighbors and business acquaintances of the Judge, the duties of the office called for the exercise of candor, courage, calmness, disinterested zeal for the public welfare, rare good judgment and the strictest integrity. It is simple justice to declare that throughout his public career he was always equal to the severe requirements. Genial, loyal, kind-hearted, and naturally inclined to temper justice with mercy, especially in cases of the young or unfortunate, he did not hesitate to visit upon offenders deserving severity of sentence the full measure of punishment demanded by a just sense of the rights of the public.

By his industry and zeal and natural aptitude for public service, he became in the true sense of the word a self-made man, and the community in which he was reared, in common with his brethren of the Bar, watched with pride and satisfaction another and striking illustration in this city of the possibilities of advancement and success attending such efforts.

Resolved, That we offer to his bereaved family the sincere expression of our sorrow and sympathy, and as a last tribute to his memory we attend his funeral in a body and cause an appropriate floral emblem to be placed upon his bier.

A CLAIM EASILY SETTLED.

The Shining Piles of Silver Dollars Captured Her Fancy.

It is not so easy now to cheat the Indians as in the days when they bartered their lands for glass beads and worthless trinkets. They are now pretty sharp in making ordinary trades which come up in their daily life; nevertheless, it is true that when it comes to a question of large sums of money—thousands or even hundreds of dollars—the average Indian is bewildered at the mere idea of so much wealth. An incident which happened not long ago in New Mexico illustrates this point. An Indian was killed by a railroad train, and his widow demanded $3,000 as an indemnity. The company was willing to settle, and sent an agent who knew Indians thoroughly. He took with him several bags of Mexican silver dollars, which pass freely among Indians in that part of the country. Sitting down gravely with the aggrieved widow, he began counting out the big shining dollars one by one. When the pile had reached a hundred, he glanced inquiringly at the squaw, but she shook her head firmly. The agent went on with his counting, and at the end of another hundred he looked up again. She repeated the negative shake of her head, but her eyes began to brighten at the heap of silver. At three hundred the agent paused a little longer. The squaw still held out, though with unmistakable signs of weakening. The agent counted more slowly and impressively, and when he reached three hundred and forty-eight, the squaw stopped his hand. "Heap plenty," she said, with decision; and, gathering up the silver, she accepted in perfect contentment this settlement of her claim for $3,000.—Golden Days.

THE MATCHMAKER.

Major Mackintosh was a very good fellow, but he had one little weakness; he was a most inveterate matchmaker.

Of course, the major prided himself on his tact and delicacy, and fondly fancied nobody ever saw through his transparent little artifices. But though he took every care to guard against failure, matters would occasionally go wrong and the most prudently planned match come to nothing, greatly to the major's dismay.

The major had but one near relative, in the world—his nephew, Jack Mackintosh. Jack was in a government office, and as he was not twenty-three years of age, his uncle began to think seriously of arranging a match for him.

The major was very anxious that Jack's match should really be a triumph, and it cost him much thought and grave weighing of pros and cons for months, before the critical time came. Of course, he did not consult Jack in the matter. To do so at so early a stage in the proceedings would have been contrary to all precedent.

Despite the earnest cogitations of months and all the careful study of six specimens of girlhood, the major suddenly made up his mind that Nellie Bloxham was the one woman in the world for Jack, and this within five minutes of his first introduction to her! The girl charmed him, and he at once decided that she must marry Jack.

A letter was dispatched that very evening, and a few days later the young fellow joined his uncle at the watering place where he had been so fortunate as to make Miss Bloxham's acquaintance.

"Well, Jack, have you got your leave, or is this only a Saturday to Monday trip?" was the first question he asked when they met at the station.

"I can stay a fortnight, if you'll have me."

"That's capital. I've a lot of friends here, and some uncommonly pretty girls among them. The Fishers came down last week, and the Renshaws—"

"Is May Renshaw here? I'm glad of that."

May Renshaw was one of the half-dozen who had been under consideration, and it is possible that Jack was aware of the fact; but of their recent rejection he was totally ignorant.

"May? Yes; I—I believe so."

The major spoke absently, for he was thinking how very unfortunate it would be if Jack really felt any attraction in that quarter. Not but what May was a nice girl enough—till you compared her with Nellie Bloxham.

Jack noticed the change of tone, and drew his own conclusions from it.

"Any new acquaintances, uncle?" he asked; and there was a twinkle in his eye as he spoke which it was just as well the major did not see.

"A few; yes, Jack, a few. Old Colonel Marsh and his sisters; pleasant women, though a bit elderly—for you, you know; and Mrs. Bloxham and her daughter; charming girl, the daughter, though a bit young—for me of course."

"Ah, about the right age for me to play with, I suppose?"

"To play with? No, no, Jack, you're too old for play now. It's quite time you settled; and I've been thinking——"

"Yes?" as he paused, impressively, for the major felt that at last the time had come for him to speak.

"That Miss Bloxham is the very girl for you. In fact, that you're just cut out for each other."

"H'm!" said Jack.

"Well, why not?"

"Why not? No reason, perhaps But then again—why?"

"Because she's pretty, and good form, and very good company; a thorough lady, and a charming woman! Can't you trust my judgment in a matter of this kind? She's miles and away too good for you, you young dog, if that's what you mean!" he broke out angrily.

"That's exactly what I do mean. If she's all the admirable things you say she is, I fail to see how we can be cut out for each other; and shall feel bound in common fairness to let some better fellow cut me out. I'm not half good enough for her—if she's all you say she is."

"If that's all, come and have a look at her," he said, "and then you can judge for yourself. She is sure to be on the parade; they all are at this hour."

He "had a look" at Miss Bloxham and he was introduced to her. They talked together, the major beaming approval the while. He was introduced to her mother, a harmless, garrulous old lady, who always talked whether there was anybody to listen or not, and always about nothing in particular.

When the Bloxhams left the parade an hour or so later, the major and Jack walked with them as far as their own door, and Jack walked with Miss Bloxham.

"Well," said the major, as they turned away.

"Eh?"

Jack was evidently not attending. A slight, pale-faced little girl was passing at the moment, and bowed to him with a shy smile.

"Who's that?" Major Mackintosh asked abruptly. It struck him that Jack was looking ridiculously pleased about something or other.

"The sister of a man in my office. I've been down to his place once or twice lately."

"O!" The major dismissed the subject. "Well, what do you think of her?"

"Of—her?"

"Yes; isn't she all I said and more?"

"Oh, Miss Bloxham! Yes, she seems all right."

"All right? I should think she is all right. 'Pon my word, Jack, you take it coolly."

"Why, what would you have? She has talked to me about a lot of things for an hour or so; but I really know nothing about her, except that she is good-looking, and too good form to say that she is bored, whatever she may feel."

"Bored! Why should she be bored? Didn't you talk to her?"

"Yes, and she'd much rather I hadn't. I wasn't the right man, uncle that's all."

"Then, by Jove, I should like to know who is!" the major said testily.

Jack laughed, but he did not pursue the subject further. After all, it was no affair of his; and if his uncle liked to play a little game of cross purposes, he had no wish to interfere with him.

The next week passed away pleasantly enough. The major, taught by experience, knew just the kind of little expedition that was best qualified to throw young people together—and he was constantly arranging some nice little pleasure party or another. Of course, none of these were complete without the Bloxhams, and a quiet, shy girl, a great friend of Nellie's in whom—somewhat to his surprise—the major recognized Jack's little acquaintance. Millie Lee went everywhere with her friend; and as she was always sweet-tempered and happy, the major presently grew quite fond of her in a fatherly sort of way, and looked forward to arranging a suitable marriage for her as soon as Jack should be off his mind.

The major observed with approval that Jack, too, was kind to her; for he thought it an excellent sign that he should wish to please Miss Bloxham by little attentions to her friend. On the whole, he was satisfied with the way things were going—or so he told himself.

Of course Jack was in love with Miss Bloxham; how could he fail to be, knowing her so well as he now did? Why, even he, the major, was more than half in love with her himself, as he owned, with a sigh, to his cigar; and he was old enough to know the folly of it; how, then, should a young fellow like Jack escape?

The major called himself an old fool for his pains, and refused to think of what, perhaps, might have happened had he only been a dozen or fifteen years younger; but for him—a man of fifty—oh, no; it was out of the question!

And so the first week of Jack's visit came to an end.

The little expeditions, however, did not come to an end; on the contrary, Major Mackintosh redoubled his exertions, for he was growing extraordinarily anxious to have the affair settled; and the more he saw of Nellie, the more he was convinced that Jack would be the luckiest fellow in the world if he won her.

And he must win her. The major felt that his reputation was at stake, for he had never labored to make any match as he had labored for this.

"Jack, have you thought over what I said to you?" he asked abruptly one day, as they were walking back to their hotel.

"What about? You've said a good deal at different times."

"Oh, about settling, you know!"

"To be sure I have! There's a lot in it. In fact, I think I shall act on it."

"You're thinking seriously of settling, my boy?"

"Most seriously, to tell the truth!" And there was a twinkle in Jack's eye as he spoke. "I was just going to tell you that I've already asked—some one to settle me, and she's promised to do it."

"I congratulate you with all my heart, my boy!" he said huskily.

"Thank you. She is a dear little girl, and thinks no end of you. She has no father, you see, and so——"

"Yes, yes, I quite understand!" The major felt that this was a little too much. "I think she must know how I've set my heart on it," he added.

"Not a bit of it! She feared you had quite other views for me. Indeed, it was all Miss Bloxham and I could do to persuade her——"

"Her? Whom?"

"Why, Millie, of course. She fears you'll play the cruel uncle, and object to my marrying her."

"Millie! Marrying Millie!"

"Yes. Surely you must have seen——"

"And what does Miss Bloxham say to this?"

"Oh, she's delightful. We're all such friends, you know."

"Friends! Marry Millie! And but for that little marplot you might have married Miss Bloxham——"

"Not a [illegible] of it. You are mistaken there. Even had I ever wished it, she wouldn't have had me."

"Who told you so?"

"Nobody; but I'm not quite a fool, any more than you are quite a hundred. Because—uncle, Millie is not the marplot, but—quite another person!" significantly.

"By Jove!" exclaimed the major.

He was silent for some moments. When next he spoke it was in a very different tone,—

"Do you think I've any chance, Jack?"

Jack laughed not unkindly.

"Go and see," he said.

So, after all, he made an excellent match for Miss Bloxham; and Mrs. Mackintosh never regretted that Jack was not the bridegroom.—Household

Bei einem Bau im Stadttheil Reudnitz riß beim Aufwinden eines mehrere Centner wiegenden Sandsteins das Seil und der Stein durchschlug das Gebälk, auf welchem Maurer arbeiteten; diese wurden in die Tiefe gerissen. Einer der Leute, der 42jährige Rothe, erlitt einen linksseitigen Unterschenkelbruch, die Maurer Adam und May erlitten innere Verletzungen.

Eisenach. An Pfingsten vorigen Jahres wurde auf dem nördlich von hier gelegenen Wadenberge unter großen Feierlichkeiten der Grundstein für ein Burschenschaftsdenkmal gelegt, welches dem Andenken Kaiser Wilhelms des Ersten gewidmet sein soll. Der Errichtung des Denkmals auf diesem Grunde stellten sich jedoch schwerwiegende Bedenken entgegen, so daß der Denkmalsausschuß, welcher vor Kurzem von Berlin nach Eisenach verlegt wurde, sich entschließen mußte, einen anderen Platz auszuwählen. Die Wahl ist nunmehr auf die östlich der Stadt belegene Goepelkuppe gefallen.

Bremen. In Blumenthal geriethen bei einem Ball polnische Arbeiter der Wollkämmerei mit deutschen in Streit, und es kam zu Thätlichkeiten. Mehrere hundert Arbeiter eilten herbei. Zwei Arbeiter sind todt. Der Hauptschuldige wurde verhaftet.—Der Bremerhavener Stadtverordnete Hermann Grunow ist wegen Unterschlagung sozialdemokratischer Parteigelder zu sechs Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt worden.

HIRED WEBSTER FOR A WEEK.

A Fine Scheme by Which the Farmer Made Five Hundred Dollars.

Of course, Webster was in demand by those who could afford to pay for his services. A sharp Nantucket man is said to have got the better of the great defender of the Constitution in an amusing way, however. He had a small case which was to be tried at Nantucket, one week in June, and he posted to Webster's office in great haste. It was a contest with a neighbor over a matter of considerable local interest, and his pride as a litigant was at stake. He told Webster the particulars, and asked what he would charge to conduct the case.

"Why," said Webster, "you can't afford to hire me. I should have to stay down there the whole week, and my fee would be more than the whole case is worth. I couldn't go down there for less than $1,000. I could try every case on the docket as well as one, and it wouldn't cost any more, for one case would take my time for the entire week, anyway."

"All right, Mr. Webster, quickly responded the Nantucketer. "Here's your $1,000. You come down, and I'll fix it so you can try every case."

Webster was so amused over this proposition that he kept his word. He spent the entire week in Nantucket, and appeared on one side or the other in every case that came up for hearing. The shrewd Nantucketer hired Daniel out to all his friends who were in litigation, and received in return about $1,500, so that he got Webster's services for nothing, and made a good profit to boot.

If that man was alive in these days of trusts and sydicates he would probably be at the head of a legal trust, controlling the services of all the big lawyers of the country.—Boston Herald.

CLOCK IN A PAINTING.

George W. Childs Offered $500 for It but It Wasn't for Sale.

The queerest oil painting in Philadelphia came from the brush of a Frenchman, his subject being a church in Stuttgart, Germany. There is a clock in the church tower, but it is not a painted clock. A real timepiece of small diameter occupies the space. It has a cathedral gong, which strikes every half-hour. Each hour is celebrated first by chimes and then by two German airs played from a music box. This musical mechanism occupies a box-like apartment, which is connected with the frame of the picture. Change of temperature affects the peculiar clockwork, as it runs very regularly in the summer, but in winter the chimes and music are seldom heard. The owner has had much trouble in getting it repaired, and no clockmaker in America seems to understand the queer mechanism. The painting, with its accessories, was made in 1700, and caused no end of comment when first brought to this country. The late Georgre W. Childs offered the husband of the owner $500 for it, as he desired to add it to his museum of clocks, but the offer was declined.—Philadelphia Record.

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

MAUD BOOTH'S WORK.

T'S RANGE IS FROM THE 400 TO CONVICTS OF STATE'S PRISON.

By the Latter She is Known as the "Little Mother;" By the Former as a Refined Woman With the Face of a Madonna and a Soul that Reflects the Master's Light.

It may never be known just what the cause was that separated Ballington Booth from the Salvation Army and caused him to organize the American Volunteers.

It is said in both armies that the women of the Booth family became jealous of the amazing personal, religious and social success of Mrs. Ballington Booth in America.

It is furthermore stated that these ladies brought their influence to bear on Gen. Booth to cause him to recall his son and daughter-in-law from their popular and increasing work in the United States and consign them to the humdrum oblivion of labor in England or in some out-of-the-way country.

It is rumored that Mrs. Booth-Tucker looked from afar upon the amazing popularity of Mrs. Ballington Booth, and saw no reason why she, too, should not enjoy the same measure of success.

Members of both armies stoutly deny that there is the remotest prospect of the amalgamation of the two forces.

Maud Ballington Booth is a unique and fascinating figure in the religious history of this country.

When she first came from England the Salvation Army was a byword and a hissing. It was looked upon with about as much respect and consideration as Falstaff's army of ragged scarecrows.

By her beauty, her grace, her wonderful magnetism, her womanliness, Mrs. Booth did more for the Salvation Army in the United States than had ever been done before her advent or since.

lovely flower. She is below the medium height, slenderly built, with soft, girlish outlines. Her face is simply exquisite. Her complexion is like the delicately tinted heart of a white rose. Her great grey-blue eyes deepen into darkness as she talks. Her hair is of a warm chestnut, the tone of coloring that is vibrant with life and instinct with passion. This vital hair she seeks to restrain within proper bounds, as becomes a sedate, modern Deborah. But it persists in breaking from bounds and in rioting about her low, broad forehead in little curls and tendrils like those of a rebellious grapevine. Best of all, her beautiful face is dominated by celestial purity and light.

One of the most powerful aids Maud Booth brought to her work was a voice of wonderful and thrilling sweetness and sympathy. It is a voice that goes straight to the heart, making it leap and bringing tears to the eyes; the voice that encourages, that strengthens, that consoles.

Mrs. Booth is a gentlewoman born and bred. An educated woman, and one of great refinement, she was equipped both by nature and education to interest a class of people that had hitherto looked upon the Salvation Army as frowsy and battered, though somewhat amusing spectacle.

It was Maud Ballington Booth who took the Salvation Army into the drawing-rooms of the fashionable society of New York city.

Amazement seized the exclusives when a prominent society woman issued 200 cards of invitation to meet Mrs. Ballington Booth, "who will," so the cards ran, "give an account of the work of the Salvation Army."

Many responded to mock, but remained to pray.

When the slight figure came before those fashionable women; when the earnest, exquisite face, like the face of some saint of old emblazoned on a cathedral window, was uplifted in prayer; when the wonderful voice told its tales of the pathos and sorrow and misery of one-half the world, the frigid, flippant listeners were conquered.

Maud Ballington Booth became the fashion.

Morning meetings were held in many of the most exclusive drawing-rooms in New York. The lovely Salvationist attracted the very elect of society.

Being a beautiful woman and an accomplished one as well, she held her own among her listeners.

At the close of her talks she gave informal receptions, at which she spoke to her admirers in perfect English or fluent French.

From Murray Hill she would pass to Cherry Hill.

In the morning she would thrill a jaded and blase crowd of worldlings; in the afternoon she would scrub the dirty floor of some frightful back tenement.

About three years ago Mrs. Booth naugurated her convict work.

She was the woman of all others to attack this undertaking.

The most strongly developed trait of this remarkable little woman is her maternal instinct. She is above all else a mother; a mother to the poor and unfortunate, to the downtrodden and the lowly, to the erring and sinful.

She loves people; she broods over the world; she could gather the universe to her warm, sympathetic heart.

Thugs, thieves and murderers are to her God's unhappy children, with souls to save and much misery to suffer.

So when she went to Sing Sing and talked to one thousand convicts the motherhood of this woman welled up in her heart and overflowed and enveloped her listeners and captured them, as her innate refinement and high-bred manners had conquered the social world, and as her native kindness and sympathy had won the hearts of the dwellers in the slums.

BALLINGTON BOOTH.

Nor did her ministration stop at preaching to the convicts. So deeply were Mrs. Booth's sympathy and interest engrafted on this work that she established a home for discharged convicts. "Hope Hall" stands to-day a monument to the woman who not only looked within the prison walls and brought the light of her sweet face and the warmth of her generous heart to the wretched beings there, but who looked beyond the walls as well and saw that to save these men when they emerged from prison some sort of a refuge and help in time of trouble must be provided for them.

Through Mrs. Booth's ceaseless energy and unbounded influence more than through any other channel the superb barracks of the Salvation Army was built on Fourteenth street.

The Army had now a recognized place in the United States, and this was due more to the work, presence and interest of Maud Ballington Booth than to any other agency.

Then came the sudden order to the Booths to return to England, their refusal, their withdrawal from the Army, the establishing of the American Volunteers and the advent of the Booth-Tuckers.

It is not the province of this story to discuss the various points of difference between the Booths. The matter has been sufficiently aired already in every paper in the land.

RUSSIAN MARRIAGES BY ORDER.

If They Have Acted as Godfather and Godmother They are Exempt.

Marriages by order were so common, says Prince Kropotkin in the Atlantic that amongst our servants, each time a young couple foresaw that they might be ordered to marry, although they had no mutual inclination for each other, they took the precaution of standing together as godfather and godmother at the christening of a child in one of the peasant families. This rendered marriage impossible, according to Russian church law. The stratagem was usually successful, but once it ended in a drama. Andrei, the tailor, fell in love with a girl belonging to one of our neighbors. He hoped that my father would permit him to go free, as a tailor, in exchange for a certain yearly payment, and that by working hard at his trade he could manage to lay some money aside and to buy freedom for the girl. Otherwise, in marrying one of my father's serfs, she would have become the serf of her husband's master. However, as Andrei and one of the maids of our household foresaw that they might be made to marry, they agreed to unite as godparents in the christening of a child. What they had feared happened. One day they were called to the master and the dreaded order was given.

"We are always obedient to your will," they replied, "but a few weeks ago we acted as godfather and godmother at a christening."

Andrei also explained his wishes and intentions.

The result was that he was sent to the recruiting board to become a soldier.

Military service in those times was terrible. It required a man to serve twenty-five years under the colors, and the life of a soldier was hard in the extreme. * * * Blows from the sergeant and the officers, flogging with birch rods and with sticks, for the slightest fault, were the normal state of affairs. The cruelty that was displayed surpassed all imagination.

Thus Andrei had now to face for twenty-five years the terrible fate of a soldier; all his schemes of happiness had come to a violent end.

LEARNING A LESSON.

"I can get along with him, I'm very sure," said Joscelind Darkridge. "Nobody could get along with him!" chorused the three other Miss Darkridges, in unison.

Uncle Black was the personage of whom they spoke—a crabbed, ill-tempered, little old man—who lived in a superb old country seat among the Catskills.

He had money to leave, but his nieces and nephews secretly believed that it would be a deal easier to go to California of Golconda, or some of the fabulous places and dig fortunes out, nugget by nugget, than to stay at home and earn them by making themselves acceptable to an old gentleman who had as many angles as a rose diamond, and as many prickly spikes of temper as a porcupine.

"No one can help loving Naomi," said Mrs. Darkridge, as she kissed her daughter good-by.

But in three weeks Naomi came back half frightened out of her wits.

"He scolds so dreadfully," said Naomi. "And he looked at me as the wolf must have looked at Little Red Riding Hood. Oh, mamma, I couldn't stay there, not if I was to be made richer than Mrs. Burdett-Coutts herself."

Margdalena Darkridge went next; but Margdalena, although a fine, tall girl, with a spirit of her own, was cowed by Uncle Black's savage eyes in less than a week.

"I'd sooner sweep crossings for a living," said she, "than be Uncle Black's heiress."

And so she came home without loss of time.

Rhoda Darkridge, in no wise abashed by the successive failures of her sisters, was the third one to try Black Grange and its possibilities. But she also succumbed before the terrible scourge of Uncle Black's savage tongue.

"It's scold, snarl, snarl, scold, from morning till night!" said Rhoda, as in three days' time she tearfully related her experience to her parents. "Oh, you don't know—nobody can know—what a dreadful man Uncle Black is!"

"Oh, hang the old scamp!" said Mr. Darkridge, who was of a free-and-easy nature, and thought his girls a great deal too sweet and nice to be snarled at by any rich old miser. "Let him alone. My daughter's needn't go begging for any man's money."

But here Joscelind, the youngest, tallest and prettiest of the four girls, spoke up,—

"I'll go!" said she.

"You don't know what you are undertaking," said Naomi, with a shudder.

"He'd wear out a stone," said Magdalena.

"He's a ghoul!" shuddered Rhoda.

"I can get along with him, I am very sure," said Joscelind, brightly.

And she packed up her little trunk and went to Black Grange.

It was sunset—a red, flaming sunset like one of Gifford's pictures—when she came up the terraced flight of steps that led to the house. Everything blushed blood-red in the deep light, and Joscelind could see how lovely was the scenery, how substantial this old gray house, with its square towers and semi-circular, colonial porch. Uncle Black stood on the steps.

"So you are Joscelind?" said he, surveying her with little twinkling eyes, like glass beads.

"Yes, I am Joscelind," said the bright cheeked girl, giving him a kiss.

"You're late!" said Uncle Black.

"I am late," said Joscelind. "I thought the old beast of a stage never would have got here. The horses fairly crept and the roads were horrid."

"It's a dreadful warm day," growled Uncle Black.

"I am almost roasted," sighed Joscelind.

"The whole summer has been intolerably warm," said the old gentleman.

"We might as well be in the tropics and be done with it," retorted Joscelind, flinging off her shawl and fanning herself vehemently.

Uncle Black gave her the keys that night, just as he had three times before given them to her three sisters.

"I shall expect you to take charge of the whole establishment," said he. "The servants are miserable—"

"No more than one might expect," interrupted Joscelind, with a deprecatory motion of the hand. "Servants are mere frauds nowadays!"

"And nothing goes right about the place."

"Nothing ever does!" said Joscelind.

At breakfast next morning Uncle Black began to scold as usual.

"Fish again!" said he, "This makes four mornings this week we've had fish."

"And the rolls heavy again!" growled Uncle Black, breaking one open.

"Please give me the plate, Uncle Black," said Joscelind, and she rang the table-bell sharply.

"Betty," said Miss Darkridge, "be so good as to throw these rolls out of the window."

Betty stared.

"Do you hear what I tell you?" said Miss Darkridge, with emphasis.

And Betty flung the rolls out among the rosebushes, where they were speedily devoured by Cato, the Newfound-

"Crackers, of course," said Joscelind. "Anything is better than imperilling one's digestion with such stuff as this! And, Betty, if you send up any more fish in a month you may consider yourself discharged—do you hear?"

"But, my dear, I am rather fond of fish," put in the old gentleman.

"One can't eat fish the whole time," said Joscelind, imperiously. "Here, Betty, this coffee isn't fit to drink! and the toast is burned! and you must have put the cooking butter on the table by mistake! Let these errors be rectified at once."

Betty retired with an ominous rustle of her stiffly starched apron.

"My dear," said Uncle Black, apprehensively, "Betty is a very old servant, and—"

"I don't care if she is the age of Methuselah," said Joscelind; "nobody can be expected to put up with such wretched cooking as this!"

"I really think she is not so bad, it—"

"Oh, pray don't apologize for her, Uncle Black," said Joscelind. "They are all shiftless, lazy creatures, who must be discharged promptly if they don't do their duties."

Uncle Black began to look frightened. He had kept Betty, Sylvia and old John for ten years. Was it possible that he had scolded at them for ten years, only to have Joscelind Darkridge outscold him now?

"I wouldn't be too short with 'em, my dear, if I were you," he remonstrated.

"Then let them do their duty," said Joscelind, with the air of an empress.

"We are all mortal," pleaded Uncle Black.

"I expect every one around me to live up to their conditions," said Joscelind.

Uncle Black ate the rest of his breakfast with but little appetite. Sylvia, the housemaid, was finishing dusting his library when he entered it.

"Not through yet!" growled Uncle Black, the fretwork of wrinkles once more coming into his brow.

"Sylvia," said Miss Darkridge, severely, if this happens again I shall dispense with your services! Look at that clock! Is this the time of day to be dawdling about the rooms with a broom and duster? Remember Mr. Black does not pay exorbitant wages to lie in bed until noon!"

"My dear," said Uncle Black, "Sylvia is generally a very good girl, if—"

"Dear uncle," interrupted Joscelind, "pray permit me to be the judge of these matters. You have ruled your household with a slack and indulgent hand altogether too long. I shall now institute a reform."

And poor Sylvia had never moved about so briskly as she did that day.

Old John, the gardener, was not exempt from his share of the general turmoil. Miss Darkridge chanced to hear her uncle reproaching the old man for some fancied neglect in the flower beds, whose diamonds, ovals and crescents of brilliant colors were the pride of his horticultural heart, and she promptly came to his aid.

"Gardening, indeed! Do you call this gardening?" she said. "Uncle Black, I am astonished that you keep such a man as that about the place!"

And the torrent of taunts and reproaches which she showered upon the luckless head of poor old John was enough as that individual observed, "to make one's flesh creep."

"My niece is a young lady of spirit and energy," apologized Mr. Black, when at last Joscelind had gone back to the house.

"Verra like you, sir, verra like you!" said old John, scratching his head.

"Like me!" said Mr. Black, slowly.

And he stood full five minutes, quite speechless and motionless, staring at the mossy rim of an ancient sun-dial half sunk in the velvet grass. And at the end of five minutes he spoke two other words, and only two,—

"Like—me!"

"There's no knowin' the masther, he's that changed," said Betty, in the kitchen, a week or two later. "He's as mild as a lamb and as peaceable as a kitten."

"Sure, isn't that what the young lady told us," said Sylvia, "when she came down into the kitchen that first morning after the fire was lighted, and told us she was goin' to try an experiment, we wasn't to mind a word she said, cause it was all by contraries? 'He don't know what his temper has got to be,' said she, 'and I'm going to show him.' And, bless her sweet heart, her plan has worked like a charm."

It had, in good truth. Uncle Black was a changed man. And Joscelind had relapsed into the original sunshine of her temper—and all the domestic wheels of Black Grange seemed to revolve on velvet.

But Uncle Black took all the credit to himself. He never knew that Joscelind had taught him a lesson.

"We can get along very nicely," said he, "now that my niece has subdued those little tempers of hers."

And Joscelind was his heiress and darling after all—for he will always believe that it was he "who formed her character."—Cambridge Tribune.

I once had money and a friend;
On both I set great store;
I lent my money to my friend
And took his note therefor.

I asked my money of my friend,
And naught but words I got;
I lost my money and my friend,
For sue him I would not.

If I had money and a friend,
As I had once before,
I'd keep my money and my friend
And play the fool no more.

Queer Remedy for Toothache.

"This talk about careless and incompetent doctors," said the Captain, "amuses me, because the fellows who do the talking assume that there were no careless doctors in the old Union army. But with the good ones we had some bad ones. While in winter quarters in '62 our surgeon, old Major S., was made brigade surgeon, and the first assistant had charge of the hospital, which was a wall tent and about as cold as a modern refrigerator. The young sawbones pinned his faith to two remedies, castor oil and quinine. One morning at sick call one of the boys showed up with a roaring toothache. The doctor prescribed castor oil.

"Naturally the fellow 'kicked' and said that he did not think castor oil reached his complaint. The doctor replied that decayed teeth were caused by a disordered stomach, and if the stomach was all right the teeth would be all right, and if he did not take the oil he would not be excused from duty. The fellow with the toothache took the oil, which was dug out of a jar with a spatula by the hospital steward, as it was frozen to the consistency of good ice cream, and went on his way swearing. Whether his toothache was cured history sayeth not."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

INEBRIETY AMONG ANIMALS.

Birds and Even Insects Show a Love for Intoxicants.

It is a curious fact that there are topers innumerable in the animal kingdom. Bipeds and quadrupeds alike are fond of alcoholic drinks, and, although some display aversion when first tasting liquor, they soon acquire a craving for it.

Chickens and ducks, after having once tasted brandy, become absolute slaves to the drink. They refuse to eat, grow thin and exhibit symptoms of dejection when unable to obtain their favorite tipple.

Monkeys and apes are passionately fond of spirituous liquors. Of these Buffon's wine-bibbling chimpanzee was a shining example, and Brehm, the German zoologist, owned several mandrills that drank wine regularly and did not disdain brandy.

Herbivorous animals frequently become intoxicated, innocently enough, through eating decaying fruit. In orchards oxen and cows, after eating overripe apples, have been seen to display all the symptoms of drunkenness. They stagger, their eyes lose expression, and they grow sleepy.

It seems that animals are susceptible to alcoholism in proportion to the development of their intelligence. Elephants are fond of wine and rum, and rats gnaw the staves of wine casks to get at the contents. Cats, however, rarely exhibit a fondness for intoxicants.

Among birds the parrot takes first place as an habitual toper. Insects have many opportunities to become intoxicated, and it is the most active that most frequently avail themselves of the chance. There is an aromatic, intoxicating fluid in linden blossoms for which bees show an especial fondness.

Instances have been observed where swarms of bees regaled themselves with the poisonous linden nectar until they exhibited all the signs of intoxication. Hundreds fell helplessly to the roadside, to be trampled under foot.—New York Herald.

AN UNRECOGNIZED HERO.

A Soldier Who Died Clutching the Cherished Evidence of His Bravery.

In the two days' real fighting before Santiago men of the different regiments became mixed, and for a time were lost to their commands. This condition gave rise to the report that a certain few men had shown the "white feather."

One of the officers of General Lawton's division observed a colored trooper of the Tenth cavalry among his men, who explained that he had lost his command, and asked that he be allowed to remain where he was.

He stayed and did fine service that day, and none of his white comrades were able to outdo him in notable deeds of bravery. He twice risked his life assisting the wounded to places of safety, but each time escaped uninjured.

That night he asked the officer he had met earlier in the day to give him a note to his own commander, explaining his absence, and certifying to his good conduct during the fighting that day. This was willingly given him and with the precious paper clasped tightly in his hand, under cover of darkness, he started in search of his own command.

The next morning at dawn Lieutenant L——, starting on a search for wounded men in his division, happened to stumble over a prostrate body. He immediately recognized the brave cavalryman of the day before, who was fast losing consciousness.

After struggling a moment for strength to speak, the prostrate man held up his precious little slip of paper and said, "Give it to Captain A——, of L troop, if you can find him, and tell him Williams wa'n' no coward."

With a look of satisfaction in his eyes his hand dropped to his side, and he was dead.

That hero rests now in a shallow trench, with ten or twelve other unknown privates.—New York Herald.

POPULARITY OF PEANUTS.

They Came from Africa and Originally Were as Full of Grease as Pork.

The American people are evidently very partial to peanuts, remarked a large peanut planter in Virginia to the writer recently, for there are nearly 4,000,000 bushels of them consumed in the United States annually. Before the Civil War the peanut was only a holiday luxury to the majority of the people living in the North, the day when the circus was in town, during the country fair and the great and glorious Fourth of July being the principal occasions that the popular yearning for the nut was in any measure satisfied. The product then amounted to barely 500,000 bushels a year.

"I don't suppose there are many people who know that the peanut came to this country with the first cargo of slaves that were landed on our shores. It is a native of Africa and in its original state as full of grease as a bit of pork. Cultivation and change of soil have greatly reduced the oleaginous quality of the nut, although the North Carolina variety has enough grease yet to find a ready sale in France, where it joins its African ancestor and cottonseed in supplying not a little of the olive oil we find in the restaurants and family groceries. Norfolk, Va., is the greatest peanut centre in the world, and handles annually 200,000 bags, or 8,000,000 bushels.

"It is a pretty sight to see a peanut plantation when the vines are in blossom. The blossoms are a bright yellow and the vines are a vivid green. As soon as the blossom appears a fine branch forms on the vine and shoots down into the ground. The peas, or the nuts are called on the plantation, form on the shoot beneath the ground like potatoes. When the crop is gathered in October the vine is plowed up and the nuts hang to the roots. Vine and all are piled in cocks in the field and in twenty days the nuts are ready to be pulled off, placed in bags and taken to the factories. There they are cleansed of dirt, assorted, polished in revolving cylinders and put into bags ready for the market."—Washington Star.

Spain's boy King was one day admiring some heavy ordinance and questioning his tutor as to the method of using it. The mentor answered willingly, but, by way of recapitulating all he had said and closing the door to further questions, remarked "All good artillery officers find it easy enough. They merely learn mathematics, trigonometry and—" "And shall I learn these things?" asked the King. "Why, certainly," was the reply; "there is no royal road to science." "Oh, I'm glad of that!" cried the little monarch; "a royal road seems to mean the most disagreeable way of learning anything, so I'm pleased to hear there's none."—New York Press.

NEW JERSEY STORMBOUND.

TRAFFIC NEARLY SUSPENDED THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE STATE.

Ten Inches of Snow in Plainfield—Streets Blocked—Trolley System in Trouble—Trains all Late—Some Did Not Run at All—Bad Drifts Reported Everywhere.

New Jersey and New York are just recovering from a snow storm, the fiercest and most far-reaching in its effects of any since the memorable blizzard of 1888. It was, in fact, quite a formidable blizzard and New York and all the surrounding country was snow-bound in truth. Railroads, street car lines and elevated tracks were blocked and traffic was practically suspended. The storm began gently Saturday noon and continued slowly increasing in force until it attained its height Saturday night. Early sunday morning the snow stopped falling but a gale from the northeast had set in and carried the snow into huge drifts. On a level tnere was ten inches of snow but the drifts were, in some places, as many feet deep. Coming as it did so early in the season, the storm caught the country unprepared to meet it.

IN THE CITY.

Church Attendance Slim—Few Ventured Out—Hard Time for the Hackmen.

Yesterday found most of Plainfield at home. The situation out of doors was not tempting and those who did not have to go out were glad to remain within doors. Everything was practically at a standstill. There were only a few who braved the storm to venture out to church and the morning services were very slimly attended. Attempts were made to clean sidewalks early in the morning, but in many cases it did no good, as the high wind so drifted the snow over the path. It was somewhat better in the afternoon in the more closely built up sections of the city. The attendance at the sessions of the Sunday-schools was consequently larger. The wind increased in violence as the full moon came up at nightfall, and most of the evening services were given up.

The Sunday newspaper men had a hard row to hoe. The morning paper trains were nearly three hours late. Then some of the smaller carriers succumbed to the power of the storm and new men had to be substituted. As a result the newspapers were not all delivered until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The liverymen were joyful Saturday night when the promise of sleighing for the morrow was so bright. The high gale, however, made sleighing decidedly uncomfortable yesterday, and there were comparatively few sleighs out.

The hackmen had a hard time of it, for the snow was so deep in places as to make going almost impossible. There was a great demand for hacks, of course, as many did not care to face the storm and wind afoot. Horses slipped and fell and were soon exhausted.

The sleighing was not good, the snow drifting too much. On the outskirts of the city, where the wind had full sweep, the drifts were deep, measuring five and six feet in places. The sidewalks there were impassable, and the few pedestrians were driven to take the middle of the roadway or else wade waist deep in drifts. Up to this morning the outlying sections of the city were practically storm-bound.

FRONT STREET IMPASSABLE.

Street Department Men Opened It Up—Also Did Other Work About City.

Street Commissioner Gavett was on hand early Sunday morning. With the high winds blowing there was little that he and his men could do. A report soon came in that East Front street at Cole's hill was impassable. The snow had formed high sloping drifts that overturned every sleigh that reached them. Several milkmen came to grief there in their efforts to reach the city. The drifts were nearly ten feet in height in places. The city scraper was sent to the scene and managed to clear away some of the snow with difficulty It was necessary to keep at work constantly as the wind filled up the gaps at once.

Park avenue, beyond Randolph road, was reported to be almost impassable. Several upsets were reported there in the deep drifts.

Yesterday afternoon the regular gang from the street department was at work removing the snow from the crosswalks. Seeing that his regular force was far too small, Mr. Gavett increased it. The crosswalks in the business section were all cleaned and many in the other parts of the town.

Today the department men began work on such sidewalks as had not been cleaned since the storm and the owners will have to pay for it. It is probable that some arrests will be made for failure to clean off the sidewalks twenty-four hours after the storm when the work is supposed to be done within four hours.

THE TROLLEY TROUBLES.

Local Line Unable to Run Over Its Entire Route—Cars Stopped Awhile.

The storm caught the cars of the Plainfield Street Railway and about 2 o'clock yesterday morning all traffic on the several lines were stopped. Fortunately the cars were able to reach shelter at the car house, and were not obliged to remain outside all night. Under the supervision of Superintendent Adleman the sweeper was kept agoing, but the snow reached such a depth that this work had to be stopped early. It was finally decided that it was useless to continue the work while the snow was falling so fast.

Early yesterday morning the snow plows were started again and at 10 o'clock after a great deal of hard work the tracks were cleared on the main line from Woodland avenue to Grant avenue, and from the car house to Johnston's Drive on the Fourth street and Somerset street line. All day yesterday the cars got no further toward Dunellen than Grant avenue.

The wind blew the snow back as fast as it was removed and all efforts to reach Dunellen were in vain. The employes of the road have kept at their work and the line will soon be opened through to Dunellen. The other parts will soon be opened as well.

RAILROADS IN TROUBLE.

Traffic on the Jersey Central Greatly Delayed by the Storm.

All the railroads whose terminals are located in Jersey City felt the severity of the storm. Trains were delayed many hours and some did not run at all. The officials of the Jersey Central Railroad were kept busy all Saturday and Sunday nights. The heavy snowfall of Saturday night combined with the high winds blocked the switches in the Jersey City yard making it very difficult to get any of the trains started. The trains leaving New York at 11:45 and 12:15 Saturday night, did not arrive in Plainfield until 6 o'clock Sunday morning. It took twenty minutes for the trains to go through the Fanwood cut. The wind had drifted the snow in there to a great depth through which the locomotive found great difficulty in making their way. Freight and coal traffic was practically at a standstill. One coal train went through with three engines pulling it.

The newspaper train, due here at 5:45, did not arrive until 8 o'clock. It was then composed of three cars instead of eight as usual. The 2:08 and 5:15 trains never came at all. A snow plow, pushed by two powerful locomotives, passed through here at 7 o'clock. It went on to Somerville and started on the Flemington branch to get stalled in a deep cut near Flagtown.

The Newark-Elizabeth branch was blocked until late Sunday morning. The first train from the west was the Philadelphia express, due at 6:59 o'clock. It arrived after 10 o'clock. Two engines were used on all of the P. & R. trains and on some of the locals.

The snow drifted into a cut near Finderne delaying all the trains from Somerville yesterday. None of the trains were on time either way and all were from half an hour to three hours late.

The wind of the night made things even worse and the Flemington branch was still blockaded. Trains from Phillipsburg and Easton encountered enormous drifts west of Somerville and were unable to get through until late this morning. The Fanwood cut still troubled the local traffic and delayed trains. Most of the morning trains that carry the local commuters to New York were almost on time when they left Plainfield. They were late in arriving at Jersey City, however. The 7:55 train, which comes through from Flemington, had to be made up at Somerville as the Flemington train was unable to get through.

The railroad company is hard at work and expects to get things in running order by tonight unless the wind increases in violence. There are snow plows at work besides gangs of men with shovels.

WIRES SUFFERED LITTLE.

Only a Few Telephone Wires Went Down Before the Fury of the Big Storm.

There has not been a storm in many months during which so little damage was done to the electric light, telephone and telegraph wires. None of them were down except a few telephone wires on Prospect and Putnam avenues, and the service was not interrupted at all.

The telegraph wires stayed in place, and this kept up communication all along the line. The electric light wires suffered no damage, and the lights shone through the storm. Superintendent McClurg, of the Electric Light Company, says that the storm did no damage to the wires because it was such a dry snow, and blew away before it had time to settle and stick. The leaves being all off the trees, there was less thrashing and whipping, and this also protected the wires.

The storm has put a sudden stop to the work being done on the electric light trenches. Saturday night, fortunately, Patsey Christmas, the contractor, covered them all up as far as he had gone. This morning he dug from below Second street to North avenue, to the manhole, and when the pipes are laid there, he will stop work for the season.

THE TROLLEYS BLOCKED.

Lines All Over the State Are Blockaded by the Storm—Cars Stalled.

Outside of this city, the suburban trolley lines were compelled to suspend operations Saturday afternoon and evening, and few have yet resumed. Despite all efforts, communication will not be resumed until some time today. In other neighboring cities, the trolley lines suffered greatly and traffic was suspended almost for twenty-four hours.

In New Brunswick the trolley system of the Brunswick Traction Company, which extends from New Brunswick to the neighboring towns of Milltown, South River, Metuchen and Bound Brook, was the first to suffer from the fierceness of the snow storm. As early as 5 o'clock the trolley officials had the snow sweepers and snow plows out on the line of the road, and a vain effort was made to keep the line opened. Before midnight it was found to be impossible to keep even the city line in operation, and several cars became stalled in heavy snowdrifts outside of the city.

One of the cars of the trolley line became stalled in a deep snowbank on the line from New Brunswick to Metuchen, shortly after 5 o'clock. There were six women among the passengers, and the party of about ten spent several hours in the car before they were able to get out and reach a dwelling.

A car on the line to Bound Brook became stalled in a snowdrift late Saturday night. Several hacks were sent after the passengers and they were taken back to New Brunswick. Several of them wanted to go to Somerville, and some of them did not have sufficient money to pay their car fare or hotel bills, and they had to be sent home by the Brunswick Traction Company.

It was nearly noon yesterday before the traction company managed to get the tracks in New Brunswick cleared sufficiently to permit of the moving of

HONORED THE MEMORY OF THE LATE JUDGE.

Impressive Funeral Service of the Late Judge DeMeza.

VERY LARGE ATTENDANCE.

IT WAS HELD IN THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. Acted as Guard of Honor—Delegations of Red Men, Knights of the A. E. O. and Lawyers Present—Mayor and Council Attend in a Body.

City Judge George W. DeMeza has passed away to another land from whence none return. But the remembrance of him still remains. Yesterday afternoon, the last sad rites were held and friends, fraternal comrades, and business associates gathered in the First Presbyterian church to do honor to his memory. It was one of the grandest and most impressive funeral ceremonies ever witnessed in Plainfield, for the young judge had a host of friends who braved the elements to show their regard for the departed one.

Saturday afternoon, from 2 to 6 o'clock, the late City Judge rested in state at his old home on West Second street. The cover of the casket had been removed and the familiar face, so white and still, was gazed at for the last time by the sorrowing friends. Despite the snow storm that raged outside, there were a host of them who came to bid farewell as it were to their once active friend.

The funeral yesterday afternoon began at 2:30 o'clock. The two central sections of seats were reserved for the societies of which Judge DeMeza was a member and the other special guests. The side sections and gallery were filled even before the hour of beginning.

The members of Franklin and Somerset Councils, J. O. U. A. M. marched to the church in a body and acted as guard of honor. The members formed an open aisle leading to the church door and there waited. The members of Miantonomo and Paughcaughnaughsinque tribes of Red Men, in regalia, marched between the rows of attendant Juniors and took seats on the right of the centre aisle. They were followed by a delegation of the members of the Ancient Essenic Order, numbering about forty.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, City Treasurer W. F Arnold and Sheriff William T Kirk were given seats in the front pews. A few minutes later all the members of the Common Council together with several other of the city officials were seated just behind the Mayor on the right. Behind them came the members of the Plainfield Bar. The inclement weather kept many of the out-of-town lawyers away but there was a representation of the Union County Bar outside of Plainfield. The law students were also present seated together.

For sometime preceding the opening of the service soft minor harmonies swept out from the organ. Sorrow seemed to fill the very tones. At last the side door swung quietly open and the black casket, with its silver trimmings, was borne into the auditorium by six of Plainfield's most prominent men in the legal profession, Senator Charles A. Reed, Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Former Judge W. M. Stillman and Councilman Wm. N. Runyon.

At the same time there entered from the rear of the sanctuary, the bereaved mother leaning on the arm of her now eldest son, William G. DeMeza and the other members of the family. Following were the intimate friends of the late Judge. All were seated on the left of the centre aisle. In the space remaining the members of the Junior Order occupied, filing in behind the mourning ones. Then eleven policemen in full uniform, led by Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely and Roundsmen Frederickson and Flynn, entered and took their place in the rear pews of that section.

The seating of the people was done by the ushers, Francis J. Blatz, Charles J. McNaub, Robert M. Clark and Harry C Runyon, co-workers of the late Judge in the legal profession. After the arrival of the cortage, the rear of the church was speedily filled by those for whom there were no seats.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the church, officiated at the service. He opened the service by reading the 23d Psalm, after which he led in prayer and made his remarks, which were tender and comforting to the be-

DEATH CAME WHILE HE WAS AT WORK.

Sudden Death of Robert F. Randolph Saturday Night.

THERE WAS NO WARNING.

HAD JUST REMOVED THE SNOW FROM THE SIDEWALK.

Mr. Randolph Had Conversed With a Press Reporter a Moment Before—Complained That He Was Getting Weak—Fell by the Back Porch—Wife Heard Him Groan—Died From Rupture of a Vein.

Without a moment's warning death came suddenly and painlessly to Robert F. Randolph, of 119 Elmwood place, last Saturday evening at 5:30, and the community was deeply shocked when the sad news was heard about the city.

Mr. Randolph has been employed at the Pond Tool and Machine Works for nine years, and on Saturday afternoon he came home from his work early, as is customary on that day. On arriving home he secured a shovel and proceeded to remove the heavy fall of snow from his front walk and the walks about his house. While he was shovelling the snow from the front walk he conversed with a reporter of The Daily Press, and he remarked about the heavy fall of snow and how difficult it was for him to shovel snow now that he was getting old. He complained a little about his not being strong enough to do the work. As he made these remarks he concluded his work, and these were the last words spoken by him. He then walked around the side of his house to the back porch. Just as he reached the porch he fell suddenly on the board walk and after a few gasps he passed away.

Mr. Randolph's wife was alone in the kitchen and she heard a noise and a groan. She hastened to the back door and there she saw her husband lying out stretched and apparently unconscious. She spoke to him, but no answer came back. Mrs. Randolph then called Daniel Page, a neighbor, and with his assistance Mr. Randolph was carried into the house and placed on a couch.

Examination soon proved that life had left the body and Mr. Randolph was dead. His sudden death is supposed to have been caused by his fall, as the physician thinks that a bloodvessel was ruptured. At first it was thought that his heart was the trouble, but this theory was not substantiated.

Mr. Randolph was sixty-six years of age, and was one of Plainfield's oldest and most respected citizens. He was the son of the late Joseph Randolph, who was one of the pioneer citizens of this place. Mr. Randolph was, by trade, a carpenter, and nine years ago he secured a position at his trade in the Pond Tool and Machine Works under Andrew McCardle. The latter, in speaking about Mr. Randolph, says that he was the hardest worker in his departtment, and that it will be almost impossible to fill his place. He always worked for his employer's interest and was faithful to the last.

Mr. Randolph lived a very quiet and retired life. Several years ago his daughter died, leaving his wife and himself. He was a good citizen, a kind neighbor and a faithful and loving husband. His interests were in his home, and there was no place that he preferred to it. Being of domestic habits, he loved to keep his home and property in the best of condition. Outside of business hours, he could almost always be seen working about his place, fixing here and there. His death will cause a severe loss in the home, and in his place of business.

A few years ago his mother and sister died, and there is only one left in the family, his brother, Joseph J. Randolph, who lives on the same street only a few doors away.

Mrs. Randolph, who is left alone, has the sympathy of a host of friends and neighbors. She is the sister of Mrs. William H. Shotwell and Mrs. L. E. Barkalew, both of the borough.

The funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and interment will be at Hillside Cemetery.

The First Sleigh.

"Gene" Laine, the South Plainfield hotel keeper, called at The Daily Press office Saturday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, in a sleigh, the first one, he says, on the road this winter.

Taken to Hillside Vault.

The remains of the late City Judge DeMeza were taken to the vault at Hillside Cemetery this morning, and will be interred as soon as the weather permits.

THE HILLSIDE LINKS CLOSED FOR SEASON

Last Match Played Saturday Morning for Fisk Cup.

A SUCCESSFUL SEASON.

COURSE WILL BE OPENED IN THE SPRING FOR PLAY.

In the Contest for Fisk Junior Handicap Cup, A. G. Fisk Won—Final Ownership of Cup to be Played for Next Spring—Mixed Foursomes for the Gilbert Cup Were Not Played.

After a season of great success the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club were closed Saturday, and will not be used again until next spring. The last event to be played took place last Saturday morning when the Fisk junior handicap cup was contested for by six members. The day was not a pleasant one, but good scores were made. The winner of the cup was A. G. Fisk with a net score of 103. He will hold the cup until next spring when it will be finally contested for permanent ownership by A. G. Fisk, G. H. Richards, Parker Mason, Owen Fleming, Jr., N. P. Rogers, Jr., M. J. Dumont. All of them have won the cup and a great spirit of rivalry has and still exists for the final ownership.

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
A. G. Fisk	105	2	103
C. W. Fisk	107	3	104
M. J. Dumont	106	scratch	106
G. H. Richards	121	3	118
N. P. Rogers, Jr.	128	5	123
H. Dupee Wright	148	18	130

The mixed foursomes for the Gilbert cup were not played in the afternoon on account of the weather. The grounds will now be covered and enclosed and will be kept so until next spring when they will be put in shape for the spring, summer and fall play.

The members of the club feel highly gratified with the success of the past season, and although the links were opened late they were in very good condition. By next year they hope to have the grounds in far better condition, and so on with each succeeding year. The officers of the club deserve much credit for their management of affairs and to them is due much praise.

ROUTE OF NEW TROLLEY.

SLIGHT CHANGES OVER THAT ALREADY PUBLISHED.

Will Pass the Golf Links and Go Out Woodland Avenue to the Oak Tree Road Passing the Marconnier Chapel.

The project to build a trolley line from Plainfield to Metuchen, as was told exclusively in Saturday's Daily Press, has attracted much attention in Plainfield and all along the line of the projected road. In the account, however, there was a slight error as to the proposed route of the trolley line.

As told in The Daily Press, the line will start on Prospect avenue near Park avenue, thence running south on Woodland avenue, passing the Crescent Oval, Hillside Cemetery and the Hillside golf links. Instead of turning to the left on the Mt. Pleasant road, the line will follow Woodland avenue past the golf links, the driving park and on to Marconnier, passing close by the little chapel there. There a tour will be made to the left and the Lehigh Valley Rail road will be crossed and the Oak Tree road followed in the turn to the right on to Pumptown and thence according to the route already published.

It is not yet decided how the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks will be crossed. The present bridge is hardly wide enough to allow the cars to run over it. That would necessitate a new bridge, or practically a new one by widening the present structure. It is possible that a new road may be cut through crossing the railroad tracks at grade and that the trolley line will follow it. These, however, are details which will not interfere with the general plan and will have to be settled as they are reached.

Entertained His Young Friends.

A pleasant event of Saturday afternoon was the party given by Edward Hayman, aged thirteen years, to twenty of his school friends from the Bryant Public School. The affair was given between 2 and 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. Drain, an aunt of the young host, who resides at 73 Leland avenue. During the afternoon the young people had a general good time playing games, etc., after which refreshments, consisting of ice cream and fruit, were served in abundance.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, of Coddington avenue, are entertaining Mr. Huff's mother, sister and brother from Centreville, N. J.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE DISCUSSED IN PULPIT.

Rev. Chas. E. Herring Preached on That Subject.

SAYS THEORY IS FALSE.

IT CLAIMS SIN, SICKNESS AND DEATH NOT REAL.

Rev. Mr. Herring Preached a Straight Sermon Last Night—Claimed That Christian Science Could Not Agree With the Unchangeable Facts—Discussed the Alleged Wonderful Healings.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, chose "Christian Science" as the subject of his evening sermon and spoke as follows:

"Is a belief in Christian science consistent with a belief in historic Christianity?—I answer no—Christian science is neither scientific nor Christian—we are especially interested in the religious phase of it.

"It denies the incarnation of our Lord. God cannot become finite. It makes therefore a distinction between Jesus and Christ—Jesus was a godlike man. The Christ is the divinity of the man Jesus. There is nothing of this in the New Testament. The creed says the son which is the word of the father begotten from everlasting of the father and of one substance with the father took man's nature, etc. Godhead and manhood were joined together in one person never to be divided.

"The Jesus of Christian science was only a man, the Christ is God's spiritual eternal ideas, undistinguishable from God.

"Christian science offends in its theory of sin. There is no atonement, for there is no sin—man is the reflection of God, and is capable of sin inasmuch as he derives his essence from God.

"The only reality of sin, sickness or death is the awful fact that unrealities seem real to human belief until God strips them of their disguise.

"Scripture asserts that sin is the result of disobedience, a transgression of law. Christian science asserts that it is not a reality, but simply a result of inverted thinking—a phantom. The experience of a dream seems real. This is the only reality of sin.

"The theory denies the Scripture and the intuitions of men. Such doctrine, if believed extensively, would have a disastrous effect. If sin is only a phantom, if God is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, what an opportunity for sinful man to plunge into the wildest excesses. Mind has a tremendous power over bodily ailments. At the grotto of Lourdes cures are achieved where hospitals have failed. Hindoo fakirs and Indian medicine men have accomplished similar results. The ordinary physician seeks the patient's co-operation; scientific men parallel these cures by scientific methods through mental suggestion; and there is no need of such religious theories as deprive us of the fatherhood of God and of the atonement of prayer to a personal God, for Mrs. Eddy says 'audible prayer cannot change the unalterable truth or give us an understanding of it.'"

An Unfortunate Game.

Raymond A. McGee, of Orchard avenue, Washington Park, returned from Yale University Wednesday evening to spend Thanksgiving at home and take part in the football game here. He attended the "tank drama" at New Haven as the Yale-Harvard game is suggestively named, and caught a heavy cold standing out in the rain that afternoon. He is now confined to his home with an attack of the grip brought on by the exposure. He will be detained to his home for several days.

Part of His Fine Returned.

It is reported on excellent authority that J. Harry Green, of the borough, who was recently fined $60 for having rabbits in his possession which he claimed he shot in New York State, where the law was up, has had $40 of the amount refunded to him. It is said that the State authorities have ascertained that the $60 fine was illegal, hence the refunding of a portion of the amount.

A Strong Argument.

At the First Church of Christ last evening Mr. Horton, the adventist, proved by translation of the Bible that it argued against anyone using strong drink. Debates on this subject have been held at Reform Hall for sometime, but it remained for Mr. Horton to give the explanation of the subject.

'Twas the Relief Association.

It was not the Organized Aid Association which distributed Thanksgiving dinners among the poor Wednesday, but the Relief Association.

PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal contains within itself the germs of certain decay and death.

In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists Ptomaines), are usually the result of imperfect digestion of food; the result of indigestion or dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass, which ferments (the first process of decay), poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain, causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation, and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first.

BOMB FOR WAR BOARD

Roosevelt's Stinging Letter Stirs Up the Commissioners.

CAN DECIDE WITHOUT HELP

The War Commission Listen to the Testimony of Dr M. R. Terry Surgeon-General of the National Guard of the State of New York and Pres. Baldwin of the L. I. R. R. Then a Letter from R. Roosevelt is Read.

New York, Nov. 28.—The first witness before the war board Saturday was Dr. M. R. Terry, surgeon general of the National Guard of the state of New York. He told of his observations while on a tour among the army camps.

Dr. Joseph Chmelicek, acting assistant surgeon in the army, who was assigned to duty in the hospital at West Tampa, testified that everything possible was done for the sick soldiers.

W. H. Baldwin, Jr., of the Long Island Railroad Company made a lengthy statement. At the close a letter from Robert B. Roosevelt, secretary of the committee for the protection of soldiers, was received, which was as follows:

New York, Nov. 26.

To the Presidential Commission of Inquiry:

Gentlemen: I have noticed in the morning press that one of your members criticises the witnesses who have testified at the request of the committee formed in this city to protect the soldiers, for the reason that, while establishing the fact that much groundless and inexcusable suffering was inflicted on the army, they do not fix the responsibility nor show who is to blame.

If the views of your commission are correctly reported, there seems to be a misunderstanding between us. We supposed all the witnesses were to do was to prove the facts, and that the commission would fix the responsibility—indeed, was appointed for the express purpose of fixing the responsibility—and that it would have been a case of presumption, might be even a case of cruel injustice, if any witness had undertaken to express his opinion on the condition of which he was of necessity only partly informed, for the men who are guilty of the ill treatment of our soldiers will be execrated in this community. No one knows better than myself how deep this feeling is. Any party or person who trifles with it will regret doing so, and any person, who, through ignorance or prejudice, directs it into an erroneous channel is doing a great wrong. The heroic boys may forget their sufferings, may even refuse to testify to them, but their mothers will not and their fathers will not.

Nor will it do to take refuge behind the errors of the civil war. Then we were wholly taken by surprise at the North. No one here could believe in the possibility of so hideous a folly There followed blunder after blunder disgrace after disgrace. There was no intentional cruelty, such as has so often prevailed in this war, but do you forget the rumors of peculation, the paper shoes, the shoddy clothing, the demurrage on transport? But the men were not starved and the sick were treated with all possible attention and kindness. Water was not sold to fever racked sufferers at ten cents a glass, food was not sold to starving men at 25 cents for a sandwich, and dainties for the dying were not eaten by the officers.

But suppose matters had been a thousand times worse in the civil war, would that be any reason now that our men should be sent with arms out of date, that there should be no ambulances, no pack trains or transportation to carry food to the front, not half sufficient medicine or doctors, no proper hospitals, and that men with freshly treated wounds should be left to lie in the mud on a blanket, if they had one, without if they had none, nor even why mid-winter underclothing should be sent to Cuba and midsummer gauze undersuits to Montauk, in company with the siege guns intended for Santiago?

The witnesses have established monstrous incapacity, even greater negligence and indifference and political interference. That they have not full confidence in the power of your commission, no matter how good its will to meet all the requirements the public demands of it, is only echoing your own doubts, but in spite of that they seem to have done their share, and it would seem that it only remains for you to do your best, even if that best is not quite satisfactory to yourselves. If done in good faith it will teach the soldiers that at least there is a power which has honestly endeavored to do them justice; has endeavored to revive that patrictism which was so grandly flourished five months ago, but has been nipped in the frost of brutality and neglect. You can direct your inquiries in the first place to the food supply. Find out who gets the difference between the liberal rations allowed by the government and the meagre hardtack, bacon and green coffee served to the soldiers. The witnesses are the books and rolls in the public departments, to which you have full access. Find out who left the medicines, the two fully equipped hospitals and the ambulances at Tampa, when there was abundant time to ship them on the transports which were delayed for a week by the rumors of the Spanish fleet. Why General Miles's intelligent directions to make a list of everything which was stowed on board and where, so each article could easily be got at, and to put a variety on each ship, were not followed.

How can any witness within our reach give you this information? We have furnished you the facts, shown you brutality, cruelty, neglect, indifference, how men whom the government was under every obligation to protect and who had a right to rely on such protection, were starved even in a land of plenty, were uncared for when sick, left without attention when wounded, were abused, maltreated, in some cases practically murdered. We have shown you an indifference and belittling of human sufferings which continues even now. If this nation is to become a warlike one, if we are to have an army which shall be efficient, and to be relied upon, these crimes and blunders must be corrected, and your commission must correct them. It is not for you to make the feeble excuse that our committee, a mere voluntary association, with no legal power, no legal existence even, shall shoulder this responsibility for you. In saying this I do not mean in the least to express a doubt of either your ability or desire to do so, for the whole country urges upon you the necessity to succeed.

Yours very respectfully,
ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.
Secretary Committee for Protection of the Soldiers.

General Dodge suggested that the letter be received and filed. Captain Howell seconded the motion.

"We have invited all the witnesses to tell everything they know," he said, "and we have made and are making every honest effort to get witnesses and to get the truth from them. I do not see that Mr. Roosevelt's letter deserves any answer. I am ready to stand on the record of the commission when the commission has made a record. I do not need Mr. Roosevelt nor any one else to make up my mind for me."

The afternoon session completed the work of the commission in this city, and the members went to Boston by the midnight train.

GENERAL BUTLER'S REPORT.

Work of the Evacuation Commission Proceeding Smoothly.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—General M. C. Butler of South Carolina, a member of the Cuban evacuation commission, arrived here Saturday from Havana in response to a telegraphic summons from President McKinley and in the afternoon he had a two hours' consultation with the president at the White House.

He made an extended report of the terms upon which the Spaniards had agreed to complete the evacuation by January 1.

General Butler gave it as his opinion that all the Spanish troops will have departed ten days before the date fixed in the agreement.

He says that the Spanish officials and American commissioners work with admirable fairness, and that there has been little friction

In addition to his report upon the actual work of the committee, General Butler gave to the president much information as to the general situation in Cuba, the ability of the Cubans for self government, the sanitary condition of Havana and the general results of his observations during his stay there.

He thinks that the military government of the island must be continued for some time, but that it should only be as vigorous as may be necessary to preserve order. If military control is exercised with discretion he believes there will be little trouble.

General Butler describes Havana now as a pest hole, filled with filth and destitution. The Spanish authorities have agreed to inaugurate the work of putting the city in a sanitary condition with the aid of the American authorities, and the work to this end is to begin at once.

The general paid a high tribute to the discipline and uncomplaining suffering of the Spanish troops. They endured hardships, he said, which would have caused American soldiers to revolt.

HOLLAND'S QUEEN TO WED.

Betrothal to Prince William of Wied, Now Practically Settled.

London, Nov. 28.—The young queen of Holland, who recently displayed her strong will by recalling a whole issue of postage stamps because her portrait on them made her look too girlish, is again showing her spirit in the question of her betrothal to Prince William of Weide, an officer in the German army, which has been practically settled upon.

The official announcement of the betrothal has been kept back on account of certain difficulties in the protocol, the question being whether the prince should be invested with the rights and perogatives of prince consort or retain his present rank.

Unless the former plan is adopted neither the laws of Holland nor the foreign courts will recognize him as a member of the Dutch royal family. The Weide family insist upon the title of prince consort, but Queen Wilhelmina demands that Queen Victoria's precedent be followed and that the title of prince consort be not conferred until eighteen months after the marriage.

It is expected, however, that the difficulty will be overcome before long. The wedding has already been fixed to take place at The Hague next spring.

Hobson Will Return to Annapolis.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—Naval Constructor Hobson arrived at Washington yesterday from Norfolk and came directly to the navy department. He has just returned from his trip on the Vulcan to Cat island, the scene of the casting away of the Infanta Maria Teresa.

He brought with him the report of Captain McCalla, who was in charge of the expedition sent on the Vulcan to endeavor to save the vessel. The report is merely an elaboration of the history of the journey and its results already contained in the telegraph report to the department and where it touches upon the present condition of the Teresa makes the wreck appear even more hopeless than Captain McCalla's telegram.

This statement was strongly reinforced by Constructor Hobson's verbal report to Acting Secretary Allen.

Captain McCalla will resume his duties as captain of the Norfolk navy yard.

Constructor Hobson will go to Annapolis to take up the direction of his course in naval architecture. He was desirous of returning to Santiago and endeavoring to raise the Colon, but the department had made other arrangements that made this impracticable.

British Seize An Island

London, Nov. 28.—According to a dispatch from Shanghai to a news agency published here yesterday afternoon, the British admiral has hoisted the union jack over Tinghai, capital of the island of Chusan and over several other islands in the Chusan archipelago

SPAIN WILL SIGN NOW

Instructions Said to Have Been Sent from Madrid.

WILL MAKE NO PROTEST

Paris Advices Say That American Demand Will be Met To-day. After the Peace Convention Commercial Treaties to be Arranged. Peace Commission Says Open Door Does Not Mean Free Trade.

Madrid, Nov. 28.—The Imparcial says "the Spanish government thought that after the signing of the peace treaty friendly relations between the United States and Spain would be resumed, and the government would negotiate directly on matters of secondary importance.

"But the last note of the United States requests that the Paris commissioners be empowered to arrange a revision of the treaties of commerce and a special treaty for the Philippines, as well as settle other questions. The Spanish cabinet is obliged to accede to the request, and therefore several additional sessions of the commission will be necessary after to-day's session.

"Instructions were sent to Senor Montero Rios ordering him again to insist that the absolute rights of Spain in the Philippines should be maintained in accordance with the very clear text of article 3 of the protocol. However the government declares that Senor Montero Rios will sign the peace treaty without reserve, as its signature under protest will deprive the treaty of a definite character and leave matters as bad as they are now, and we have ministerial authority for saying that the government desires the speediest settlement of these matters, as otherwise they may result in grave dangers to Spain."

Spain Will Not Ask More Time.

Paris, Nov. 28.—Spain will not ask for time beyond to-day. She will then meet the Americans and make a conclusive reply.

Speculation continues rife here as to the acceptance or refusal of the American terms, but a majority of those who are in any degree able to judge believe that Spain will yield, and the American commissioners expect that a treaty will be signed.

Regarding the discussion of the so called "open door" policy in the Philippines, the American peace commissioners understand that it does not mean free trade nor even low duties, but that the Philippines, whatever the tariff rates, shall be open to all trade on equal terms.

The Philippine islands will be expected to yield sufficient revenue to meet the expenses of its own administration, and a large schedule of dutiable goods may be established, or only a few may be taxed.

This constitutes a question, but an immaterial one. Another and a more important question will be solved favorably to other nations. Thus, the ships of all nations will be permitted to engage in commerce throughout the archipelago. This is in contradistinction of the United States' interdict of coast trade in foreign bottoms, which may possibly extend also to Cuba and Porto Rico. The advantage to the United States in the Philippines' coasting trade lies in the fact that American goods will only have one ocean to cross, while the goods of other nations must cross two oceans.

Don Carlos Has Money and Men.

London, Nov. 28.—An English Carlist positively asserts that Don Carlos's army will take the field in Spain soon after the treaty of peace is signed.

He declares that a loan has been fully financed, and that it is divided equally between France and England, and he adds that after the English capitalists were shown the evidences on which Don Carlos's chances of success are based they offered several times the amount asked.

Finally, the English Carlist asserts, much more money would have been secured had it not been for the fact that Don Carlos stipulated that there should be no assistance from Jews, as he is apprehensive of their obtaining financial control of the monarchy.

Continuing, it was asserted that the Spanish government has known for some time that Don Carlos possessed an army, organized into battalions and batteries, officered and largely armed. But the Spanish ministers counted on his failure to secure funds. Therefore, the Spanish government is said to be panic stricken and to be endeavoring to make the Spaniards believe that Great Britain has agreed to finance Don Carlos and that he in return has undertaken to cede the Canary islands to Great Britain in the event of success.

New Justice for Santiago.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 28.—General Wood has appointed Senor Eudaldo Tamayo chief justice of the supreme court, and Senores Jose Berela and M. de J. Mandulay associate justices.

The chief justice will receive a salary of $3,500 a year and each of the associate justices a salary of $3,000.

These are about half the salaries paid to the chief justice and associate justices in the Spanish regime, but owing to the fact that the officials now receive full pay instead of, as before, being paid less than half their salaries, the positions are now really worth more than they were under the Spanish sovereignty.

The men appointed are well known Cubans who have been connected for years with the Bar Association of Santiago and have held many important positions and their appointment apparently gives satisfaction to all classes of inhabitants.

Ordered to Cuba.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 28.—The 4th Tennessee regiment, Col. Gideon Le-roy Brown, will go to Cuba this week. The orders came by telegraph yesterday.

The regiment will proceed to the province of Santa Clara, which may mean the capital city, Santa Clara, Cienfuegos or Trinidad.

Brigadier General Snyder and staff will go with the regiment.

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

The Principal Theme. Document Longer Than Usual.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—President McKinley's forthcoming message will be about one-third longer than his last message, which consisted of thirteen thousand words.

The document that he will send to Congress one week from to-day will be composed of about sixteen thousand words.

The message is not yet completed, and the president has not read it to his cabinet, as has been stated in some of the sensational papers. He, however, has informed one or two of the members of the cabinet that he has not reached any definite decision in regard to certain things that he expects to urge Congress to take action upon.

When the president began to collect the information for his message, he found that there was so much matter bearing upon the recent war with Spain that this material would take up the bulk of his message to the exclusion of almost everything else. These statistics in regard to the war came from nearly all the departments and have been freely used by the president in the preparation of his message. Having just concluded the conduct of a successful war, he and his official advisers have agreed that the war must necessarily form the principal theme of his report to Congress.

He, however, will have something to say on currency reform and will practically reiterate his views on this subject as contained in his last message to congress.

Of course his remarks on the treaty of peace will depend entirely on the result of the present deliberations now going on in Paris.

This part of his message will remain open until the treaty is definitely settled.

There has been absolutely no clash in regard to matters pertaining to the message between the president and any members of his cabinet. He will stand by Secretary Alger and the other heads of the departments and will recommend in his message just about what they desire.

LOSS OF THE MOHEGAN.

She Was Wrecked Because a Wrong Course Was Steered.

London, Nov. 28.—The Board of Trade inquiry into the loss of the Atlantic Transport Company's steamer Mohegan, which was totally wrecked off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands, on October 14 last, while in command of Captain Richard Griffith, has finished its investigation of the affair.

The judgment of the board's commission was that the ship was in a good seaworthy condition, and that Captain Griffith was in good health at the time the disaster occurred, the stranding of the vessel being caused by a wrong course being steered after the Mohegan had passed Eddystone Light.

The commission, in addition, expressed admiration of the efforts made to save those on board the ill fated vessel.

The commission also found that the great loss of life was due to the extinction of the electric lights on the steamer after she went ashore.

A Franco-Italian Treaty.

London, Nov. 28.—After a decade of tariff warfare France and Italy have surprised their friends and enemies by concluding a commercial treaty.

Critics here deem the treaty a sequel to the Fashoda incident. France's defeat in Egypt opened her eyes to the necessity of increasing the number of her friends.

Therefore she hastened to begin negotiations with Italy, and will give her weaker neighbor the benefit of the minimum tariff long and vainly sought by the latter.

The Italians estimate that under the new arrangement a million hectolitres of heavy southern wines, which are used in mixing with the lighter French wines, will be exported to France annually, resulting in a great impetus to Italian industry.

In return France expects to remove the danger of having to cope with the Italian navy in the Mediterranean in the event of a German war and also to nullify in part Germany's policy of isolating France.

Won't Release the Priests.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Nov. 28.—Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, has addressed a second communication to Major General Otis, the American military commander, on the subject of the Spanish prisoners in the hands of the insurgents. He has declined to release the clericals and civilians, arguing that both carried arms voluntarily against the insurgents. Aguinaldo then refers General Otis to the local papers, published since the insurrection for "irrefutable proof" of his assertion that the clericals were the "most active and vengeful agents in sacrificing the lives and honor of innocent natives."

Wisconsin Successfully Launched.

San Francisco, Nov 28.—At the Union Iron Works Saturday another great marine fighting machine was added to the already large fleet of Pacific war vessels. The vessel, which successfully slid from the ways at 9.22 o'clock, was the battleship Wisconsin, the largest of the vessels built for the United States government by the Union Iron Works, which built the Oregon.

The launching of the warship was effected without a hitch, and she now rests calmly on the waters of the bay.

State Canals to Close December 10.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 28.—G. W. Aldridge, state superintendent of public works, has issued an order that the canal system of the state close on December 10, unless compelled to suspend navigation at an earlier date by reason of ice formation.

Favor New Department.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 28.—The National Business League has sent to President McKinley a letter urging favorable action on bills for the establishment of a department of commerce and industry, which are now pending in Congress.

REGULARS FOR SERVICE

Volunteer Term of Enlistment not to Be Enforced.

A LARGER STANDING ARMY

Chairman Hull of the House Committee on Military Affairs Says a Bill Will be Introduced During Fiart Days of Coming Session for Increase in Size of Army.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—Chairman Hull of the House committee on military affairs was at the war department Saturday in consultation with Secretary Alger, General Corbin and others in regard to legislation affecting the army.

Congressman Hull stated that he has the draft of a bill for the increase of the regular army practically completed to the House during the first two or three days of the coming session.

Several important features of the measure have yet to be settled and Mr. Hull will be in almost daily conference with the war department officials until these points are decided.

A special arrangement is to be made by which the volunteers now in the service will be released as soon as possible. It is now reasonably certain that the volunteers will not be required to serve out their full two years of enlistment unless they particularly desire to do so. The disintegration of the volunteer force will take place very rapidly after the passage of the bill for the increase of the standing army.

"If my plans are not disarranged," said Chairman Hull, the law increasing the size of the regular army will be adopted by December 25, so that it can go into effect before the holidays. We have already mapped out the main features, but there are some matters yet to be settled. The bill, however, will be completed and presented without delay and will be pushed with vigor. I hope that the department will be able to begin recruiting during Christmas week. As fast as new regiments are organized they will be detailed to take the places of volunteer regiments. The change will go on regiment by regiment, until all the volunteers are mustered out; or as many as care to retire from the military service. Although there is less talk in the press nowadays about mustering out the volunteers, I know that the feeling among the men is just as strong as before. They want to get out. The people of New York state are particularly anxious that the two Iowa regiments still in the field be released. They believe that they enlisted to serve merely during the war and now that hostilities have ceased this duty should be performed by men who are professional soldiers.

It is very probable that the regular army will be larger than had been contemplated.

"There is a disposition in official circles," said Chairman Hull, "to place the maximum strength in times of peace at 125,000, instead of 100,000, which is the size that most people appear to have agreed on some time ago. New evidences are developing every day that we will have need of a large armed force, and in all probability 125,000 men will not be any too many."

Mr. Hull says that provision will be made in the law, authorizing the president to enlist natives in Porto Rico and the Philippines.

"Of course the number of these men to be taken into the army," he said, "will be limited and will be left discretionary with the president."

Chairman Hull says that he does not believe it will be possible for Congress to pass any legislation establishing a federal national reserve.

"The National Guard organizations of the various states," he said, "are so jealous of their own existence that they will oppose and defeat if possible any bill of this sort. I am in favor of a national reserve organization, to be formed on the same general lines of the regular army, but I will not have time to devote to this matter. The bill for the support of the regular army will not treat of this matter, which will come up, if it is brought forward at all, in a measure introduced from the committee on militia."

Vehy slow progress is being made by the war department in getting off the troops detailed some days ago for duty in Cuba. On Wednesday of this week a brigade of troops now at Augusta was ordered to be sent to Savannah and reach Havana not later than December 1.

At the present time there is only one transport at Savannah, the Chester, and she is scheduled to take the Fifteenth United States infantry to Nuevitas.

The Manitoba yesterday left Newport News for Savannah, and she is the only army transport en route to Havana.

Most of the army ships are either laid up for repairs or are not available for duty in connection with the recently ordered movement to Cuba.

People's Bank to Pay Up.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 28.—Thomas W. Barlow, receiver of the People's Bank, has informed the depositors of that institution that the remaining ten per cent. due them will be paid on and after December 5, 1898.

This payment will close every uncontested claim against the bank, including the deposits of the city and state.

The People's Bank closed its doors on March 25, after the cashier, John S. Hopkins, had committed suicide. It is charged that Senator Quay was mixed up in the failure.

When the bank closed its doors the liabilities were about $1,500,000, while the assets were less than a million dollars.

At the time of the suspension President McManes pledged himself to pay the depositors dollar for dollar.

Germany After Anarchists.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—The North German Gazette says that it learns that all the German federal governments have adopted a uniform system for watching Anarchists, and that a central intelligence department with that object in view, is to be established in this city.

M'MILLIN ACCUSES BAILEY

Says the House Monetary Leader is Guilty of Political Crimes.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 28.—Congressman Benton McMillin of Tennessee, who has always been one of the prominent leaders of the Democratic party in the House, is out in opposition to Congressman Bailey of Texas. He speaks in the most vigorous fashion against the Texan, and intimates that he acted the part of a traitor to the Democratic party on more occasions than one.

"The Democrats of the country," said Mr. McMillin, "do not know Mr. Bailey yet. They are only beginning to find him out. I was severely censured several months ago for opposing Mr. Bailey on the very same grounds that the Texan is now being fought. Mr. Bailey is guilty of all sorts of political crimes."

Mr. McMillin then went on to explain Mr. Bailey's conduct and vote in the committee on ways and means when the Dingley tariff bill was being considered.

"I moved in committee," said Mr. McMillin, "that the clause relating to wool and woolens be stricken out and that the corresponding section of the Wilson law be inserted in its stead. The duties as fixed by the Wilson law were far more equitable and far more in accord with the established Democratic doctrine. I demanded a yea and nay vote on that measure in committee and Mr. Bailey is on record as voting with the Republicans."

Mr. McMillin intimated that Mr. Bailey voted this way as a result of an understanding with the Republicans, who, he said, clearly encouraged his leadership.

Mr. McMillin said that Speaker Reed helped Bailey by appointing him to desirable committee positions.

Mr. McMillin says he believes that Bailey stands only a faint show of being elected leader of the minority in the next House. The breaking away of the Alabama delegation he regards as significant, and he believes that the Mississippi delegation will support Private John Allen for the position of Democratic leader.

WORST STORM IN MANY YEARS.

Thirty Barges and Schooners Go Down Off Boston.

New York, Nov. 28.—More serious in its effects in some sections of Greater New York than the blizzard of 1888 was the storm which began with a heavy fall of snow on Saturday night and abated only Sunday night.

Surface traffic was delayed on Manhattan island and abandoned altogether in the suburbs.

Boston, Nov. 27.—In the gale last night and this morning thirty barges and schooners lying in the harbor were wrecked and sunk and at least twelve lives lost.

The Wilson liner Ohio is ashore on Spectacle island, in the bay. No serious damage is expected.

Swampscott, Mass., Nov. 28.—The wind and snow storm which, in proportion to the damage wrought, nearly equals any blizzard in recent years, had not abated in its intensity last evening.

A message from Palmer's Beach says that a three-master is ashore and several fishing boats went to pieces on the rocks off Fisherman's Beach. Two hundred feet of stone sea wall, twenty feet high and three feet in thickness, on King's Beach, which for twenty years has been safe against the high seas, was washed away.

Newburyport, Mass., Nov. 28.—The blizzard of Saturday night and Sunday wrecked wharves and public buildings, and about fifty small boats were destroyed, while sections of the sea wall were washed away.

The barge Atlantic, with two hundred and fifty tons of coal, sunk at the wharf, and the schooner Newell E. Hawes of Boston sunk at Plum Island Point.

The crew of five men were taken off by the Plum Island life saving crew in the breeches buoy.

AMERICAN ARRESTED IN BERLIN.

Accused of Having Referred in Offensive Manner to the Emperor.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Frank Knaak of New York has been arrested here on the charge of lese majeste, said to have been committed in a wineshop recently.

Mr. Knaak was arrested while sitting with his wife in a fashionable restaurant.

It is alleged that he referred in an offensive manner to the emperor, and a person who heard him immediately summoned a policeman.

Although Mr. Knaak had several witnesses who denied that he had made the alleged remark, he was thrown into jail.

The officials of the United States embassy have done everything possible to bring about his release and a large amount of bail has been offered. J. B. Jackson, the United States charge d'affaires, has had two interviews with Herr Richthofen, the under secretary of state for foreign affairs, on the subject.

Mr. Knaak is a civil engineer and is interested in the Niagara water power. He originally came from Stettin.

Return of Emperor William.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—The German emperor and empress arrived at Potsdam at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, on their return from the Holy Land.

The church bells were rung and the public buildings were decorated with flags when Emperor William passed through here at twelve o'clock yesterday morning.

The Boersen Zeitung says that his majesty's trip to the Holy Land has cost ten million marks. A few of the newspapers print welcoming articles.

All the Prussian ministers welcomed the German emperor and empress on their arrival at Potsdam.

Emperor William has returned home to find Germany in a seething political foment. All classes of society seem permeated with the spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction.

Reinforcements Reach Manila.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Nov. 22.—The United States transports Arizona and Ohio have arrived here with reinforcements.

FAITH CURE AND A CARBUNCLE.

Friends are Not So Easily Convinced as the Patient.

Say I have an obtrusive carbuncle on my nose. I call in the Christian Scientist, who administers "a high attenuation of truth." My belief in the carbuncle disappears, and with it goes the carbuncle, too, so far as I am concerned. It may be that I look in the glass and perceive no carbuncle. The Christian Scientist takes her fee and leaves me. In comes my friend Brown, and greets me with, "Hullo! old man: you have got a nose on you!" or some such vulger and inconsiderate remark. I endeavor to assure him that he is mistaken, and that the carbuncle is a creation of his diseased imagination. But Jones and Robinson speedily turn up, and accost me in similar terms, until my mind becomes impressed with an uneasy suspicion that all is not as it should be with my nose. The morbid delusion of my friends extends to me.

I take up the glass again, and there, sure enough, is the carbuncle as large and as angry as ever. Under these circumstances, it seems a clear waste of money to pay a Christian Scientist to cure my carbuncle, unless the fee is to include the treatment of the whole circle of my friends, and, indeed, of any one whom I may meet by chance in the street. I rather fancy that the Scientists have met with this difficulty in practice, for I find that in many cases which they have taken under their treatment it has been a sine qua non that the patient should be isolated from communication with everybody except the physician.—London Truth.

The Bishop's Complaint.

A great many Episcopal clergymen probably would sympathize with the English bishop who said recently: "The two things of which I am most tired are 'The Church's One Foundation' and cold chicken. The hymn seems always to be chosen wherever I go, and kind hostesses, with quite extraordinary unanimity, provide cold chicken for luncheon."

LITTLE HAMPERED BY BLINDNESS.

John Walther, who lives within two miles of Clinton, Ind., has been blind from birth. Until he reached manhood John lived on the farm with his father, and it was not uncommon to see him driving to the city with a load of corn, wheat or other farm produce. A piece of ground was given to him, and each year he would plant and cultivate a big garden, which he would market in Clinton and place the proceeds to his credit in the bank. He would buy horses, cattle and hogs. Even when a boy he was regarded as a good trader. It is now a common occurrence for John to stop in the middle of the road and trade horses with some jockey, and it is said that he is never worsted. He will go to any part of his father's large farm, unattended, in search of a truant horse or cow, and his searches are usually successful. How he manages to distinguish the stock for which he is searching is a question which puzzles everybody, and a mystery which the blind man himself cannot or does not explain.

When he decides to come to town he goes to the woods and, with apparently as little difficulty as a man blessed with two good eyes, selects his favorite horse from perhaps a dozen grazing in the pasture. He has each season for years made a hand in the harvest field, and the farmers regard him as one of the fastest and most reliable wheat "shockers" in the neighborhood. It was three years ago during harvest that the blind man's brother became entangled in the machinery of a harvester and suffered a broken arm. As soon as the accident occurred John started on a run from the field to the barn and began hitching a team to a spring wagon.

He worked rapidly, and when the men bore the injured man to the house the blind boy had the team hitched up, driven out in the road and ready to start with his brother to a doctor in the city. He drove almost at breakneck speed, made the turns of the streets after reaching the city, and brought his horses to a standstill in front of a doctor's office. After assisting the wounded brother up the stairway into the office he drew out his watch, slid his index finger quickly around the dial, and with a sigh, remarked, "Just half past 10—I was only twelve minutes driving to town."

There is no work on the farm that the blind man can not do, and during his idle times he builds and repairs fences. He can lay the "worm" for a rail fence as well as any man, and prides himself on the rapid manner in which he gets along with the work. He built a plank fence along the gravel road in front of the Walther house. The line is perfectly straight, while the workmanship on the fence and gates is not excelled by many men who can see and profess to be carpenters.

The Plainfield Citizen.

Something new for campaign methods in Plainfield will be introduced this winter by the leaders in the Citizens' movement. It is to be a campaign newspaper, filled with stirring articles on the coming election and filled with "hot shot" for the Republican party in the city. It will be a four page paper printed at the Crescent Embossing works, of Fred C. Lounsbury, Citizen candidate for Mayor.

This little sheet is to make its appearance in a few days and will be distributed about the city broadcast. As the Citizens' movement has no organ, the leaders have agreed on this method of making an appeal to the people of Plainfield. Exactly who is going to contribute, how many issues are to appear and what is going to be said, are matters that only the future can reveal. Its name has now been made public. It's to be called "The Plainfield Citizen."

The Men to Vote For.

One week from tomorrow Plainfield will hold its city election and decide who are the men that are to govern the city for the next few years. Today we print the two tickets that will be presented to the Plainfield voters on election day. There they are, side by side, and you can take your choice. They are all good men and worthy citizens. One represents the Republican party that has ruled Plainfield in the past. The other stands for the opposition. It is not going to be a question of politics this year. Politics drop out in municipal affairs and local issues will decide the election. Think carefully before you vote. Hear what each has to say. It is a time when it is the duty of every citizen of Plainfield to go to the polls and cast an intelligent vote. Think it over well and then you won't be sorry for it afterward.

Winter Has Begun.

The winter of 1898-99 promises to be a memorable one if the great snow storm that swept over this section Saturday and Sunday is any forecast of what it is to be. From every side comes reports of how the storm has held up railroad trains, trolley and cable cars indiscriminately. Traffic was at a standstill for twenty-four hours. Not since the memorable blizzard of 1888 has New Jersey been visited by a storm of such severity. It will probably be a week or more before the State has fully recovered from its effects.

Chief Doane makes a wise suggestion that householders would do well to remove the snow about the fire hydrants in front of their homes. They might be needed.

Our weather prognosticator says that there is another storm at hand which will probably be snow. We are getting our share of it this year.

Get out your sleighs. The sleighing is good this afternoon and there is no telling how much longer it will last.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Republicans of Plainfield have shown rare good taste in nominating for mayor, George W. Rockfellow, a native of Bound Brook who has many friends here.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

* * * * *

The municipal fight in Plainfield this year is between a straight Republican ticket and one known as the Citizens'. The Democrats have not made any nominations, and some of the veterans declare that their party has been used for the benefit of certain citizens who have submitted everything else to their yearning to serve the public.—New York Tribune.

* * * * *

"Bound Brook" may not seem a high-sounding title, but the name, like the place itself, is certainly above the common run and has no counterpart. The Plainfield Press states that the postmaster of Plainfield, Mass., writes that about 1,000 letters a year come to his office that he believes are intended for Plainfield, N.J.

No such mistakes happen here. To be sure, a correspondent sometimes directs a letter to "Bon (good) Brook," but even then there is no mistake and the letter gets here just the same. There are 17 Plainfields in the Union but Bound Brook is unique—stands with its sister towns of South and New Bound Brook right here in the centre of New Jersey, where all may see and know the glory thereof.

It's a wonder that the Plainfield people who so readily changed their own beautiful and appropriately named "Peace street" whereon stands the quaint old Quaker meetinghouse into the high-sounding "Watchung avenue" don't conjure up some plan to change the name of the whole city. But they can't call it Bound Brook. We've got that name fast and good and are proud of it.—Bound Brook State Centre.

PRESIDENTS AS TRAVELERS.

Extended Tours of Chief Magistrates of the Nation are Not Uncommon.

President McKinley's action in taking a trip of some extent about the country during his term of office is directly in line with an example set by Washington and followed by several of the Presidents. In March, 1791, the "Father of his Country" made a journey from the national capital at Philadelphia to what was then the extreme South, Georgia. The route was through Fredericksburg and Richmond, Va., to Wilmington, N. C., and Charleston to Savannah, thence to Augusta, Columbia and the interior towns of North Carolina and western Virginia, about 1,800 miles.

Instead of a train of palace cars, spacious and sumptuous, and provided with everything to minister to the wants of a traveller, the first President and his little party set off on their journey with one set of horses, and making occasional stops. Bad roads and a jolting carriage made it impossible to cover many miles a day, and Washington and his companions were greatly fatigued and the horses much reduced in flesh when, on July 6, after an absence of ninety days, the party returned to Philadelphia. But he brought himself before the people, and was cheered by the demonstration of a nation's respect.

Another journey that became historic was the protracted tour of President Monroe through a large part of the Northern and Middle States, inspecting various public works and gaining much information as to the state of those parts of the country. He was received with every demonstration of respect and cordiality by the people, and two years later made another tour through the Southern States.

President Andrew Johnson's speech-making tour in 1866 from Washington to Chicago, which, because of one of his own expressions, became known as "swinging round the circle," is also a matter of history. It was the fortune of President Grant to make several journeys among the people, the most extended being a trip, in the fall of 1875, to Salt Lake City by way of St. Louis and Omaha, on his return passing through Chicago. The people everywhere turned out in large numbers to welcome him, and on several occasions the vociferous greetings and immense crowds caused the reserved and taciturn warrior to make short speeches. At a Grand Army reunion at Des Moines, Ia., on Oct. 11, 1875, President Grant uttered these words:

"Let us labor for the security of free thought, free speech, free press, pure morals, unfettered religious convictions, and equal rights and privileges of all men, irrespective of nationality, color or religion."

President Cleveland made an extended Western trip in his first term. President Benjamin Harrison started on his journey to the Pacific coast in 1891. He travelled 10,000 miles and delivered 140 impromptu addresses.

Mr. Herring took as his text these words, "He is not dead, but sleeping," and spoke in substance as follows: "I never knew our dead brother as so many of you here knew him, as a lawyer, but I knew him as he was on the street, in the home, and in the church. I knew him as a man of push. He was determined to make a way for himself in this world and did it, and made of himself an honored judge of this city.

"George W. Childs, Spencer, John Wanamaker and thousands of others were poor in this world's goods when they were young, but they were determined to make a way in the world and did it, and I rejoice to say that this young friend was doing the same thing. He had a winning way with him, and we recognized that here and asked him to become an usher in the church.

"He was devoted to his home, and we love to think of this spirit. He did not separate himself from the home life. We would all like to see him in his old place, but that cannot be. Let us then accept God's will, knowing that whatever the burden He will share it with us."

After Rev. Mr. Herring had concluded his remarks Past Councillor Bodine, of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., conducted the funeral service of the order. The ritual was impressive and seemed in touch with the solemnity of the occasion.

Interment was to have been made yesterday afternoon in Hillside cemetery, but the roads being impassable the remains were taken to the parlor of A. M. Runyon & Son until it is possible to remove them to their final resting place.

During the service Charles A. Lewis, the baritone of the Cresent Avenue church choir, rendered two selections, the last one, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," being particularly impressive.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Because of the failure of "The Nancy Hanks" Company to furnish the proper printing for billing and posting purposes, there will be no performance at Music Hall tomorrow night.

* * * * *

Marie Wainwright will appear at Music Hall Friday night in a new English play, "Shall We Forgive Her." The engagement of this well known and exceedingly able actress gives to this production an importance it would not otherwise possess perhaps. Miss Wainright has long been a favorite star in legitimate roles and had Manager Litt scoured the country he could not have secured a more accomplished woman to play his leading role. "Shall We Forgive Her" is a clean-cut story, interesting throughout, and spiced with enough good comedy work to relieve the melancholy tone given by the theme upon which the author has based his play. It is by no means melodramatic, although the scenes and plot are familiar ones for melodramatic material. The play is full of opportunities for good acting which are taken full advantage of by the competent company supporting Miss Wainwright.

A TRAMP AND A HOBO NOT THE SAME.

Hoboes Merely Men Out of Work and Capable of Being Made Useful.

A tramp, says E. Lamar Bailey in The Forum, is not a hobo; a hobo is not a tramp; a vagrant is neither; a criminal is none of these. * * * A tramp is a man of such mental make-up that he has no higher aim than to exist and have "a little fun" occasionally; avoiding responsibility and restraint and all manner of mental concentration. He will walk only when he cannot ride, and will work himself tired going from house to house, rather than accept a job on the promise of a meal.

The term "hobo" was not originally of evil significance. It originated in the West, when the great tide of humanity swept in that direction; and it was applied to the many who, failing of their first hopes, were forced to the necessity of tramping from community to community in quest of employment. A hobo is a better sort of man than a tramp, has more self respect, is usually strong, and may, I believe, be called a tramp in the first stage. Many hoboes are merely men out of work who were forced to the road by circumstances which they could not control.

A vagrant loafs around a town as long as he can. He does not jump trains—he lacks the spirit to do that—but he may sneak into a box car. He is often a "grafter," that is, he blisters his arm, pretends to be paralyzed, sells pencils, tells pitiful tales of former brilliant prospects, or what not; and very likely has the whiskey or opium habit. Hoboes are never "grafters," though they may have the habits just mentioned. Very few genuine tramps resort to the grafting scheme.

Hoboes are products of industrial conditions and of the attitude of society toward unfortunate able-bodied men. It would be interesting to inquire how many hoboes have drifted into our regular army and made good soldiers, and how many responded to the President's call for volunteers. Tramps are tramps by natural bent, seconded by early training. You seldom find an old hobo; there are many old tramps. A hobo will not become a tramp if he can help it * * * You can hardly save the tramp; he is too far gone. Let him alone and save the hoboes, and the tramp problem will be, to a large extent, solved. Most of the 100,000 men on the road to-day are hoboes. They can be saved.

SAVING THE PENNIES.

HOW SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE ABLE TO HAVE A BANK ACCOUNT.

The System Has Been in Operation for Eight Years in a Small Town in the Western Part of New York State and Constantly Shows a Gradual Growth.

The system of school savings banks as operated in the Olean, N. Y., public schools is a subject that cannot but be of intense interest to almost every class of readers. It touches closely so many homes, so many families and so many individuals that the brief outline here given of what is being done along this line will be read with interest by all.

The school savings bank was introduced in the Olean public schools eight years ago, and to-day the depositors of the school bank number about one thousand, or nearly one-half of the total number of pupils registered in the six city schools.

The school bank is under the general supervision of the Superintendent. No extra efforts whatever are made to force the deposits, and what growth is shown from year to year is natural and substantial. The deposits are received from the children in their respective rooms, and are turned over to the office. Wednesday of each week is the day for depositing, and the amount placed in the bank each week by the individual pupil may range from one cent up to $10. Not over $10 will be received from any one pupil each week, and no one is allowed to have a bank account exceeding $100. This is the limit of individual deposits, and the fact that several have reached that limit speaks well for the system. The average deposit from the six schools from week to week is between $60 and $70, and the average from each pupil runs between sixteen and twenty cents per week. The rate of interest paid is 4 per cent. per annum, the interest payments being made quarterly. The requisite for drawing interest is that the deposit must be at least $5 and must remain in the bank three months.

The so called hard times seemed to have no effect upon the school bank, and though no special effort has been made to increase the deposits during the past six years, their growth has been encouraging. The time at which the heaviest draft is made is during the bicycling season, when checks of from $60 to $80 become frequent.

There are many instances on record where the money thus placed on deposit has been of practical value to the boys and girls, and letters are constantly received from parents telling of the purchase of clothing, shoes and other necessaries, made possible by the existence of this fund. It has also been noticed that many well to do families have their children practice the economy taught by the bank, and at the same time obtain a practical insight into the methods of banking and the care of a bank account.

The method of checking out the money is very simple. Each pupil has a pass book and is provided with an order blank which must be filled out with the amount for which the check is to be drawn. This order is signed by the pupil and must be approved and signed by parent or guardian. Upon presentation of this order at the Superintendent's office, he draws a check for the required amount on the First National bank of Olean, where the school savings bank funds are kept. This check is of course endorsed and cashed in the usual way.

The checks are not payable on the day drawn, but on the next banking day following. There is a provision, however, that in urgent cases they may be paid on sight on presentation to the Superintendent. The pass books are presented to the teacher every time money is deposited or withdrawn, and at the end of every quarter they are left with the superintendent for examination and crediting interest. The regulations pertaining to the bank are subject to change by the board of education.

The school bank's certificate of deposit with the First National bank to-day shows $5,325 on deposit and drawing interest. Besides this there are sums under $5 simply on deposit that amount to considerable in the aggregate. The amount on deposit last year at this time was $4,835, showing a gain of $490 over the total of a year ago of interest drawing deposits. The total three years ago, in 1895, was $4,500, which shows a gradual advance of almost $1,000 in that length of time. —Olean, N. Y., Herald.

Remarkable Cure of a Cataract.

A remarkable accidental cure of a cataract comes from Baden, Mo. Mrs. Carl Hoeffler had suffered for four years from a cataract and oculists had tried in vain to remove it. The other day, while she was in the kitchen, working around the stove, some hot grease popped up into her face, one drop striking her in the eye.

The eye was badly burned, and the woman at once bound it up and kept applying tea leaves. When she removed the bandage she found that she could see as well as ever, the burning grease having removed the cataract. —New York Journal.

They tell of a judge in Bennington, Vermont, who, having spoken of buying a safe, was interviewed by two rival agents, each of whom had so much to say in favor of his own particular safe that the judge was quite at a loss which to buy. In a happy moment he thought of a burglar whom he had himself sentenced, and going to the jail he obtained this expert safebreaker's opinion, and then gave his order.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

HELEN GOULD'S AIMS.

Ambitions to Clear the Stain From Her Father's Character She is Endeavoring to Make Her Youngest Brother a Capable Business Man.

Miss Gould is an old-fashioned girl. "I do not dislike society. I am simply too busy for it," is her calm reply to all persuasions towards the gay world. And she is busy. Her creed is a busy one. "I expect to pass through this life but once; any good that I can do, let me do it now: let me not neglect it or defer it, for I shall not pass this way again." But it is not work without faith. In her the two are admirably blended. She is a sincere, earnest Christian, a communicant of the Presbyterian church, and to her this world is but the preparation for another and a better one. She is not beautiful, though her face is womanly and sweet.

As she says herself she is busy. She set for herself three tasks in life. One was to fit herself for the proper care of her fortune, another to clear her father's memory of the stain blackmailers put upon it, and the third to make a good business man of her youngest brother, Frank, who is not yet of age. No one can say that she has failed in any of these, while the first two are accomplished facts. Her spirit is absolutely dauntless. She is so unswerving from a purpose that her family and immediate friends have dubbed her "the woman of no compromise." When Mrs. Angell claimed in the court that she was the first and only legal wife of Jay Gould, one of the brothers in the family council suggested that the imposter be given a few thousand dollars to spare them further annoyance, but to this Helen would not listen. "Never," she said. "I will spend my life, if necessary, in clearing up this mystery and proving our family innocent." And she did. Evidence unmistakeable was secured and the imposter confessed on affidavit.

In order that she might properly grasp business details Miss Gould took a course at the New York Law University, and is a thoroughly equipped business woman and lawyer, upon whose shoulders the mantel of her father's financiering ability seems to have fallen, combined with many sweet womanly qualities. She is very liberal, and her charities are so unostentatiously managed that her right hand scarcely knows what the left hand doeth. She gave $60,000 to her law school. She completed a gospel hall at Chautauqua, N. Y. She founded a scholarship at Wellesley College and another at Mount Holyoke. Practical always, she not long ago gave $10,000 to the University of New York for its school of engineering, and in 1895 a gift of $250,000 to the same University, made on the condition that the name of the giver be kept secret, is believed to have been from her. She gave $100,000 for the relief of the sufferers in the St. Louis tornado. This is her way of doing good. When she made the magnificent gift of $100,000 to the government to help in the war with Spain it was under pledge of secrecy, and it was to her genuine surprise and regret when the matter was made public. She built a memorial church upon the site of her father's home at Roxbury, N. Y., and at Woody Crest, near her home on the Hudson, she has her pet charity, a home for poor children. Intensely fond of children, she calls this her "recreation;" she personally superintends every detail of the place, and when at Lyndhurst goes across every day to Woody Crest to personally visit her little friends, who are usually crippled, maimed or deformed. She is a strictly temperance woman, and was a great admirer of Francis Willard. She is level-headed and studious, never self-seeking and intensely patriotic. Foreign travel she does not care for, as she conceives her country to be best of all possible lands. She is neither a belle, like her sister, nor a secretly ambitious woman, like her charming sister-in-law, Mrs. George Gould. She was her father's favorite child, and is a shrewd business woman with a mind of her own. This was evinced peculiarly when she stubbornly refused to sell her elevated road stock and thus broke up the elevated roads combine. She is independent, but not dashingly so. She does not strike one as being a typical "bachelor maid."

Everyone has known that Miss Gould was a patriot from the time when she caused 50,000 copies of the national hymn, "America," to be printed and distributed among the public schools of New York, saying, "I believe everyone should know this hymn and sing it, if he knows no other. I would like the children to sing it into their souls until it becomes a part of them."

But it was when the war began with Spain that her patriotism shone forth most brightly. She responded to the call to arms by the only way in which she then thought she could be of use to her country—by a check for $100,000 to the government. Then she took an active hand in furthering the Red Cross plans and was a useful member of the Woman's War Relief Association. But in both of these societies she was rather as a rich member than a personal worker, and this did not satisfy her. When the sick and wounded soldiers were landed on Long Island, there she was in the midst of them. Then her eyes opened to see the work mapped out for her, and she did not shrink. There was no time for formality or red tape; the men needed money, care, comforts, luxuries. She started diet kitchens, hired cooks and servitors, and telegraphed Mrs. Walworth, the head of the Woman's War Relief Association, to draw upon her to the extent of $25,000 for necessaries needed at Montauk, while she herself stayed at Camp Wikoff. All at once, it seemed to her associates, the executive ability of this quiet, slim little woman had flashed out, and she was indeed her father's daughter. When the camp was to be broken up it was Miss Gould who arranged for the care of convalescents, and her home at beautiful Lyndhurst was literally strewn with sewing being made ready for needy soldiers. Instead of a home it looked like a "sweatshop," one of the visitors comically remarked, but it all showed the reality of the work and the absolute sinking of all other considerations in the one great present fact.

DELIGHTED WITH THE INFORMATION

The Experience and Chagrin of a Visitor at an Insane Asylum.

Happening to be at the seat of one of the State insane asylums, a Detroiter who likes to see and learn all he can attended one of the dances for the patients. What surprised him most was the difficulty he found in distinguishing between those who were rational and those who were not, and he was more chagrined than amused when several whom he met were evidently trying to find out just what was wrong with his mental machinery.

At length he was introduced to a woman who particularly interested him. He convinced himself at once that her eyes were supernaturally bright, and her conversation soon convinced him that she was equally bright. All this made him pity her the more, and he set about in his most diplomatic way to discover what form of mania possessed her. Subjects and persons were discussed, till he thought he had about exhausted the material, when he happened to speak in rather flattering terms of the doctor. At last he had touched the hidden spring. She beamed upon him as he sang the doctor's praises. She added approvong sentences of her own and adroitly drew out the praise which seemed so welcome to her. Her eyes grew even brighter and her tones were unmistakably those of affection.

"Doctor," said the Detroiter a little later, "I don't know whether you are aware of it or not, but that handsome patient of yours, over there in the heliotrope silk, is hopelessly in love with you. She'll be making an open declaration, trying to elope with you, or doing something else equally embarrassing. I never saw a clearer case, and I thought I'd just warn you. She's dead gone, I tell you."

"Delighted to hear it," laughed the doctor. "That's my wife."—Detroit Free Press.

Frederick the Great and America.

The superstition that Frederick the Great showed marked sympathy for America during the revolution is singularly enduring, and most school children have been taught that he sent a sword to Washington with the message: "From the oldest General in the world to the greatest." Moncure D. Conway writes to the Athenaeum to say: "There was no such sword or message." He speaks as a student of Washington's life, and he was told by Carlyle, the greatest authority on Frederick, that there was absolutely no foundation for the legend. He also contradicts the singular assertion which Bismarck is said to have made, that Frederick was the first sovereign to recognize the independence of the United States. Louis XVI. recognized our independence, but Frederick never did, and never expressed a word of sympathy with our cause, while he allowed Hessians to be sent to crush the rebellion of the colonists.

"What's that button you're wearing?" asked the Young Thing; "not Sons of the American Revolution?"

"No," said the major. "I should think not. I'm proud of that button. It is the insignia, the outward and visible sign of the largest military society in the United States."

"What's its name?"

MADAME JAMBE.

You smile at her name, finding it absurd, perhaps? Do not, however, be in too great a hurry to turn it into ridicule, for she who bore it was a brave woman, and worthy of all respect.

She married, when about thirty years of age, the quartermaster-general of the regiment.

After a year of married life a son was born, and Mme. Jambe and her husband agreed that as soon as he should attain the proper age, he too, should be a soldier. At the age of sixteen he passed into the ranks, and being smart and intelligent, he seemed to have a bright future before him.

But the husband and father died suddenly in 1869. Sorrow aged her fast and she left the service and settled in a little cottage left her by her parents in the village of Clusy, near Pontarliers.

A year later war broke out, and this was another sorrow for her to bear. She was a patriot, was Mme. Jambe, but she was a mother also.

And now I will let Mme. Jambe take up the story, for what follows I had from her own lips.

"One morning at dawn I heard a noise at the door of the cottage, and then the sound of breaking glass. I rose hastily and ran down to the entrance. I gave a cry, my boy was there, and behind him stood three of his comrades, but in what a state! Haggard, hollow-cheeked, their uniforms in rags, their boots almost in pieces, blue and shivering with the cold!

"'Mother, you must hide us,' he said. 'The general has entrusted me with a message to the commandant of the fort, but the Prussians have seen us and are in pursuit. They must not find us.'

"'Give me your order,' I cried, 'I will take it while you hide here; no one will suspect a woman—'

"I had no time to finish, we heard a discharge of musketry, and a neighbor rushed in, crying,—

"'The Prussians! The Prussians are here!'

"I pushed my son and his friends into a store room, at the farther end of which, under some hay, was the door leading into the cellar where I kept my little stock of wine and cider.

"The Prussians entered in through the open door; I saw others in the road. There must have been about one hundred of them altogether. A young officer was in command.

"He came to me and said, brutally,—

"'Is it you who are Mme Jambe?'

"'Yes, I am she,' I answered him.

"'Your son has just entered this house.'

"'My son! He is far away from here, always supposing that he is still alive.'

"'He is here; I am sure of it. Come, now, where is he?'

"'You must seek him, then.'

"He made a sign, and the soldiers ransacked the house.

"At last the brutes found him—him and his friends, and I saw them dragged out covered with the hay in which they had attempted to conceal themselves. And my son! How brave and handsome he looked with his flashing eyes. Yes! He was my own flesh and blood, and I felt proud of him. They were rigorously searched for the message they were supposed to bear, but as it was a verbal one they could find nothing.

"The officer stamped about the little room, mad with rage. Glancing at the prisoners, he cried,—

"'Is your son amongst them?'

"'He is not; and if he were I would not confess it.'

"He drew his sword on me, and then we were all dragged out into the road way, the officer shouting,—

"'Where is the man who gave us the information?'

"'One of his companions has just killed him,' a Prussian sergeant replied, pointing to a corpse which I had not seen, hidden as it was behind a bush.

"The traitor was a franc-tireur, who, to save his own life, had given up my son to the enemy. His punishment had not been long delayed.

"'The murderer will be shot!' cried the officer; then, looking fiercely at a group of villagers who were cowering under his men's bayonets, he continued,—

"'Some one among you knows the man Jambe; point him out to me, or I will order my men to fire on you.'

"Ah! they were brave, my neighbors, they made no reply.

"'Then we will soon find out.' He gave an order in a low voice. His men pinned me with my back against a wall, and placed rifles in the hands of my son and his comrades.

"And the officer said,—

"'On the word of command you will fire and kill that woman. If you disobey it will be your turn next.'

"A cry of horror ran through the crowd, followed by a dead silence. I waited, watching my son.

"But he did not seem to see me. His eyes were turned to his comrades. They seemed to be making signs to one another.

"'Ready!' the word of command thundered.

"'Present!' and they obeyed, covering me with their rifles.

"'Fire!' They turned suddenly to the right about. An explosion followed and four Prussians, the officer among the number, fell. And above the roar of the discharge I heard my boy's voice clearly.—

"'Fire! Yes, but on you, you coward!'

"A general volley on the part of the Prussians followed, and I fell with a bullet in my shoulder. Before I lost consciousness, however, I saw that my son was still unhurt.

I learned afterward that, just at this moment, the cannon of the Fort de Joux began to play. The commandant had caught the reflection of the sunlight from the Prussian's helmets, and, concluding—none too soon—that something untoward was taking place, had sent a few shells into the crowd and rapidly dispensed the enemy."

Mme. Jambe died a few years after the events, which I have related as nearly as I can in her own words, took place. Her story was recalled to my mind the other day on hearing that the son of this brave woman had just been promoted to the command of his regiment.—Pearson's Weekly.

A PASSAGE AT ARMS.

They were talking it over afterwards.

"I hope you aren't inclined to be jealous," she said, glancing up shyly.

"Jealous?" He laughed, as he gave the white hand that he held a reassuring pressure. "Not a bit. You needn't trouble your pretty head about that."

"I am so glad," with a sigh of relief, while the color deepened in her face. "If you should, it would be very uncomfortable because——"

"Because other men are inclined to admire you, too," he finished. "Of course they do!" heartily. "How can they help it? Aren't you the——"

Her rosy palm shut off further words. He kissed it, of course. There was silence for a moment as she drew back flushed.

"You might, you know," she insisted.

"Oh, no," confidently.

"Not even if some one should like me very much," anxiously, "and—and I should be very nice to him?"

Her eyes were turned away. There was a flash in his own as they rested on the fair figure with its golden head gleaming brightly against a background of deep red draperies. His lips twitched for a second.

"Not even then," he declared with a short laugh.

It grated a trifle. She looked up hastily.

"That isn't nice of you a bit," she pouted.

"What?" concernedly.

"Why to laugh at me like that. And—and I should think you'd be jealous of me sometimes," emphasis on the sometimes, and a deeper pout.

"It's like this, you see," he smiled, drawing his chair closer and taking again the hand that had been withdrawn. "I might feel inclined to be jealous, only I wouldn't let myself, because it wouldn't be fair."

"Why not?" startled.

"Well—because you see, I shall want to be nice to the other girls."

A tiny cloud settled on her face.

"Not that I should pay any attention of which you could possibly be jealous," he assured her. "But, like you, I feel that just because we're engaged, there is no reason why we should keep ourselves apart, and not take an interest in other people. Don't you think so?"

"Yes," reluctantly, a look of wonder in her eyes.

"Of course other men will pay you attentions and very likely fall in love with you," he continued, cheerfully "but I shall not be vexed a bit, for it is what I shall expect. And I, in turn can continue my little attentions to the other girls, and nice, pretty ones if I wish, and you'll understand perfectly. And when you're surrounded by your admirers, instead of standing by and being bored to death, or wishing them all in Hades—beg pardon—I shall have something to make the time pass pleasantly. It will be even so nice and comfortable, now that we understand each other."

"Yes," she assented, her eyes on the passers outside. "It is nice to understand each other."

"She is very much like other women," he mused, as he stopped at the florist's. "I thought I had learned a thing or two from my former experiences."

"Yes, deliver them at once," he said to the florist, and he smiled complacently, as he walked away.

There was a troubled expression in her eyes as she stood gazing down at the confusion of flowers before her.

"It was perfectly horrid of him," she cried. "And I hoped he would be jealous," softly. Then, burying her flushed face in the soothing coolness of the petals, "I guess I won't try it," she said.

How High is Your Chair?

Some curious experiments have been made by a Harvard professor to prove what is really the best height for the chair you sit on and the desk you write at. Every person, it appears ought to have a chair specially made to suit his or her height, and the seat of the chair should be exactly one quarter of your height from the floor. Thus, if you are six feet high the chair seat should be eighteen inches. The width of the seat should exactly equal its height, and it should slope backward three-quarters of an inch to the foot. The back should be a trifle higher than the seat, and sloped slightly, not too much.

Finally, your desk should be two thirds as high again as the seat of your chair. Thus, if your chair seat is twenty-four inches, the desk should be forty inches in height. When you have attended to all these little details you can sit and write all day without feeling that backache that comes from chairs and desks that don't fit you.—Boston Traveler.

The South River branch was cleared so that the cars were running irregularly by nightfall, but the Metuchen and BoundBrook branches will not be opened until some time today.

The line between Bound Brook and Somerville gave up Saturday night and is still blockaded.

The last car between Bound Brook and Dunellen Saturday afternoon took four hours to make the trip. It was necessary to sweep off the tracks in front of the car. Then the line was abandoned and traffic has not yet been resumed.

TEN INCHES OF SNOW.

Weather Observer Neagle Says There is Another Storm Coming Tomorrow.

Weather Observer John Neagle had his hands full looking after the big storm. Ten inches of snow fell, he says, on the level. The wind at times reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour. The thermometer registered 19° Saturday afternoon and 23° yesterday afternoon.

Another storm is in sight, he says, and will reach here tomorrow. It may be either rain or snow.

BLIZZARD AT THE 'PLAINS.

Town Committee Tried Unsuccessfully to Open Up Sidewalks With Snow Plow.

The blizzard of Saturday and Sunday gave Scotch Plains a deserted look. No one ventured out unless compelled to. The snow plow, under direction of the Town Committee, opened up the sidewalks Sunday morning, but on some of the streets the snow drifted and soon made them impassable again. A few venturesome ones turned out with their sleighs in the afternoon, but were soon glad to return and seek the fireside again.

FOOLISH MAN.

Mistook a Snowbank for His Bed and Nearly Froze.

Harry Fosberry chose a cold bed to spend Saturday night in, and if it hadn't been for a kind hearted passerby, who picked him up from a snow bank on Park avenue, where he lay drunk, and turned him over to the police, Harry would have frozen to death before morning. This morning Mayor Fisk suspended sentence in his case.

GERMANY PROTESTS.

Says the Sulu Islands Should go to Her Not American According to Spain's Promise.

Washington, Nov. 28—The German Ambassador called on Secretary Hay this morning and is understood to have protested against the American acquisition of the Sulu Islands, to which, it is claimed, Spain is under obligations to dispose of to Germany.

TWO INSANE CHARACTERS.

Taken to the Morris Plains Asylum This Morning by Sergeant Kiely.

Katie Morris, colored, an inmate of the workhouse, and Jacob Ritter, a Hollander, who lived with his brother at 1002 Morris avenue, were taken to Morris Plains Asylum this morning by Sergeant Kiely. Both are insane, Katie is not dangerously so, but Ritter has given his brother and the police quite a little trouble during the past year.

Katie Morris is a well-known character around the streets. She is short and stout, with great eyes that look everyone she passes straight in the face. She used to go out washing for a living, but recently she was taken to the workhouse, where she spent her time singing and talking all night long, becoming such a nuisance that it was decided to send her away.

Jake gets fits of insanity periodically. During one spell he threw a brick through a neighbor's window, narrowly missing him; and another time chased his brother around the house with a carving knife. The police were called in at the time, but when they arrived Jake was as quiet as could be.

HEIFER TOOK A TRIP.

Now Justice Mosher Will Have to Unravel the Trouble That Followed.

This afternoon Justice Mosher will sit to hear the trial of the case of Mary Coughan against James McCarthy for assault and battery. The trouble between these two arose last week, it will be remembered by Press readers, over the excursions of a heifer into the neighbor's gardens. That case is to be tried at 4 o'clock, but in the meantime McCarthy has brought suit against the woman in tort, alleging that she retains possession of the cow illegally. This new case will be tried December 5th.

Talk to Endeavor Workers.

AN EX-SLAVE'S WORK.

The Intellectuality of Booker T. Washington May Well Be Envied By Whites.

Booker T. Washington is the first colored man who ever caused a Southern audience, scarcely a northern man in the 15,000 before him, to go mad with enthusiasm when he pictured the fine moral, mental and industrial emancipation of his own people in that day when white shall truly say to black, "Our purposes are one."

A correspondent writes: I heard him that day in Atlanta two years ago. He was within a rifle's shot of where General McPherson fell, where Gresham dropped wounded, where Logan retrieved misfortune. He was at the footstool of the Piedmont hills, where thirty years previous thousands had died for and against his cause.

He looked from his eminence down upon the faces of the cream of "Georgian chivalry." He spoke to men who had owned slaves by the hundreds, to women who had used the negro for an ottoman, to children bred to think the rifle better than the schoolbook for the denizens of "Cotton Row." He dared to tell these people with a mastery of English that was magnificent what his race was striving for, what it deserved, and what it had not received. He rose in doing this so far above the ordinary mentality of the average exposition orator that he swept away the prejudices of centuries, overcame the aversion of blood and made his hearers one with him for the hour at least.

The effort and its success was all the more remarkable because he was not talking to the abolitionist, but to the descendants of a slave-owning people.

So forward leaps the human race in humanity as the centuries pass, for slavery and negro subjugation were once condoned by Christian New England. Booker T. Washington's mother was a slave, and his father a white man. And no colored man was ever so honored by a New England university as Harvard honored him, a literal product of old conditions.

He it was who gave to Harvard that sentence:

"I thank God that I have grown to that point where I can sympathize with a white man as much as I can with a black. To me a man is but 'a man for a' that.'"

When appearing before the directors of Harvard to qualify for the degree to be conferred upon him he said to them:

"Gentlemen, there is no escape. Man drags man down, or man lifts man up."

On the same occasion he made this statement of his race:

Gallium, a Metal 162 Times More Costly Than Gold.

"The majority of people when asked to name the most precious metals usually mention gold as first, platinum as second and silver as third," said the proprietor of a large assay and refining establishment in New York to the writer recently. "If asked to name others some might add nickel and a few aluminum to the list. Now, let us see how near the truth they would be. Gold is worth about $250 per pound troy, platinum $130 and silver about $12. Nickel is worth about 60 cents and pure aluminum from 50 cents to $2 to the troy pound.

"We will now compare these prices with those of the rarer and less well-known metals. To take them in alphabetical order, barium, the metal which Davy isolated from its ore, baryte, in 1808, sells for $950 a pound, when it is sold at all, and calcium is worth $1,800 a pound. Cirium is a shade higher; its cost is $160 an ounce, or $1,920 per pound. These begin to look like fabulous prices, but they do not reach the highest point, chromium being worth $200. Cobalt falls to about half the price of silver, while didymium, the metal isolated by Masander, is the same price as calcium. Then comes gallium, which is worth $3,250 an ounce. With this metal the highest price is reached, and it may well be called the rarest and most precious of metals.

"Thus we see that the commonly received opinion as to what the most precious metals is quite erroneous. Aluminum, which cost $8 and $9 a pound in 1890, is now produced as cheaply as are iron, zinc, lead and copper."—Washington Star.

"It is estimated," said the statistical boarder, "that seven million packs of playing cards are made every year."

"That," said the Cheerful Idiot, "is a great deal."—Indianapolis Journal.

AN EXPENSIVE BONNET.

Exquisitely Carved Out of Tortoise Shell for Queen Victoria.

Her majesty, Queen Victoria, who is the dowdiest royal personage in Europe, has in her possession the most expensive bonnet in the world. It is not a triumph of the milliner's art, and it is not likely to be the mode. In fact, the Queen has never worn it.

The natives of the Navigator Islands were most anxious to make the Queen a present. There was formed a committe, which debated long and patiently what would be most appropriate. Jewels were out of the question. It would cost a fortune to give to one of the richest sovereigns in the world a jewel that she would appreciate. Even the most gorgeous cloths were not advisable. India had excelled them in weaving.

The gift should be suggestive of their part of the world and made by their people. But what?—that was the question.

The committee disagreed. One gentleman resigned in despair. The new member injected some ginger into the crowd and revived their lagging spirits. The new member said emphatically that even a Queen had vanity enough to want to possess the most expensive bonnet in the world. One of their own tortoise shells should be made into a bonnet. It should be carved by their own people, and while it would not cost them very dearly, Victoria would find it quite expensive if she went shopping for it in Bond street.

An elaborate bonnet was made of a whole shell. The workmanship was exquisite. Never was a tortoise shell wore artistically carved. The shape is like that of the Salvation Army lassies'. In due time the Queen received the gift, and wrote the committee a note of thanks. The Queen found the material as well as the shape, a little impracticable as far as every-day wear goes, so she sent it to the British Museum. But the committee, which feels that a load is off its mind, draws mental pictures of Queen Victoria driving down the "Ladies' Mile," and nodding to her faithful subjects and wearing the gift that caused so many wrinkles in the gray matter of its brain.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

ALL-CONQUERING GOLF CRAZE.

Effects of the Game on Girls Who Do Not Play.

"Look at this piazza," said a girl last summer, who didn't play golf. "Isn't it a pathetic sight? Only you and I and a row of rocking chairs. Yet I can remember when it was crowded always at this time and every one of those tennis courts were occupied. Then we all played tennis, or sat here waiting to play and talking until we had a chance at a court or until it was time to go to the beach. Then we all went down there in a body. In the afternoon there was more tennis. In those days we were always together, and whatever fun there was with one another.

"But that was before golf came. Look at this place now—deserted. Look at the tennis courts now—three children throwing the balls about. Where is everybody? Why, wandering by themselves over those fields, not paying the slightest attention to one another when they meet, and simply absorbed in their game. That is another result of golf. The game has done that. So far as these piazzas are concerned, the clubhouse might as well be pulled down. And the worst part about it is that nobody would care if it were pulled down, so long as the golf course was not damaged. It is only that that they take any interest in now, and if the present is any indication of what the future is to be, they are not likely to care about anything else for some time to come."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

PLAINFIELD BRIDE WAS QUIETLY WEDDED.

VERY PRETTY CEREMONY.

ERNEST FREDERIC GUSTAVE FRANKE, BRESLAU, GERMANY, THE GROOM.

Ceremony Performed by Rev. Charles Dodd, of Newark—House was Handsomely Decorated for the Occasion—Ceremony Took Place in Front of Floral Bower—Couple Sailed for Europe.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Coard, of East Ninth street, was the scene last evening of a pretty but quiet wedding, when their daughter, Miss Mabel M. Coard, was united in marriage to Ernest Frederic Gustave Franke, of Breslau, Germany. The home was filled with relatives and friends in honor of the occasion.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by Rev. Charles Dodd, pastor of the Peddie Memorial Baptist church, Newark, who is a great friend of the family. The Episcopal service was used throughout.

The wedding took place in the parlor where the floral decorations were exceedingly pretty and unique. On one side of the room opposite the hall door there was a large bank of white chrysanthemums, palms and greens, while there was a pleasing arrangement of white satin ribbon intertwining the flowers. It was in front of this floral display that the happy couple were united in marriage. They entered the room while the wedding march was executed by Miss Jessie Utter, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist.

The bride was given away in marriage by her father. She was attended by Miss Laura Kelton, of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Franke was attended by George Coard, brother of the bride. The bride was richly gowned in satin of a cream color, with trimmings of lace and silk. The bridemaid wore a gown of white organdie trimmed with Valenciennes lace. The bridal party formed a semi-circle and while the ceremony was being performed sweet strains of music were softly rendered. After the couple were united they were the recipients of congratulations from all present. Following the congratulations a wedding supper was served.

The decorations in the other rooms were equally as pretty as those in the parlor. In the front room opposite the parlor the prevailing colors were yellow and green, while in the dining room, in addition to the decorations of flowers, there was a pretty display of the colors of Germany in ribbons, which were arranged about the bow-window. In the background the American colors were displayed. The decorations on the table were very attractive.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Franke left their relatives and friends for New York, and this morning they sailed on the Kaiser Friedrich of the North German Lloyd Steamship Line. They will be absent until January and while abroad will be received by many distinguished people in European cities. They will on their return take up their residence in New York city, where Mr. Franke has engaged in business as a contractor for fire proof flooring. While abroad they will visit Mr. Franke's mother in Breslau.

Mr. and Mrs. Franke have received gifts of great cost, usefulness and beauty, from all parts of the world, and displayed in the room with the presents were a number of letters from distinguished people residing in foreign countries and offering their congratulations.

A WRECK PREVENTED.

Why Polk Miller Didn't Entertain Here Thanksgiving Day.

In a letter received from Polk Miller, of Richmond, Va., who was to entertain with a description of the old Virginia plantation negro, at the Y. M. C. A., Thanksgiving night, he states that a wreck prevented him from reaching Washington in time to connect with a Royal Blue Line train stopping at Plainfield Thursday afternoon. He could have reached Plainfield, notwithstanding, if the railroad people would have stopped the new flyer here, but they would not consent. This was only the third time that he had ever disappointed an audience in 600 engagements. The association hopes to bring him to Plainfield on a later date.

Slipped on the Ice.

Alex. Filmore, of North avenue, slipped on the ice in front of French's mill Sunday afternoon, as he was going across the street, and fell, spraining his knee. Today Fillmore is walking around with the aid of a cane.

A YOUTHFUL TRAVELER.

He Worked His Away Abroad and Saw the Diamond Jubilee—Interviewed All the Leading Men of Europe—Large Crowd.

An audience of good size and thoroughly appreciative assembled at the Y. M. C. A. last evening and for over an hour listened to the story of Harry Steele Morrison, "The Renowned Boy Traveler," of Illinois, who has traveled from his home to London and several foreign countries with a very small amount of money. The young man is 16 years old and is a very entertaining talker. He has not entirely overcome his boyish manner, but his large experience has given him much to talk about.

He told how he started from his small country home and worked in an office in Chicago as an office boy. From there he secured a pass on the B. & O. Railroad to Philadelphia, and with his small earnings was able to buy a ticket from there to New York.

When he arrived in New York he visited the newspaper offices and told them that he was going to London to attend the Queen's Jubilee and to secure an interview with the Queen, also Mr. Gladstone. He was laughed at, and while he received slight encouragement, in the main his ideas were thought to be impracticable.

He finally secured passage on a cattle steamer to London and worked his way over by washing dishes in the pantry. In London he worked for his room and board, saw the Diamond Jubilee and the Queen. He interviewed Mr. Gladstone and the prominent men in politics and the world of art and letters.

When he left London for Belgium he had $15 and with that amount he spent five months in Belgium, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and France, and interviewed heads of the Government.

While abroad he contributed to several leading papers, telling his experiences, and in some cases where he was asked for his opinions of English institutions he did not gain favor altogether. He also sent articles to New York papers, for which he received a handsome sum on his return to this country. This trip took place last year and he returned home in time to spend Christmas. Mr. Morrison is now doing journalistic work.

As an additional feature of the evening's entertainment Mr. Evans gave two whistling solos, accompanied by Mr. Harold on the piano. After the entertainment many remained to meet Mr. Morrison.

DANCED AT CASINO.

Charming Social Affair in Honor of Miss Helen Frances Bushnell.

Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, gave a party in the Casino Saturday night to the debutante, Miss Helen Frances Bushnell, of Central avenue. Miss Bushnell assisted Mrs. Lowe in receiving, and the other ladies assisting were Mrs. John Bushnell and Miss Lotta Lowe.

The Casino was prettily decorated and trimmed with palms and potted plants, patriotic colors, and red and green. Fancy sofa pillows were strewn here and there carelessly, and this made the scene a comfortable one. Dancing was kept up until midnight, music for which was furnished by Rogers.

Class in Millinery to be Resumed.

This evening the class in millinery at the Young Women's Club will be resumed under the direction of Miss Carrie Kuhen, who is connected with the millinery department in Boehm's dry goods store. Miss Kuhen is known throughout the city for her ability, and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of the opportunity to learn this trade either for business purposes or for their own use. This class will meet every Tuesday evening from 8:30 until 10 o'clock, and the fee will be five cents a lesson to club members. The membership of the club is $1 a year.

Honored the Departed Judge.

Justice Mosher has placed upon the minutes of his court a set of resolutions bearing the evidence of the high regard in which Judge DeMeza was held. Justice Mosher's court was one of the first that Judge DeMeza practiced in, and Judge DeMeza argued the first case in Justice Mosher's court, after the latter had become a justice.

Taken His Late Brother's Business.

Attorney William G. DeMeza opened up the law offices of the late Judge yesterday morning and will continue the business. Mr. DeMeza will endeavor to take up the legal matters where the Judge laid them down, and hopes to have the same attention shown him as was shown his brother.

—Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F., held its regular meeting last evening.

CITY ADMINISTRATION STRONGLY CONDEMNED

Scathing Criticisms at Citizens' Mass Meeting.

THE CANDIDATES PRESENT.

VOTERS WERE TOLD WHY THEY SHOULD SUPPORT TICKET.

Many of the Speakers Talked Against "Club Car" Rule and Said Time Had Come to Abolish It—Unfair Taxation Claimed—Cadwallader Jones Said He Is Looking Forward to Next Tuesday.

The Citizens' held a mass meeting last night in a vacant house situated at 1143 West Second street, in the Fourth ward. There were about thirty present, including the candidates for office, most of whom were there and spoke, but what the meeting lacked in numbers it made up in interest.

Jacob Kriney was made chairman of the meeting, which came to order soon after 8:30 o'clock. There were present Fred C. Lounsbury, nominee for Mayor; Winfield S Angleman, for City Judge; Arthur T. Gallup, for Collector; Charles Burnet, for School Trustee; and J. C. Blimm, G. W. V. Moy and J. W. Davis, nominees for the Council in the First, Third and Fourth wards. Each one of the candidates had a few remarks to make, and some of them scored the Republican administration soundly.

Mr. Davis was the first speaker and merely announced his intention of doing the square thing if he was elected. He said he was pledged to no one, and wanted the voters always to feel that he was working for their interests.

Mr. Angleman spoke somewhat at length and hit the "club car" politicians. A synopsis of his remarks are as follows: "Plainfield's business should be transacted here in the Council Chambers, where all can have a voice in it. It is wrong for a set of club men to cut and dry everything and railroad it through. Each member should be fully informed of what is going on, and then each officeholder should feel at liberty to talk with anyone and thus give them a voice in the city's government. The Republicans say they have given the Citizens everything they ask for and this shows that they know we are right. This is a spontaneous movement of the whole city."

Mr. Burnet said that he had always been Democratic in his ideas as to schools. "They are for the masses," he said, "and we must educate our children. We need schools where everyone stands on a level. If I am elected you can all feel sure that you've got a worker there."

Mike Higgins objected to "club car" men. He said Mayor Fisk was a personal friend of his, and he had nothing against him.

"The men who bled Mayor Fisk for his money were the people who killed him, not I," said Mike. "A portion of his bread comes from the club car men," continued Mike. He also thought a higher license should be paid by out-of-town peddlers, who come to town with truck to sell and then carry the money away with them, than the home merchants ought to pay.

Mr. Moy had a grudge against the New Yorkers because instead of patronizing home merchants, he said, they go to New York and let the Plainfield merchant rest.

"It is the fault of the voters," said Mr. Moy, "that the New York men are in power. If you don't want them, don't elect them. If you want to keep them out, put Plainfield men in."

Mr. Blimm prophesied that the Citizens' ticket would go through, and Mr. Gallup agreed that if he got elected he would send them all a tax bill.

Cadwallader Jones rose in response to a call for a speech, and said that all are waiting for "evacuation day next Tuesday." He continued, "There's been too much 'club car' rule in this city. If we don't pay to have our streets in the Fourth ward macadamized we must walk in the mud. Taxes, too, are too high. There is a little house near here whose owner gets $7 a month rent, and pays $30 a year taxes. There is the Babcock building worth $250,000, and taxed for $50,000. Is this right? Ought the poor man to pay the whole tax?"

Mr. Lounsbury made the last speech, and proved himself to be an interesting talker. He said that the mere fact that a man is independent in politics in Plainfield is enough to condemn him in the eyes of the present administration. Mr. Lounsbury said he didn't want the nomination, but now that it had been offered to him he was going to try his best to get elected.

"The ring in this town," he said, "has been putting men in office who are underneath their thumbs. It has been said to me that the Third ward had the brains, but the Fourth ward had the votes. The School Board has been in favor of extending our school facilities. It is not the poor man who has opposed it, but such rich men as Alexander Gilbert, John M. Whiton, E. B. Clark and others, who went to Trenton and secured the passage of that bill through the Legislature that prevented Plainfield from building a new school."

Mr. Lounsbury here took each one of the nominees in turn and explained why they should be voted for.

"We want a matured man for City Judge," he said. "Young men begin by being lawyers then rise to the dignity of a judge afterwards. The Republicans expect their candidate to begin at the top and work down. If Nelson Runyon had been the Republican's choice, I would not have said a word.

"And our Tax Collector should know how to keep books. Mr. Gallup is a thorough bookkeeper. They had one man in the office once who didn't know how, and as a consequence they wanted to salt me for $400 back taxes.

"There has long been an unhealthy sentiment towards putting ministers on the school boards. Nine out of ten ministers are poor business men, and we want a business man, and a man from the people, one more on our level to serve in that capacity."

Mr. Lounsbury said he knew nothing about the sewer system, and had never committed himself one way or the other on the question whether he approved running it to tide water or not. He also rehearsed some of the troubles he experienced in getting enough of the citizens interested to fight the Martin Act, and thus saved $20 000 to the taxpayers, Mr. Angleman also explained this good work of Mr. Lounsbury's more at length.

The meeting broke up at a late hour and another one will be held tomorrow night.

UPSET IN SNOW DRIFT.

DR. T. S. DAVIS AND DAUGHTER HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

The Sleigh Upset, They Were Thrown Out While the Horse Ran Away—Horse Entangled Himself in Harness and Sleigh

A narrow escape from serious injury was experienced by Dr. T. S. Davis and his daughter, of Park avenue, yesterday afternoon. The doctor had a call to Mt. Pleasant and he and his daughter made the trip in the sleigh. After they had left the main road and were nearing their destination large drifts of snow were encountered, and it was while attempting to get through one of the drifts that the sleigh upset and the occupants were thrown out into the big drift.

The horse became frightened and ran away with the sleigh. After a run of about a quarter of a mile, the horse became so entangled in the sleigh that he was brought to a standstill. In the meantime the doctor and his daughter had recovered and they started after the rig. They found the horse and sleigh and after a little trouble succeeded in getting things straightened out so that they could return home. Neither the doctor or Miss Davis suffered from their experience.

TOOK AMMONIA BY MISTAKE.

Mrs. Wm. Campbell Had a Narrow Escape From Death.

Mrs. Campbell, wife of Marshal William Campbell, of the borough, very narrowly escaped death last evening about 6 o'clock. Recently she has not been well and she had been taking medicine. When the time came to take the medicine last evening she picked up the wrong bottle, which happened to be spirits of ammonia. She took a fair-sized dose befor she realized what she had done, and it almost strangled her. Her husband was at home and he hastened to where she was to learn the cause of her trouble. He soon found out what she had done and he at once sent for Dr. Davis, the family physician. When the doctor arrived he gave the proper treatment, and in a short time she partially recovered from the effects of the drug. During last night Mrs. Campbell suffered more or less, but this morning she is doing well and her recovery is assured.

Gone to Join His Regiment.

Frank Vosseller, of this city, left Plainfield this afternoon to join his regiment, the Twelfth New York Volunteers, which is stationed at Athens, Ga. Frank has had an unusually long furlough, 110 days, but this was due to illness, from which he has now entirely recovered. The Twelfth Regiment will in all probability go to Cuba at an early day to do garrison duty.

JERSEY RECOVERING FROM THE BLIZZARD

Trolley and Steam Cars Are Running Again.

EXCELLENT SLEIGHING NOW

THE COUNTY ROADS ARE BADLY DRIFTED, HOWEVER.

In Some Places the Farmers Had to Break the Roads—Plainfield Trolley Line Running Over all its Line—Big Drifts in Washington Valley—Trouble in Jersey Central Yard at Jersey City.

Jersey is fast recovering from the blizzard that swept the State Saturday and Sunday. The railroads have about recovered their equanimity and trains are running again on schedule time. The trolley roads are gradually pushing their way through the snow bound sections of their lines and the usual order of things is fast returning.

While there is plenty of snow in Plainfield yet, the city is fast returning to the ordinary course of events. The gale from the northwest decreased in violence yesterday so that the officials of the street railway were able to remove the snow from the extremities of the line with some degree of success. As long as the wind blew, the snow was drifted over the tracks as fast as it was cleared away. Now, however, the local line has been opened up to Netherwood and Dunellen.

The Brunswick Traction Company is putting forth great efforts to recover from the paralysis that was caused by the storm. The Metuchen and Bround Brook lines will be running today, although the cars will not go on schedule time. The line from Somerville to Bound Brook and Bound Brook to Dunellen are still blocked, but the officials of that company hope to have them open tonight or tomorrow.

The chief trouble with the Jersey Central Railroad has been at the Jersey City yards where the snow blocked the switches and made it necessary to manipulate them by hand. This delayed trains considerably yesterday. Today, however, the passenger service is running regularly and with but very little delay. The milk trains have been delayed by the storm, but are now doing better. The Flemington division was blocked yesterday, but trains are running there today. The Bound Brook route of the P. and R. was greatly delayed by the drifts, but the plows have overcome them.

While the snow was rather too unevenly distributed for sleighing, there were many out last night. Where the snow was level the sleighing was delightful and all enjoyed it. In the city the streets were soon packed and every sleigh was out. The streets were in fine condition except in the business section. The car tracks played havoc among the sleighs. There were a number of upsets as a result of a little carelessness, and several sleigh runners were snapped in the tracks. Careful drivers shunned the car tracks.

Out in the country, the roads were drifted badly. In some places, the farmers had to combine to break through the drifts which often overtopped the fences and made the roads impassable. The county roads to Westfield and Metuchen were the best for sleighing last night, but both were bare in spots and drifted in others. Just outside of Metuchen, there was a great drift that blocked the entire road and forced the sleighs out into the gutter. The road from Metuchen to New Brunswick was in poor shape, in some places the sleighs being forced to take to the fields.

The Stelton road was badly drifted or else bare but a number ventured through there. The roads to Bound Brook were nearly impassable. In Washington Valley huge drifts were reported. The road to Scotch Plains was fair and the Springfield road had many drifts.

The best sleighing was right in the city as the drifts and bare spots were unpleasant obstacles everywhere else. There were a number of fast horses out on Park avenue early in the evening and some spirited dashes were the result.

Death of Miss Anna Wiley.

Miss Anna Wiley, daughter of the late Alexander Wiley, Sr., died Sunday, Nov. 20th, at the home of her nephew, Franklin Baldwin Wiley, in Waban, Mass. The older residents of Plainfield will readily recall the family as prominent in Fanwood some years ago, and later in Plainfield, where they moved. Miss Wiley was in the fifty sixth year of her age. Interment was made in Plainfield.

BEQUESTS FOR CHARITY.

WILL OF MRS. B. A. HEGEMAN, SR., ADMITTED TO PROBATE.

Among the Items of the Will Were a Number in Favor of Plainfield Charities—Trinity Reformed Church Got $5,000.

The will of the late Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, was admitted to probate in Somerville last week. Beside the bequests to her husband and near relatives, there are several important ones that show that, even at the last, Mrs. Hegeman did not forget the many good works she had aided while alive and dealt generously with Plainfield's prominent charities.

The bequests included the following: Trinity Reformed church, $5,000; Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church of America, $2,500; Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church of America, $2,500; Muhlenberg Hospital, $1,000; Young Men's Christian Association, $1,000; Children's Home, $1 000; Plainfield Relief Association, $500; Salvation Army, of which Ballington Booth is now the manager, $1,000.

In the last item mentioned it is evident that Mrs. Hegeman intended the American Volunteers, which is now commanded by Ballington Booth. Her husband was made sole executor of her estate.

PRIZES WON AT DONKEY PARTY.

It Was One of the Features at Sociable at Home of J. B. Higgins Last Night.

An enjoyable sociable was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins, of Lafayette place, last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Reform Hall.

The time was passed in social intercourse and playing games, among which were the "New Women" and the "Donkey" game. Prizes were awarded to the successful ones in the donkey party. Mrs. J. B. Higgins won the first prize, and Mrs. W. J. Ford the second.

During the evening recitations were given by Miss Alice Scribner and Miss Passmore, after which refreshments were served by a committee composed of Miss Scribner, Miss May Thompson and Mrs. Higgins.

A GAME DINNER.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel Entertained at Their Home Last Night.

Last evening at the Crescent Hotel, on Somerset street, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel entertained about fifty of their friends at a game dinner. The dinner was given to the members of the German Beneficial Society, the Independent Scheutzen Corps and a few invited guests. The menu was all to be desired and was served in up to-date style. Everyone had a good time, and after the inner man was looked after, the rest of the evening was passed in listening to good singing and excellent speeches from those present. Everyone voted the host and hostess to be the best of entertainers, and one and all thanked them heartily for their hospitality and for the good time provided.

TOLD ABOUT HIS TRIP.

Dr. Carroll Addressed North Plainfield School on Porto Rico.

The pupils of the North Plainfield Public School had the pleasure yesterday of listening to an able address by Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who is U. S. Commissioner to Porto Rico. The doctor spoke about the manners and customs of the people of Porto Rico and told something of the schools there. He said that the scholars are very bright in appearance and filled with ambition and a desire to learn. He related incidents in connection with the evacuation ceremonies at San Juan, which he attended, and how glad everyone seemed to be that the island has been annexed to this country. The address throughout was one of great pleasure and the scholars listened attentively to it.

A Neat Sum Realized.

The fair committee of the German Reformed church met at the home of Rev. George Hauser on Duer street yesterday afternoon to ascertain the result of their recent fair, and found after all bill were paid a neat sum remained to swell the treasury. They wish to extend their thanks to all donators and others who so kindly assisted in making the fair a success.

"The Kingdom of Glory."

At the Christian church last night Elder Horton conducted a Bible study on the subject of "The Kingdom of Glory" from New Testament writings, dwelling especially on the Lord's great prophecy and the Mount of Transfiguration. Tonight the subject will be continued from the standpoint of Old Testament evidence. All are welcome.

CITY SAYS WALKS MUST BE CLEANED.

Police are After Those Who Didn't Do So.

MANY WERE NOT CLEANED.

STREET COMMISSIONER'S MEN WILL CLEAN THEM OFF.

The Cost of it Will be Added to the Tax Bills—Then the Property Owners are Liable to a Fine—City's Men Breaking Fourteen Foot Drift on Belleview Avenue—Walking Improving.

Today the police have begun to call on the residents of the city who have not cleaned their sidewalks off since the last snow. The police are followed up by the street commissioner's men who are in charge of C. M. Meeker. They clean away the snow and ice. In this way all the walks in the central portion of the city will be cleaned by tonight and walking will be fairly good again.

It is said that there has not been a snowstorm in some time after which the sidewalks have been left in such a bad condition as after this storm. So many walks were left with their coating of snow tramped down hard, and therefore it was something of a task to remove it. Early this morning the police began reporting to the street commissioner those sidewalks needing attention. The commissioner despatched his men to do the work and the amounts will be certified to the tax collector and added to the tax bills.

A great many people would rather have the city clean their sidewalks for them, as it is much cheaper than to hire it done themselves.

The actual time spent on the walks is all that is charged for. But there is a penalty attached, which many people, perhaps, do not think of. If Street Commissioner Gavett had gone before the City Judge and sworn out warrants for the arrest of those they might have been fined $5.

Another gang of men are breaking through Belleview avenue, which leads from Park avenue to the cemetery. The snow there had drifted to a depth of fourteen feet in places, and it was impossible to get a vehicle through.

BROKE HIS NOSE.

F. E. Marsh Met With an Accident at Perth Amboy Thank-giving Day.

Former Councilman F. E Marsh, of Madison avenue, met with a very painful accident on Thanksgiving Day which resulted in the fracture of his nose. The accident happened at Perth Amboy. Mr. Marsh was attempting to board a train to come to Plainfield. In doing so he slipped on some snow and ice and fell on his face, striking his nose. He suffered greatly with pain, and as soon as possible he sought a physician. The examination proved that the bone in the nose was broken, and proper treatment was given. Now Mr. Marsh is obliged to go about with his nose bandaged.

ENTERTAINED EUCHRE CLUB.

Members of Monday Evening Euchre Club Met at Home of Geo. A. Chapman.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, of Stelle avenue, entertained the Monday Evening Euchre Club last night. The hospitality of the host and hostess was proverbial. In all there were seven tables and the playing throughout was close and exciting, with the result that Mrs. I. Edgar Corlies and Mrs. Charles Abbott were the winners of the first and second prizes for the ladies, while Charles Case and H. M. Stockton were winners of the first and second prizes for the men. Progressive euchre was played. At the close of the play a delightful repast was served.

BROKE HIS NECK.

Such Was the Cause of the Sudden Death of Robert Randolph.

It has been learned that the cause of Robert Randolph's death last Saturday evening was due to a broken neck caused by the fall near the back porch at his home. County Physician Westcott has made an examination and discovered the cause of death. Mr. Randolph, in falling, struck his chest and face, and it is believed that the peculiar manner in which he fell resulted in breaking his neck.

The autopsy over the remains will be held tomorrow under the charge of the Coroner.

Had to Walk.

While Joseph Sandford, of the borough, was out sleigh-riding yesterday afternoon, his sleigh broke down and he was obliged to walk a short distance home. There was no other damage.

Judge for Yourself

Which is Better, Try an Experiment or Profit by a Plainfield Citizen's Experience.

Something new is an experiment.
Must be proven to be as represented.
Be successful at home or you doubt it.
The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit.
But the endorsement of friends is.
Now, supposing you had a bad back.
A lame, weak or aching one,
Would you experiment on it?
You will read of many so-called cures,
But they come from far-away places.
It's different when the endorsement comes from home.
Easy to prove that it is so.
Home endorsement is the proof that backs every box of Doan's Kidney Pills.
Read this case:

Mr. P. J. Kreitling, Proprietor of Barber Shop & Cigar Store living at No. 253 W. Front street, says: "I had all kinds of pain in my back and loins for the last 5 or 6 years. Standing all day long at a barber chair aggravated the difficulty very much. If I stooped and remained in that position a short time it was very hard to straighten up again and if I attempted to lift anything heavy twinges caught me in the back. I used different kinds of plasters but they did not relieve me. After reading several statements in my paper about Doan's Kidney Pills curing people similarly afflicted, I made up my mind to try a box and procured them and after a short time was entirely relieved. Doan's Kidney Pills not only cured the pain but they strengthened my back. My wife was troubled in a similar way and was also cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. We both consider them a good medicine and will gladly recommend them to anyone suffering from symptoms of disordered kidneys."

HAVOC OF THE STORM

Railroads Blocked, Ships Ashore, Life and Property Destroyed.

ATLANTIC COAST SUFFERS

The Storm of Saturday Beats the Record for November and Almost Equals the Great Blizzard of 1888. It Was Central Over New York. Boston Suffers Seriously.

New York, Nov. 29.—The storm which has just ended its career in this vicinity beat anything on record for the month of November in New York, so the local weather bureau reports. The bureau's advices, received from all over the country, show that this city was the southern center of the storm.

Unofficial reports still coming in and the experience of New Yorkers bear witness to the storm's power, and a heavy aftermath to damage to property and obstruction to traffic is still being gathered.

Steam and electric railroads, telegraph and telephone companies have men at work repairing the damage caused by the ravages of the storm. The street cleaning department is making tremendous efforts to remove the snow, but it is not likely that normal conditions will be restored before to-day.

There was no general railroad blockade. Local trains and trains through from the West were still from fifteen minutes to half an hour late yesterday morning.

But the whole of Long Island is a snow drift, and trains are not yet running on anything like schedule time. The Long Island trolleys simply proved snares, and passengers on them were compelled to walk long distances in the snow.

The New Jersey surface railroads were affected similarly, though not to the same extent.

The telegraph wires are down all over Long Island and the New England wires are crippled.

No wires are working east of Boston and the Western Union wire to Sandy Hook is disabled.

The railway mail service of this district has been seriously hampered by the storm, and incoming mails arrived at the general postoffice from two to 24 hours late.

Local Forecaster Emery says: "The storm has been attended by heavy snows in the Middle Atlantic and New England states, and dangerous onshore winds shifting to the northwest. The highest velocity was reported in New York; Boston reported 60 miles, Eastport 56, Block Island 60, and Sandy Hook 60.

"Barring Portland, New York is also credited with the heaviest snow fall, 9.7 inches, equal to .97 inches of rain. The fall in Philadelphia was nine inches and in Boston 8 1-2 inches. The fact that only a little over an inch fell in Albany shows easily that the storm was not at its fiercest inland."

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 29.—The state of Connecticut is digging itself out of the worst snow storm that has visited it since the often recalled blizzard of 1888.

Railroads are blocked, trolley lines are buried in big snow drifts and the various departments in the cities are trying as best they can to clear the streets.

One of the greatest difficulties that are confronting the city departments and the street railways is the dearth of men to shovel snow.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 29.—The New England coast, so far as could be reached by wire yesterday afternoon, is strewn with wrecks, and it is probable that more than a score of lives have been lost.

There are thirty vessels ashore on the islands in and about Boston harbor.

It is estimated that it will cost the city of Boston $100,000 and the Boston Elevated Railroad Company nearly as much to clear the streets and tracks of snow.

So far as damage to property in the city goes, it was not very extensive, although the loss of four great elms uprooted on the common in front of the state house will mar the beauty of that spot.

Tarrytown, Nov. 29.—All river men are unanimous in saying that the storm that struck this section on Saturday night is the worst since the blizzard of 1888.

Twenty-five Wrecks.

New York, Nov. 29.—Tardy reports from Long Island coast towns indicate, better than anything else, the severity of the storm. It is feared that many lives have been lost.

Giant waves swept into the bays near Northport, where vessels had taken refuge, and slammed the unfortunate craft ashore, where they lie, some of them wrecked beyond repair and others dismantled and battered.

Not a vessel remained afloat in the harbor of Northport, and twenty-five wrecks line the beach near that place. It is thought that two score wrecks will be found on the Long Island shore.

To complete the scene of desolation all the wharves, pavilions and boat houses are twisted into grotesque and curious shapes, their huge timbers being sent high on the beach, some stuck on end, firmly imbedded in the sand. Iron rods, which clamped the framework, were twisted and broken short off.

At Northport the "oldest inhabitant" has to think for some time to remember when such a scene as Saturday's storm has been witnessed before in that vicinity.

He will, however, say at once, that the famous blizzard of 1888 could not compare with this in the frightful velocity of the wind, although more snow fell.

To compare tides he will take one back to 1851, that being the record high tide year in the memory of the oldest fisherman along the shore.

Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion contains the hypophosphites.

These alone make it of great value for all affections of the nervous system.

It also contains glycerine, a most valuable, soothing and healing agent. Then there is the cod-liver oil, acknowledged by all physicians as the best remedy for poor blood and loss in weight.

GRAND OPERA FOR NEW YORK.

The Season Will Open To-night at the Metropolitan Opera House.

New York Nov. 29.—The greatest season of opera this country has ever known will begin at the Metropolitan Opera House to-night, when "Tannhauser" will be given a production such as has seldom been witnessed here or abroad. Society will look its best in the tiers upon tiers of boxes, and all the famous families of the East will be represented. The new tenor who will appear for the first time in America to-night is Ernest Van Dyck. The regular patrons of Bayreuth knew him for ten years. Before then some of them heard him in Paris, in Berlin and at Vienna, where he kept up the brilliancy of the Wagnerian performances.

MME. SCHUMAN-HEINK AS ORTRUD.

Mr. Grau's company at the Metropolitan Opera House contains no less than four American singers, Emma Eames, Zelie De Lussan, Suzanne Adams and Fanchon Thompson. Miss Adams comes to us from Paris and London, but her home is in Cambridge, Mass. Thence she was sent to study singing in Paris with Jacques Bouhy, sometime teacher in New York. Miss Adams effected her debut at the Grand Opera in 1884 as Juliette in Gounod's opera. She remained a member of the institution three years, singing such roles as Gilda and Marguerite. After a brief experience in Nice she joined Mr. Grau's forces in London and won high praise for her work.

Albert Saleza, another of Mr. Grau's tenors, was born at Bruges, in 1867. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire, and in 1888 won the first prize for singing and the second for opera. Shortly afterward he affected his debut at the Opera Comique in Lalo's "Le Roi d'Ys." He remained connected with the Opera Comique for four years, when he was engaged at the Grand Opera, taking part in performances of "Salammbo," "Djelma," "Otello," and "Romeo et Juliette."

ANDREAS DIPPEL AS LOHENGRIN.

Andreas Dippel, the tenor, is not a stranger here, having been the companion of Herr Gudehus at the Metropolitan Opera House in the last German season, 1890-91.

Then there is Madame Schumann-Heink. She is between thirty-seven and thirty-eight years old, having been born on July 15, 1861, at Lieben, near Prague, where her father, a major in the Austrian army, was stationed at the time. Her maiden name was Ernestine Rossler. Mme. Schumann-Heink's versatility is illustrated by the fact that the parts in which she has won her best successes are Wagner's Erda, Waltraute and Ortrud, Bizet's Carmen, Gluck's Oppheus, the witch in Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" and Prince Orlofsky in Strauss's "Fledermaus."

A young woman in Chicago supports herself by taking care of other people's birds and flowers. She goes daily from house to house, feeding and watering pet birds and cleaning their cages. She then turns her attention to the plants and window boxes, cleansing leaves and giving a dose of fertilizer when needed and in other ways keeping her feathered and floral patients in excellent condition.

QUAY'S CASE IN COURT

His Counsel Demurs to Four of the Indictments.

MOVES TO QUASH THE FIFTH

Court Listens to the Arguments and the Reply of the District Attorney, and Then Takes Papers Under Advisement. Failure to Charge Any Unlawful Act Says Attorney.

Philadelphia, Nov. 29.—The case of Senator Quay and others, charged with conspiracy in the misuse of the money of the state on deposit in the People's Bank, came up yesterday in the court of quarter sessions, Judge Finletter presiding.

The defendants, who are Senator M. S. Quay, his son, Richard R. Quay, and Benjamin J. Haywood, ex-state treasurer, were not in court, their interests being looked after by Attorneys Rufus E. Shapley and A. S. L. Shields.

Immediately upon the opening of the court Attorney Shapley filed demurrers to four of the five indictments found against the defendants by the grand jury, and filed a motion to quash the fifth indictment.

Argument on these demurrers was proceeded with by Mr. Shapley. In a general way the objections to the indictments were based on contentions of insufficient specifications, complete failure to charge any unlawful act and an absence of allegation that the defendants unlawfully obtained any money either from the bank or from any other source.

If the defendants did, as the indictments charge, purchase stocks and bonds through Cashier Hopkins as agent, Mr. Shapley claimed that no unlawful act had been committed. He claimed that the banks every day act as purchasers for their depositors or customers.

Regarding the allegations respecting the use of state moneys, he argued that all moneys deposited in a bank go in the general fund of the bank, and that therefore the indictments are defective in charging misuse of state funds obtained from the People's Bank whereupon, if any money was obtained from the bank it was funds of the People's Bank and not state funds. Furthermore, these state funds were deposited in the bank by various state treasurers in full authority of law.

On conclusion of the arguments and the reply of District Attorney Graham the court took the papers under advisement.

PRINTING GOVERNMENT STAMPS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Claude M. Johnson, director of the bureau of engraving and printing, in his annual report, says that during the year there were 92,979,47 sheets of stamps and government securities printed and delivered at a cost of $1,570,598.

This sum, however, includes $12,590 increase of stock, $30,000 paid for machinery and $6,416 paid to outside employes.

Deducting these extra amounts the cost per one thousand sheets this year was forty-seven cents less than last, making a total saving of $43,700.

The average number of sheets handled by each employe was 57,290, which is the best record ever made by the bureau and an increase of 56 per cent. over the year 1893.

A remarkable record was made by the bureau in supplying adhesive stamps to the internal revenue bureau. In seventeen days after the passage of the act the bureau had delivered 185,390,926 stamps.

This work was done in addition to and in connection with the new bond issue, and in addition to supplying increased demands for United States notes, silver certificates and treasury notes, as well as the issue of a new series of postage stamps for the Omaha Trans-Mississippi exposition.

The director recommends that the appropriation for printing postage stamps be made direct to the bureau, and so settle the point that the government and not private establishments shall do this work.

Breakdown on the Buffalo.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—The navy department has made public the report of the court of inquiry of which Commander John McGowan was president, appointed to investigate and determine the responsibility for the breakdown of the machinery of the cruiser Buffalo when only a few days out from New York on her way to join Rear Admiral Dewey's fleet in the Philippines.

The report found that the accidents were due to neglect and incompetency on the part of the engineers of the ship, and recommended that Chief Engineer Frederick C. Bieg be reprimanded, and that Assistant Engineers Frederick J. Simmonds, William H. MacKay and Thomas Rodgers, who have only temporary appointments, be discharged from the service.

Assistant Secretary Allen modified the findings so far as to retain the three assistants in the service, but transferred them to other duty.

Oregon Sheep Snowbound.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 29.—Thousands of sheep are imprisoned in the mountains near Pendleton, Oregon. Three feet of snow has fallen in the foothills and the sheep cannot get through it to the valleys below.

This situation results from the fact that the sheep men have kept their sheep on the mountain ranges as long as possible on account of the dryness and lack of grass outside.

Unless chinook winds blow and melt the snow, sheep men will be unable to bring their sheep out without heavy loss.

Elevator Incorporation.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 29.—The Otis Elevator Company has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $11,000,000, of which $4,500,000 is preferred. The names of the incorporators were not filed.

SPAIN ACCEPTS TERMS

Her Commissioners Announce the Fact At Paris.

YIELDS BECAUSE SHE MUST

A Protest That American Terms Were Inadmissible on Legal Grounds, but That There Was Nothing Else for Spain to Do but Submit.

Paris, Nov. 29.—The joint peace commission met promptly at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the Spanish commissioners immediately announced their acceptance of the American demands.

The Spanish commissioners announced that, being authorized by their government to reply that on legal principles the American propositions are inadmissible, and are not a proper compromise, on the Spanish part all diplomatic resources are exhausted, and the Spanish commission is now asked to accept or reject the propositions. Spain, inspired by reasons of patriotism and humanity, and to avoid the horrors of war, resigns herself to the power of the victor. She accepts the offered conditions in order to conclude a treaty of peace.

When the members of the two commissions were seated, Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish commission, immediately handed the Spanish reply to Mr. Arthur Ferguson, the Spanish interpreter attached to the United States peace commission.

The answer of the Spaniards was so short that less than ten minutes were consumed in rendering it into English for the Americans.

The reply was as stated above. It added that Spain throughout the controversy had the strongest argument and that, as between positions so diametrically opposed, the American offer of $20,000,000 was not a fair sum.

Nevertheless, the reply continued, Spain desired to avoid any further effusion of blood and disorder and had concluded to accept the American offer unconditionally, and thus bow to the superior power of the victor.

The secretaries were then empowered to prepare the treaty articles embodying the cession of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, and the payment by the United States of twenty million dollars for submission to the next meeting.

The two peace commissions were in separate session all the morning.

It was openly admitted on all sides before the joint meeting that the Spanish answer would be an acceptance of the American demands.

The American demands included the acquisition of the whole of the Philippine and Sulu groups for twenty million dollars, and it is also thought the United States will purchase the Caroline group.

The question of the debt of Cuba was left unsettled. The next meeting will take place to-morrow.

There is no denying the fact that the whole European continent will bitterly resent American acquisition of the Philippines.

This sentiment is not confined to diplomats, but is especially prevalent here in Paris.

It is the opinion constantly heard in the highest French society. It is known that a high official of the French foreign office said yesterday:

"The appearance of the Americans in Eastern waters is a disturbing factor to the whole of Europe. Americans, as is well known, lack diplomatic manners and will surely bring constant trouble to all of us."

As to the general sentiment, Mr. William T. Stead, who has just returned here from his tour of France, Belgium, Germany, Russia, Austria, Turkey and Italy, and who has seen the highest politicians in each country, and in some cases the rulers, said yesterday:

"The immense majority of Europeans are, of course, absolutely ignorant of what has happened. Intent upon their daily toil, they neither know nor care what occurs in the other hemisphere. But Europeans who read the newspapers are able to form what may be called 'public opinion' in the old world. They are practically unanimous on the matter.

"Outside of England I have not met a single non-American who was not opposed to the expansion of America. Nor, through my whole tour of Europe have I met a European who did not receive the protestations of the genuine sincerity with which the American people entered on the war with more or less mocking incredulity."

Mr. Stead reports that the bitterest hostility of all was found at the Vatican.

WHAT REMAINS TO BE DONE.

Not Likely to Take Possession of Philippines Until Treaty is Ratified.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Although no official dispatches have been received announcing final action on the peace treaty, the president was informed yesterday morning that the American commission had been notified that the Spaniards would accept our terms and that a meeting would be arranged for the formulating of the treaty.

The news was received with the greatest satisfaction by the president. He has all along expected the negotiations to end by the Spanish acceptance, but is glad that the thing is over and that the work of drawing up the treaty will now begin.

It seems to be the general impression that as soon as the treaty is signed in Paris it becomes operative, and that we will at once take possession of the Philippines, but this is not so unless some distinct proviso is made in the treaty to this effect.

If no provision is made for an immediate evacuation and possession by the Americans, things will go on in the Philippines just as they have been until the treaty goes through the regular course and is finally ratified by the Spanish.

This will take some time and will give the president and his cabinet an opportunity to prepare plans and a policy for the government of the territory.

The Paris commissioners are apt to spend days if not weeks in arranging the details and drawing up the text of the treaty.

After this is done it does not become a law until it has been ratified by the treaty making powers of the two nations.

One copy of the treaty is brought to the United States and submitted to the Senate. The other goes to Madrid for the Cortes.

If the Senate ratifies the treaty without amendment it then goes to the president, who signs it.

The exchange of ratifications between Spain and the United States then takes place, provided that the treaty has been ratified by the Cortes.

When the exchange has been made the president proclaims the treaty as the law of the land, while the queen regent does the same in Spain. Not until then can we act on it.

This procedure is with the understanding that the United States Senate accepts the treaty exactly as it is drawn by the peace commissioners. If, however, the senators amend it or change it in any way it must be submitted to the Spanish government to be accepted.

While of course this would eventually be done, it would mean a longer delay and complications.

It is expected, however, that the Senate will accept the treaty as drawn by our commissioners, and that there will be no unnecessary delay in its ratification and promulgation.

A good deal of annoyance has been caused the department by the publication in one of the Paris newspapers of what purports to be a dispatch from Washington stating that the American commissioners have largely increased their demands, and now include the Sulu islands as a part of the eastern territory to be ceded to the United States.

Official announcement is authorized that as a matter of fact, there has been no extension of our demands, but the Sulu group were recognized to be a part of the Philippine system in our original demands and was specifically included in the original demands.

cubans in need of money. .....

CUBANS NEED MONEY.

Grant or a Loan One of the Objects of the Visit to the United States.

Kingston, Jamaica, Nov. 29.—General Masso, president of the Cuban insurgent government, arrived here yesterday afternoon on a visit to his family.

In an interview he confirmed the report that one of the chief objects of the mission of General Garcia and Senors Capote, Sanguilly and Lanuza to Washington is to endeavor to secure a grant or a loan of money sufficient to pay off the insurgent army, which is about to be disbanded.

He said that the provisional government is bankrupt and that unless the Cuban army is provided for satisfactorily grave and regrettable complications may arise.

The Cubans, Senor Masso also said, entertain profound admiration and gratitude for the Americans. But, nevertheless, they will oppose annexation or a protectorate, and they are confidently expecting the United States speedily recognize their ability to manage their own affairs, on which basis only permanent peace is at all possible.

NEGRO TROOPS NOT WANTED.

Opposition in Arkansas to a War Department Order.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 29.—Lieutenant J. W. Phillips, commandant at Fort Logan H. Root has received a telegram from the war department notifying him that a detachment from the Twenty-fifth (colored) infantry would be sent to this station to do garrison duty.

This information has created excitement among citizens here.

Beyond a doubt a strong protest will be entered with the war department by the state authorities and citizens against the occupation of the post by colored troops.

The protest will not be based entirely upon hostility to the negro, but on the feeling prevalent in view of recent troubles at southern camps against placing negroes in a position where clashes with the whites are likely to follow.

Governor Jones, in speaking of the matter yesterday, said that he considered the sending of negro troops here as an exceedingly unwise thing, and declared that he would certainly remonstrate with the federal authorities, protesting against it to the war department.

Dreyfus to His Wife.

Hornellsville, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The Bank of Hornellsville has gone into voluntary liquidation by proceedings in the supreme court, for the reason that the business of the bank is not profitable, and it was deemed best to close its business, collect its assets and pay its depositors and creditors.

THE NEW BANKRUPTCY RULES.

Announced by the United States Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—The United States supreme court, through Justice Gray has announced the new bankruptcy rules which it was authorized to frame and promulgate under the National Bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898.

The rules have been awaited with much interest, as a number of courts declined to proceed with bankruptcy cases until the supreme court announced the new rules.

Justice Gray said that the new rules would take effect on Monday, January 2, 1899, and that all proceedings heretofore taken substantially in conformity to the act and the regulations of 1867, as far as practicable, would be upheld.

The rules, while promulgated at this time, he said, would not be ready for distribution for some time, owing to proof revision, etc.

The rules are preceded by an order prescribing the proceedings in bankruptcy under the law previous to the day in which the rules go into effect. This order says that where the proceedings are "in substantial conformity either with the provision of these general orders, or else with the general orders established by this court under the bankruptcy act of 1867, and with any general rules or special orders of the courts in bankruptcy, they shall stand good, subject, however, to such further regulation by rule or order of these courts as may be necessary or proper to carry into force and effect the bankrupt act of 1898 and the general orders of this court."

The first rule requires the clerk of the court to keep a docket for entering cases in their order with a memorandum of all proceedings except those entered by the referee. The docket is to be at all times open to public inspection.

Rules 2, 3 and 5 relate successively to the filing of papers, to processes, to the conduct of proceedings and to the framing of petitions.

The clerk is required to indorse on each paper filed the time of its receipt.

All processes are to issue under the seal of the court. All petitions and schedules are required to be plainly written and without abbreviation of interlineation.

Rule No. 4 provides that "proceedings may be conducted by the bankrupt in person in his own behalf, or by a petitioning or opposing creditor, but a creditor will only be allowed to manage before the court his individual interest.

"Every party may appear and conduct the proceedings by attorney, who shall be an attorney or counselor authorized to practice in the circuit or district court. Notices and orders not required to be served on the party personally, may be served upon his attorney."

The Picquart Case.

Paris, Nov. 29.—The Chamber of Deputies was crowded yesterday because of the interest taken in the Picquart case.

M. Paul Deschanel, Republican, announced that he had been requested to interpellate the government on the Picquart proceedings, and the premier, M. Dupuy, proposed an immediate discussion of the matter.

M. Fourniere, Socialist, asked for an adjournment of an hour and a half, that the Republican deputies might consult with their colleagues in the Senate regarding the adoption of a common policy.

The chamber rejected the motion by a vote of 252 to 244.

Register Today.

While there are some citizens of Plainfield who take very little interest in State affairs in New Jersey and consider it too much trouble to turn out to the polls on the occasion of the State election, the election that influences the control of the municipal government is for them far more important. The proper administration of the city is something that interests everyone residing within the borders of the city. This year promises to see an unusually close election. For a year, there has been a persistent agitation in that direction and the result is that citizens, who have never cared before, are taking a hand in the campaign and pushing the advocacy of their favorite ticket.

To vote at the municipal election, which takes place just a week from today, it is necessary first to register. Most of the eligible voters have already been registered but some may have been missed. So it behooves every citizen to look over the list of registered voters in his election district and see if his name is among them. Today is the last opportunity to register for the coming election. The places of registry will be open from 1 to 9 o'clock this evening and it is the duty of every citizen not already registered to see that his name is added to the list. The coming election is an important one and if every citizen votes, then there will be no doubt that the result will be the wish of the majority of the people of Plainfield.

The Conflict Rages.

The Fourth ward promises to be the battle ground where the conflict in the coming municipal election will rage the fiercest. Both sides are particularly anxious for the support of its voters. Last night the candidates on the Citizens' tickets conducted a lively mass meeting in that disputed ground and fired large quantities of "hot shot" at the Republican party.

Plainfield was lucky, indeed, not to have a fire Sunday Had one occurred, the department would have been greatly handicapped by the snow. In Newark and New York, much valuable property was destroyed owing to the fact that the fire departments of these cities could not reach the scene of the fire in time.

L. B. Bromfield, of the Second ward, was one of the men mentioned for the Citizens' nomination as Second ward Councilman. Mr. Bromfield desires The Daily Press to state that he is in no way connected with the Citizens' movement and will give his support to the regular Republican ticket.

There were many boroughites yesterday who were glad that they resided in that part of Jersey. Street Commissioner Conover certainly distinguished himself by the excellent manner in which he handled his force and rided the crosswalks of superfluous snow without delay.

Street Commissioner Gavett began yesterday his regular campaign against those who neglected to clean their sidewalks after the last snow storm.

The jingle of the sleigubells sounded right merrily yesterday. There were many who were glad to take advantage of the opportunity.

There will not be any mass meetings and parades in this campaign. Most of the work will be done quietly man to man.

Its just one week to election and both sides are beginning to hustle.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Snow, snow, beautiful snow.
I live at Milltown, where trolleys don't go.

South River, Bound Brook or Metuchen may be substituted in the above without destroying the historical accuracy of the verse.—New Brunswick Times.

* * * * *

People who have use for trolley cars are complaining about the wretched condition of the service from Dunellen to Bound Brook, Somerville, New Brunswick, etc. They say that the cars are not heated, and that very poor time and connections are made.—Plainfield Press.

Better stay at home or else travel on the Central. Good service cannot be expected until a power house is built at Bound Brook, and this is not likely to be done for, lo, these many moons.—Somerville Democrat.

* * * *

The Plainfield Press says: "Neat signs have been placed on the Plainfield trolley cars telling the names of places which can be reached, including Dunellen, Lincoln, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan and New Brunswick." It would be well to add: "If the power holds out." Every few days the power ceases to be a power and the cars between Bound Brook, Somerville and Raritan fails to run, much to the disadvantage of the traveling public. The power gave out last Saturday morning, and horses were drawn into service to haul the cars from the park to where the Milltown current could be caught on East street.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

* * * * *

The city of Plainfield is scarcely out of one election before it is into another. The local election for Mayor, Councilmen, etc., is to be held soon, and Plainfield is growing very hot, politically, over the campaign. A few months ago it was currently reported in Plainfield that the Republican party was in a very bad way; that there was bad blood between factions and that when the opportunity came the "people" would slaughter the "machine," etc., and gore would bedable every trail. It was even intimated that the fury of the factions could not be held in check until after the State election and it was ominously hinted that Voorhees and Fowler and the whole Republican county ticket would suffer. The splendid Republican majorities given in Plainfield proved that these intimations were imaginings, and that they had little foundation. Evidently the Plainfield Republicans believe in slaughtering the enemy but not in killing each other. The local election, soon to take place, is likely to be another Republican victory. A few days ago the Democrats seemed determined to run a straight ticket, but they soon found it would not do. Then a Citizens' movement was inaugurated, but it has thus far resulted in bickerings over the selection of candidates. Meanwhile the Republicans have prepared their ticket, picked their flints, and are a solid phalanx, ready for the fray. They have selected excellent men, and that they will win is practically certain.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Canal Scandals.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Governor Black has as yet given no intimation of how soon he proposes to announce his action upon the report of the canal investigation commission.

There have been no developments at this place so far to substantiate the stories current in New York city political circles that Judge Countryman's report is of such a nature that the governor has decided to suspend Superintendent of Public Works George W. Aldridge.

In fact, no one outside of the executive chamber knows whether Judge Countryman's report has been submitted to the governor as yet.

Neither the governor nor the judge will discuss the matter in any way whatever.

Caravan Attacked.

London, Nov. 29.—A dispatch from Tripoli says that a caravan from the Soudan has been attacked by a band of tribesmen near Ghal, an oasis in the Sahara to the south of Tripoli and on the border of Gezzan.

Twenty persons belonging to the caravan were killed and eighty camel loads of feathers and 380 loads of Soudan skins were lost.

Three Men Perished.

Salem, Mass., Nov. 29.—Two members of the crew of the schooner Bertha A. Goss, from Deer Isle, Me., were rescued from House island, off Manchester yesterday, nearly dead, having been without shelter or food for thirty hours. The schooner was lost on the rocks near Fresh Island, Saturday.

Captain Wallace Thurston, his father, aged about seventy years, and his son, John R., perished.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Marie Wainwright will present "Shall We Forgive Her" at Music Hall, Friday night. The story is that of a friendless girl, who leaves her home to join her affianced lover in Australia. Betrayed and afterwards cast aside, she manages to get to England, where she afterwards becomes the wife of a good man. Her former companion turns up as a shadow from the past and with the assistance of a rival of the wife, finally sees the latter cast off by her husband. The wrongs are finally righted and everything ends happily. The leading role is, of course, assumed by that very able actress, Marie Wainwright. It is quite superfluous to say that Miss Wainwright brings to the part the force, dignity and ability necessary to its interpretation. She is a valuable acquisition and her name at the head of the cast will strengthen the guarantee of a good performance.

* * * * *

Manager Maze Edwards has received word from Daniel Frohman that owing to the splendid success achieved in Philadelphia by Jas. K. Hackett in the new play entitled "Rupert of Hentzan," he will present this new play when his Lyceum Theatre Company appear here Saturday, December 10th, instead of "The Tree of Knowledge," previously announced. "Rupert of Hentzan" is Anthony Hope's sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda" and bids fair to be as great a success. The company appearing here will be the same that will present the play in New York.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

It is said that whenever a reporter of The News happens to see a schoolhouse without an American flag on it, he straighway inserts a news item in his paper to the effect that some local Council Jr. O. U. A. M., has promised or is going to donate a flag. The members of the order are becoming rather tired of that sort of thing and have been complaining about such misrepresentation.

* * * * *

It is really funny to see how both political parties with tickets in the field at the coming municipal election are supremely confident of winning. A prominent Republican worker told the writer the other day that it was only a question of how many hundred the Republican majority would amount to. A leader in the Citizens' movement explained to the writer that it was absolutely certain that all but two or three of the ticket would be elected and that it was probable that every candidate would win Funny, isn't it, that people can have such different ideas.

* * * * *

Plainfield people are beginning to realize that in the Plainfield Art Gallery, in the Y. M. C. A. building, there is constantly displayed a line of paintings, in oil and water colors, sketches and prints that is well worth examining. Although most of the pictures are purchased out of the city, local artists sometimes place their products in Manager Drake's hands for him to sell on commission.

Among the paintings are several from the brush of J. F. F. Smock, of New Brunswick. Mr. Smock's specialty is portraits, and he paints some in oil, but at present has nothing on exhibition here except water colors. The pictures are all good, and show the artist to be painstaking and particularly attentive to details.

Among the pictures are two fine ones, a view of the Raritan river in the autumn season. In the foreground are the ruins of an old dock. There is a touch of color to the sky, and in the distance are glimpses of the blue hills. Another is a Colorado scene, with its dim-colored bluffs covered with trailing vines. The river flows peacefully down the ravine, and a deer, looking as natural as life, stands gazing upon the scene from an advantageous standpoint. Besides these the walls are covered with others equally good, and some of great value.

—Last Sunday the high wind resulted disastrously for the flag pole on Dr. Cooley's property on Westervelt avenue. The pole was completely wrecked.

—The monthly meeting of the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last night at the home of Miss Adelaide Runyon, of Arlington avenue.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 29—John Henry and family moved into Mrs. Mary Coriell's house on North avenue yesterday.

No services were held in the Methodist or Presbyterian churches Sunday morning or evening. A union temperance service was to have been held but this had to be postponed. Rev. Frank Fletcher went to the Baptist church in the morning and found two people there. Needless to say he didn't preach the sermon.

Alfred Pearsall will appear in his great impersonation of Sergeant Jack Manly in a Soldier's Story in the Presbyterian church tonight. Everyone should go, for this entertainment is well worth attending.

Some of the farmers around here say that they never saw the moon set so far north at this time of the year as it did yesterday morning, which means a spell of cold wet weather with plenty of snow.

Workmen were busy all yesterday until dark cleaning away the snow from the street car tracks, and at last the cars are able to run again.

Mr. and Mrs. Estey and family, of Bayonne, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boice, of Washington avenue.

Peter V. Huff, who had an operation performed upon him at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, is improving.

Several members of the local gun club will go to New Brunswick Thursday to take part in a shoot there.

A free lesson in shorthand will be given all who come to the Town Hall Thursday evening.

Isaac J. Stites, the blacksmith, had his hands full yesterday sharpening the horses' shoes.

Augustus Runyon, of Plainfield, spent Sunday with his father, John Runyon.

Percy Abbott has returned from a visit with his grandparents in Somerville.

Miss Mathena Bodine has returned to the Trenton Normal School.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 29.—Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of the Methodist church, preached an interesting sermon Sunday evening. Mr. Woodruff took for his text "The Ideal Friend." This was the last of his series of sermons on "Ideals."

Mrs. James Moore and Miss Lena Breichman, while enjoying a sleigh ride Monday afternoon, struck a large drift on Mountain avenue near Mrs. Warren Ackerman's and were upset. No damage was done, as the horse was caught by a passerby.

Miss Sadie Reger, who went to spend her Thanksgiving vacation with her parents at Succasanna, Morris county, became snow bound and was unable to return in time to assume her duties as teacher in the school Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stiliger, of Roselle, visited friends in town Monday evening. The boys in town soon heard of their arrival and they had to endure the usual serenade given to all who take the step.

The Scotch Plains and Plainfield stage was stalled in the large drift on Coles' hill Monday morning and it was sometime before Mr. Newman was able to dig his way out.

A number of the young people of the village formed a party Monday evening and enjoyed a straw-ride to Springfield and return.

Miss Emma Adams returned Monday from her Thanksgiving vacation, spent at her home at Middletown, N. Y.

AS TO STRIKING MATCHES.

Streaks That Show Where Lights Were Produced to Be Found Everywhere.

"I may be wrong," said the little woman, "but I fully believe that a man would strike a match on the tombstone of his mother," and her eyes snapped and her cheeks flushed at the idea of such a sacrilege.

Go where one will, in the most out-of-the-way place or corner to ignite a match, telltale streaks will be found as positive proof that a match striker has been there before. Raise the drapery about a mantel and peer underneath and there again will come in view the cabalistic brown tracks, the "blazed" way, as it were, of the match-striking guild.

Letter boxes, street corners, door jambs, bottoms of chairs and edges of bureaus, washstands and dressing cases possess the hiero—or pyro—glyphics.

Even church edifices are not sacred when the hurried call is issued for a light. Even alter rails have been visited by the same touch. In fact, there is no place too sacred or too much out of the way not to have, at one time or the other, received the necessary friction required to secure a light. When Cleopatra's Needle was placed in Central Park the apex bore traces, among the almost obliterated hieroglyphics, of the passing of the match. It is said that the same modern signs can be found upon the topknot of the Sphinx and upon the top of the Pyramids.

Story of a Waiter.

This is the story of a man who went into a store to buy a nickle spool of thread—he wanted nothing more. The floorman took him by the arm and directed him aright to where a blonde presided from morning until night. He bought the thread and settled with a sort of reckless dash and the blonde girl lifted up her voice and loudly called for "Cash." Then came a little short-haired girl, with beads about her neck, who took the thread to another clerk, who entered up the check; she then transferred it to a boy in uniform and cap, who took it to the basement for another clerk to wrap. Two hours later it came back only to be rejected by the blonde girl, just because it wasn't marked "Inspected." Then from another hour it went from place to place till at last the thread and purchaser were brought face to face. Grabbing it, he hurried home and said unto his wife: "Had I tried to spend a dollar they'd have kept me there for life."—Chicago News.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

Seven Uses for a Lemon.

No family should be without lemons. Their uses are almost too many for enumeration.

The juice of a lemon, taken in hot water on awaking in the morning, is an excellent liver corrective, and for stout women is better than any anti-fat medicine ever invented.

Glycerine and lemon juice, half and half, on a bit of absorbent cotton is the best thing in the world wherewith to moisten the lips and tongue of a fever-parched patient.

A teaspoonful of the juice in a small cup of black coffee will almost certainly relieve a bilious headache.

The finest of manicure acids is made by putting a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cupful of warm water. This removes most stains from the fingers and nails, and loosens the cuticle more satisfactorily than can be done by the use of a sharp instrument.

Lemon juice and salt will remove rust stains from linen without injury to the fabric. Wet the stains with the mixture and put the article in the sun. Two or three applications may be necessary if the stain is of long standing, but the remedy never fails.

For an excellent flavoring for custards, jellies, etc., take a quart glass jar and put into it a pint of good preserving brandy. Into this put the lemon rinds after squeezing them for lemonade from time to time until the jar is full, keeping it sealed except when open for use, and you will have a pure lemon extract, as good or better than any which you can buy.

How to Take Care of Lamps.

The light of oil lamps is so much softer and less injurious for the eyes, than flickering gas, or even electricity, that it really should be used instead of these in all nurseries and children's rooms, and the only drawback about lamps is that they require such careful tending to keep them in a safe and bright condition. But given a conscientious nurse, or a mistress who undertakes their management herself, all will be well. One very necessary thing in lamps is that the oil reservoir be kept scrupulously clean inside; no oil is so pure that it does not leave a sediment, and, if this sediment be allowed to accumulate, the succeeding oil fails to burn as brightly as it otherwise would. Lamp reservoirs should be washed out once a week with hot water and pearlash and be allowed to thoroughly drain and dry before new oil be added. The burner should also be frequently cleaned—once a day, in fact—and every orifice should be thoroughly cleaned out; the wick should be wiped at the top with a piece of soft rag, to remove the charred edges, and if the wick should be found to burn rather cloudily, it may be necessary to remove it the next morning and soak it for an hour or two in vinegar and water. It should be quite dry before being again placed in the burner.

The Dignified Woman.

The dignified woman never has any complaint to make of familiarity on the part of men with whom she comes in contact either socially or in business life. Her dignity is a shield against insult and the brightest jewel in her crown of womanly attributes. The dignified woman of necessity need not be so frigid in her demeanor as to be repellant, but she can be possessed of a winsome sweetness all her own which is emphasized by the quiet calm that is the outward evidence of mental equipoise. The flippant badinage which so many women think attractive to the other sex fails to win half the admiration that is accorded the quiet dignity of the one who never allows herself to lapse into any familiarity of speech or action on which a false construction might be placed. If nature has not endowed woman with this commendable characteristic it is well to set about its cultivation at once, for it is a well known fact that it is quite as easy to train a set of manners as a set of morals, and as the attribute of dignity can be classified under both headings it is easily seen what rare advantages must accrue to the woman who wins it for her own.—Buffalo Inquirer.

"She is My Dictionary."

The wife of the sculptor Flaxman was greatly responsible for her husband's success. Sir Joshua Reynolds, chancing to meet Flaxman soon after his wedding, said to him that his marriage was a mistake, since it would ruin him as an artist. On reaching home Flaxman sat down by his wife, took her hand in his and said:

"Ann, I am ruined as an artist."

"How so, John?" said she. "How did it happen and who has done it?"

"It happened in the church and Ann Denman has done it."

Then Ann declared that great he should become, and that no one should say "Ann Denman ruined Flaxman for an artist."

Their means were small, but by work and economy on the part of the wife Flaxman at the end of five years was able to go to Rome, where he studied for seven years. For thirty-eight years Flaxman had in his wife a cheerful, wise and appreciative helper. He was himself a perfect child in business matters, but he fully appreciated his wife's cleverness, and in questions of difficulty he would say: "Ask Mrs. Flaxman—she is my dictionary."—Chicago Record.

Coat for Little Girl.

A stylish outdoor garment for a little girl is made of dark red serge and trimmed with fancy braid and buttons. It is arranged with a lining front and back. The material is gathered at the neck front and back and fastens down the center of the front invisibly with hooks and eyes. The revers are stiffened and lined with silk and trimmed at the edges with braid as are also the little turn down collar and rounded epaulets over the sleeves. The full bishop sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs.

How the Placket is Closed.

Couriers from Paris cry that the new fashion of buttoning the dress skirt at the back was the happy thought of a French, dressmaker, young, handsome and masculine. When the real solution of the placket difficulty came it was sure to be simple. But no one supposed that a man would discover it.

Men, except Worth and a few others, have been conspicuously successful in readily inventing novelties for women's costuming. Men do mechanical work on women's clothing much better than women. But it is the feminine dressmakers who think up pretty patterns. Though they often may be unable to execute them.

The mind which should conceive a suitable placket closing had to be inventive, and the hands which worked out the model skilled.

Francis, the genius who is said to have conquered the placket, is both original and experienced. He was a tailor's apprentice not long ago. Now he is reported a despot, before whose decision women bow as to their confessor's.

Francis's plackets are buttoned through the outer goods. The buttons are made from the material of the gown. They are ornamental, but require to be fitted with perfection. Six or seven buttons, dime size, are used. His dresses are cut without a scrap of fullness in the back.

To show that he is altogether superior to placket trickeries, he omits them entirely from the back of some frocks, closing the skirt on the left side invisibly. A skirt without any fullness whatever at the back, near the belt, is rather startling at first, but one soon becomes accustomed to and likes it.

The New Bicycle Skirt.

English women are wearing a new bicycle skirt, "The Badminton," which appears to have peculiar advantages, and some drawbacks. The inventor disdains the idea that the skirt is divided. Yet it is in two portions, by whatever name you call it.

The advantages are in the ease with which any bicycle may be mounted, the absence of all entangling straps and elastics, and the unique superiority of the garment for use with a wheel of diamond frame.

The only seeming objection to the skirt is the old one of some men disliking any garment on a woman which hints that she has more than one foot. However, men are more liberal about feminine athletic costumes now in this country. And such a skirt might be much admired in Lenox or in the morning hours in Newport if a knowing tailor should build it from one or another of the plain or checked fabrics now in vogue.

Peculiar Wedding Rings.

There is a popular idea that a ring made of gold is the only one that can be legally used in a wedding ceremony. This is, however, a fallacy. Any and every kind of ring may be used, and though gold ones are customary, there is no reason whatever why silver or any commoner metal should not be called into requisition. Numerous instances are on record of runaway marriages in which a brass ring has played the all important part, and the legality of the ceremony has never been questioned. In some cases a piece of hurriedly-tied string has answered the same purpose, as have also circles cut out of card paper.

Frankenthal. Der hiesige Alterthums-Verein veranstaltet im hiesigen Erkenbert-Museum eine Ausstellung aller in seinem Besitze befindlichen zahlreichen Dokumente, Aufrufe der provisorischen Regierung, Bilder, Karikaturen, anderer Gegenstände u. s. w., die auf das denkwürdige Jahr des pfälzischen Aufstandes und die Freiheitskämpfer des Jahres 1848 Bezug haben.

Ludwigshafen. Dieser Tage brachte ein Nürnberger Händler zwei Eisenbahnwagen Aepfel hierher, die für einen hiesigen Händler bestimmt waren. Aus irgend einem Grunde wurde indeß das Obst nicht abgeliefert, sondern der Nürnberger Händler verkaufte es hier freihändig an die Konsumenten. Er wurde nun wegen Errichtung eines unversteuerten—Wanderlagers in eine Geldstrafe (einschließlich Steuer und Umlage) von 800 Mark verurtheilt. Man ersieht hieraus, wie Tendenzgesetze wirken. Es ist bei Erlaß des Wanderlager-Steuergesetzes Niemand eingefallen, daß es sich auch auf den Obsthandel erstrecken könne.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Das Parteisekretariat der Deutschen Volkspartei hat einen Organisationskalender der deutschen Volkspartei herausgegeben. Er gibt eine knappe, übersichtliche Zusammenstellung der Organisation und ermöglicht den Parteigenossen nicht nur über diese, sondern auch über das Ausbreitungsgebiet der Partei einen Ueberblick.—Der schwäbische Frauenverein, dessen ersprießliches, segensreiches Wirken allgemein anerkannt wird, beging hier kürzlich sein 25jähriges Jubiläum.

Krailsheim. Reichsgraf Konstantin v. Törring, der seit zehn Jahren hier wohnte, ist gestorben. Im Mai 1898 zog er sich eine schwere Verletzung durch das Entladen seines Gewehres zu, worauf der rechte Arm abgenommen werden mußte. In den letzten Tagen mußte er sich in Würzburg einer Nachoperation unterziehen, kam auch gebessert zurück und erkrankte an einer Lungenentzündung, die seinen Tod herbeiführte. Er war 1830 zu Ludwigsburg geboren.

Rottenburg. Zum Nachfolger des kürzlich verstorbenen Bischofs Dr. von Linsenmann ist der Professor der Theologie an der Universität Freiburg, Dr. Paul Keppler, erwählt worden.

Ulm. Die Vereinbarungen zwischen der Stadt Ulm und den einschlägigen Militärbehörden wegen Entfestigung des Stadtkernes, das heißt Niederlegung der Hauptumwallung, haben in so fern zu einem definitiven Abschluß geführt, als die Ueberlassung des freiwerdenden Festungsgeländes ohne die für die Militär- oder Eisenbahnverwaltung noch benöthigten Strecken prinzipiell zugestanden ist.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Die badische Regierung verbot Angesichts erhöhter Gefahr neuerdings die Einfuhr von frischem Fleisch und frischer Milch aus den verseuchten Theilen der Schweiz.—Das Palais Schmider wurde von Prinz Max um 450,000 Mark erworben.—Frau Stadtrath Dr. Speemann Wittwe wurde neulich Nachmittags in der Zähringerstraße beim Radfahren vom Schlage gerührt und starb auf der Stelle.

Konstanz. In der Nähe von hier stürzte das Gefährt des Hofbauern Alois Reidhard in eine Kiesgrube. Reidhard kam unter den Wagen zu liegen und wurde erdrückt, während ein auf dem Wagen sitzendes Mädchen mit leichteren Verletzungen davonkam.

Müllheim. Hier ist ein Giftmord an der jungen Ehefrau des Goldarbeiters Karl Kallmann verübt worden. Die Frau trank ein Glas neuen Wein und fiel bald darauf todt zu Boden. Die Oeffnung der Leiche ergab Vergiftung mit Cyankali. Wer das Gift in den Wein geschüttet hat, ist noch nicht aufgeklärt. Die Frau befand sich in der Gesellschaft ihres Ehemannes, der in seinem Geschäft Cyankali zu technischen Zwecken verwendet.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

A lump of gum and a bit of tin,
Two marbles, a top, and a fishhook or two,
A dozen "B" shot and his father's cork-screw,
A button, a knife, and a leather sling,
An empty spool and some more string,
Tobacco tags, of kind galore,
A penny whistle and an apple core,
A piece of rubber and a stale fishworm,
(Which I knew by the odor had lost its squirm),
Four carpet tacks and a discarded locket
I found to-night in my sweet boy's pocket.

His Beautiful Aunt Le'Nora.

"Ten-cent carriage for a quarter! Ten-cent carriage for a quarter!"

In the babble of gruff hackmen's voices, the shrill childish cry rose distinctly, says a writer in the Examiner. The gray lady with the pleasant face smiled when she heard it. The voice was so sweet, and it said such funny things! She took up her shawl strap and little brown "grip" and followed it.

"Ten-cent carriage for a quarter! Ten-cent carriage for a quarter!" shrilled on the imperative little voice above the din.

"Oh, here you are!" the gray lady cried. "Well, I would like to go to Axminster street, if you please."

"Yes'm," said the voice's owner, promptly, adding in delighted surprise, "Why, that's the street I live on, too!"

He bustled about busily for a minute. Then he suddenly stopped and inspected his "fare" with grave suspicion.

"I'm afraid you won't fit," he said, despondently.

The gray lady glanced at the tiny dog-cart and still tinier pony, and laughed all over her sweet face.

"Oh, yes," she hurried to say reassuringly, "you can make me fit. I can be squeezed beautifully."

"You see," the driver confided to her confidentially, as they clattered away, "I was hoping you'd be a real slim, up 'n' down passenger, but I guess it's all right. You fit quite nicely, I think."

"Is this the first time you've driven a hack?" questioned the gray lady with interest.

"Yes'm, but 'tisn't a hack. It's a ten-cent carriage."

They drove on a little way without talking. The gray lady, looking down at the little heated, anxious face, saw that it was pondering gravely.

"Do you think it's too much to ask—a quarter is, I mean?" the driver asked suddenly. "You see, I never drove a ten-cent carriage before, and so I haven't had much 'sperience."

"I don't think it's one cent too much to ask," the gray lady said, emphatically.

"'Cause if so, you know, you needn't pay but fifteen cents. I'm real sorry I can't take you for nothing, but I'm earning money to send to my Aunt Le'nora. I want to see her dreadf'ly, and she was coming right away, but she's got an equinom'cal fit—a real bad one—and now I'm 'fraid she can't come. I asked papa what cured equinom'cal fits, and he said nothing 'cept money would. So I'm earning it to send. I do want to see Aunt Le'nora so!"

The gray lady's arms felt as though they wanted to hug the driver, but they didn't. Her face was all a-quiver with a queer bright look.

"You see. I've never seen Aunt Le'nora since I was born," ran on the explanatory little voice, "and when you've never seen folks, it makes you want to harder. She's a beautiful auntie, and sends me things and writes to me."

They were turning into Axminster street, and the driver waved his whip toward one of the houses.

"That's my house," he volunteered, cheerfully.

"Let's stop there," the gray lady said, quickly.

And—of all the wonderful, beautiful things—the gray lady that got into the tiny ten-cent carriage got out of it—Aunt Le'nora!

How Birds Learn to Sing.

A wren built her nest in a box on a New Jersey farm. The occupants of the farmhouse saw the mother teach her young to sing. She sat in front of them and sang her whole song very distinctly. One of the young attempted to imitate her. After proceeding through a few notes its voice broke, and it lost the tune. The mother immediately recommenced where the young one had failed, and went very distinctly through with the remainder. The young bird made a second attempt, commencing where it had ceased before, and continuing the song as long as it was able; and when the note was again lost, the mother began anew where it had stopped, and completed it. Then the young one resumed the tune, and finished it. This done, the mother sang over the whole series of notes a second time, with great precision, and a second of the young attempted to follow her. The wren pursued the same course with this one as with the first; and so with the third and fourth. This was repeated day after day, and several times a day, until each of the birds became a perfect songster.

IN THE HARBOR.

It was a misty morning. The smoke from my companion's pipe enveloped the bowl in curling wreaths of blue as we walked slowly past the limekiln.

"The harbor lies before us," he said, "while the lake stretches miles and miles away, and that sombre gray shaft, towering grim near the breakwater, is the lighthouse. Yonder is the trestle, where the bonniest lad of all went down, down into the murky depths of the stream as treacherous as the Indians who gave it its name.

"Ay, lad! I am not ashamed of these tears—but you shall hear the story. To the right you noticed the weather-beaten shanties and one more pretentious than the rest? Here lived the widow Anderson with her son John. The majority of the people around here were naturally dishonest. Petty thefts were constantly occurring, and it soon became evident that a night watchman must be stationed between the upper and lower bridges. John Anderson was the unanimous choice. He was then but twenty-one, the sole support of his mother, a young man of more than ordinary ability.

"In one of the houses lived a swarthy fellow, a Canadian, with a numerous family; he had no inclination to work and no visible means of support. His wife had often appealed to Mrs. Anderson and John for aid, sometimes at night, to steady the brute indoors, sometimes for food, while the man pretended to be seeking employment. Often an ailing child demanded more tender care than the parents were capable of administering, and, during the heated term, both watched night after night, caring for the baby struggling for life in the stifling atmosphere.

"Finally John came to me, and we succeeded in obtaining employment for him at the coal yard across the river, where you see the trestle. The woman was grateful, but kindness seemed to kindle a spirit of evil in the man, and as he was far more willing to tell of his past exploits than to labor, his co-workers soon cordially disliked him. The morning the news was received that John Anderson had been appointed night watchman, every man on the opposite shore cheered heartily save this Canadian.

"The night before a quantity of lumber had disappeared, and the large elevator near the upper bridge had been entered, although the watchman had taken unusual precaution. There was intense excitement along the docks. The store, a mere rat-trap of loose boards, had been a heavy loser, and a large reward had been offered by the proprietor.

"It was a good deal such a night as this is a morning," continued my friend, "when John bade his mother good-night and laughingly told her not to worry—he wouldn't forget the morning meal. But after he had gone, the poor woman came to our office in great agitation. I happened to be the only one in at the time, and she tremulously entreated me to have John recalled.

"'Just for this night, sir! Don't call it superstition! He will never come back to me alive!'

"Sanford came in at that moment, and we did our best to allay her fears.

"'You do not know these people as I do,' she said, excitedly. 'And this Canadian! Why, his wife has looked at me from her narrow black eyes, as though she would warn me, ever since she heard of John's appointment.

"'Him take care! Him watch out!' she told me this morning. Can't something be done?' And worn out with nervousness, the poor woman sank into a chair.

"Well, the story is soon told. In the morning, when I entered the office they told me the boat had been discovered drifting out past the pier, and they feared for Mrs. Anderson's reason. After searching all that day and well into the next, the poor boy was found, a bruise on the temple; and the physicians at once declared he had been murdered.

"From the first the grief stricken mother knew nothing. 'The Canadian!' were the only words intelligible. She was taken to the asylum, and yesterday we heard of her death.

"A few weeks after the affair, I felt an uncontrollable desire to return to the office. My wife urged me to remain at home, but I seemed compelled to obey the unseen mandate and go forth.

"About midnight found me between the row of houses and the mill. Suddenly I heard a door open and a woman's voice, crying hysterically.—

"'Pierre—look quick—he is coming this way! For you! Oh, mon Dieu!' And then followed tears and imprecations from within.

"Glancing around I saw in the window of the deserted home what appeared to be a bright light, and a white object swaying in the light breeze, which had sprung up but a few minutes before. Some drapery, probably.

"I found our man greatly aroused over the loss of a few bags of grain carelessly left near the outer door of the yard, and noticed by the watchman as he passed through the gate to the mill.

"'It's that Canadian!' he said again and again. 'I will catch him yet!'

"Warning him to be careful, and to exercise the utmost caution, I started for home, once more passing the lime kiln. Near the walk a cart stood, and by the boxes and bundles I knew Pierre and his family were leaving town.

"Of course there was no evidence sufficient to convict him of the murder, but everyone felt assured he was the thief John Anderson discovered that fatal night, and in return was foully murdered.

"A year after, the police were looking for this same man. He had been traced from Montreal to this port and here the clew was lost. But never shall I forget that gaunt woman framed in the doorway, and the pitiful cry of 'Pierre! Pierre! He is coming for you!'"

A JAPANESE HERO.

It is a beautiful story told by Lafcadio Hearn of an old man whose great deeds belong to Japanese history. He was Hamaguchi, and his farmhouse stood on the verge of a small plateau overlooking the bay. The plateau, mostly devoted to rice culture, was hemmed in on three sides by thickly wooded summits; and from the outer verge the land sloped down to the sea. Below were ninety thatched dwellings and a temple; these composed the village.

One autumn evening Hamaguchi Gohei was looking down from his balcony on the preparations for some merrymaking in the village below. All the villagers were out, and he would have gone with them, had he not been feeling less strong than usual.

Suddenly there came an earthquake shock, not a very strong one; but Hamaguchi, who had felt many before this, thought there was something odd in its long, spongy motion. As the quaking ceased, he chanced to look toward the sea, and there he saw the strangest possible sight; it seemed to be running away from the land.

Apparently the whole village had noticed it, for the people stood still in wonderment; only Hamaguchi drew any conclusions from the phenomenon, and guessed what the sea would do next. He called his little grandson, a lad of ten, the only one of the family left with him.

"Tada! Quick! Light me a torch!"

The child kindled a pine torch, and the old man hurried with it to the fields, where hundreds of rice stacks stood ready for transportation. One by one he lighted them in haste, and they caught, like tinder, sending skyward masses of smoke that met and mingled in one cloudy whirl. Tada, astonished and terrified, ran after his grandfather, weeping and calling: "Why? why? why?"

Hamaguchi did not answer; he thought only of four or five hundred lives in peril. He watched for the people, and in a moment only, they came swarming up from the village like ants.

And still the sea was fleeing toward the horizon. The first party of succor arrived, a score of agile young peasants, who wanted to attack the fire at once; but Hamaguchi, stretching out both his arms, stopped them.

"Let it burn, lads!" he commanded. "Let it be. I want the whole village here."

The whole village came, mothers and children last of all, drawn by concern and curiosity.

"Grandfather is mad. I am afraid of him," sobbed little Tada. "He set fire to the rice on purpose. I saw him do it."

"As for the rice," said Hamaguchi, "the lad tells the truth. I set fire to it. Are all the people here?"

"All are here," was the answer; "but we cannot understand this thing."

"See!" cried the old man, at the top of his voice, pointing to the open. "Say if I be mad."

It was the returning sea, towering like a cliff, and coursing swifter than the kite. There was a shock, heavier than thunder, as the colossal swell smote the shore, with a foam-burst like a blaze of sheet-lightning.

Then a white horror of sea raved over the village itself. It drew back, roaring and tearing out the land as it went. Twice, thrice, five times it struck and ebbed, each time with lesser surges, and then it returned to its ancient bed, and stayed there, although still raging. Of all the homes about the bay nothing remained but two straw roofs tossing madly in the offing. All lips were dumb, until Hamaguchi observed gently:

"That is why I set fire to the rice."

He was now poor as the poorest in all the village; but he had saved four hundred lives.

Why She Wept.

An amusing incident occurred recently at the Lenox home of a Boston family. They had urged some friends who were driving through the Berkshires to stop with them to lunch. This they were finally persuaded to do, a little girl three years old being of the party. Soon after they were all seated at the table Mr. Ultradude, a guest in the house (a man of curling locks parted in the middle), appeared and took his accustomed seat, which chanced to be just opposite the high chair occupied by Ethel. The child, after a glance or two at the newcomer, began to show symptoms of weeping, and a moment or two afterward burst into such a flood of tears that she had to be taken from the room. Ethel has so bright and sunny a disposition and so little of the cry-baby about her that her mother felt justified in hastening after the nurse and child to know the cause of so unexpected an outbreak. When the little one could command her voice she managed to confide to her mother between her sobs, "I's so 'fraid of that boy with a girl's head!"—Harper's Round Table.

THE COTTON BELT.

MOMENTOUS DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN INDUSTRY.

Its Centre Has Moved Beyond the Mississippi and Scientific Methods of Culture Have Been Adopted—The Low Prices Keep Down Foreign Competition.

North Carolina has already enough mills within her borders to spin every bale of cotton raised in the State and a little to spare, and in a few years the same will be true of Georgia, South Carolina and a few other Atlantic States. But now it is predicted that within ten years these great Southern mills will be as far from the centre of cotton production as the New England mills, when the distance is measured by freight rates. The reason for this is not far to seek. The cotton belt has been changing and shifting year by year. The great bulk of our cotton came from the States east of the Mississippi twenty years ago, but to-day about seven-tenths of the crop is raised beyond that river. The cotton belt was supposed originally to run only through the best lands of Virginia, Georgia and the two Carolinas, with the edges overlapping parts of the contiguous States. Texas was not thought of, Arkansas was too far west and Missouri and Kansas were supposed to be good only for corn and cattle.

The map of the cotton belt is entirely altered, and each successive year it must be enlarged to include new territory where cotton flourishes abundantly. Texas has forged ahead in cotton raising so rapidly that growers wonder where it will stop; Arkansas has more recently started upon a similar career; while the farmers of Kansas and Missouri are beginning to raise cotton on a large scale. At the present rate of increase this great belt west of the Mississippi will soon be raising three-fourths of all our cotton. Then the mills of the South, around which so much interest centres to-day, will have as great a problem to solve as the New England mills are struggling with.

But the growth and development of the cotton mills in the South will continue, now that the movement has been once started. They will not stop in the cotton belt east of the Mississippi, but new ones will appear in Kansas and Missouri, and south to the Gulf. There is something in this new cotton belt that promises great things for the future. The climate is, in some respects, better suited to cotton growing than the Atlantic seaboard States. The cotton plants demonstrate this better than any scientific theory. The bush grows higher and bears longer, while open, rainless falls make the harvesting easier and the injury from insects and weather less.

It is estimated by the Department of Agriculture that cotton can be raised successfully in nearly one-third of the territory of the United States. At present the cotton belt covers 24 degrees of longitude and about 10 degrees of latitude, but only about one-twentieth of the land is actually used for cotton growing. Thus the 20,000,000 acres of cotton plantations represent only a fraction of the vast empire of cotton soil that has never been tilled.

The fear that cotton growing has reached its zenith, and that it must soon decline, in view of the low prices received for it, looms up every season when the new crop begins to come in, but like similar nightmares, it fails to produce any permanent results. The world has just begun to use cotton. Our invasion of the Japanese markets with this product is but a promise of what we may expect on a larger scale in other quarters. There are over 1,500,000,000 human beings existing on this globe, and of this number about half are imperfectly clad. They live in climates where little protection is needed, but that protection must come in the form of cotton clothes. The vast hordes of the Orient, of the islands of the Pacific, and of the great African continent, require cotton goods for clothing. To-day they go without them only because they are not obtainable at prices within their means.

The world's yield of cotton has trebled in twenty-five years, and it has nearly doubled itself in the last ten years. Our own product has represented a large percentage of this increase. India, China and Egypt can raise cotton on a large scale, too, but, with all their cheap labor, the Southern planter can raise and the American manufacturer can work up into salable goods our cotton and place it in Eastern markets at prices lower than the natives can ever hope to accomplish.—New York Sun.

Pulling Off Hats.

"I have not yet lived a million years," said Mr. Goslington, "but so far I observe that there is one form of play that all boys have alike during a considerable period of their youthful existence. This consists in pulling off other boys' hats and throwing them in the street. The desire, or impulse, to do this comes at a very early age, and it remains in the boy until he is pretty well grown.

"It is not unusual to see a boy ten or twelve years old, or even older than that, pull off another boy's hat, usually, in some instances, the hat of a smaller boy, and throw it away. Here the act is intended to be annoying and exasperating, and it is a pretty mean thing for the big boy to do; but little boys do this thing just out of sheer playfulness."

SPORTING.

CHASING THE PIGSKIN.

FOOTBALL NOTES OF PARTICULAR LOCAL INTEREST.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

The Plainfield players would have been sadly handicapped Thursday morning had the San Remos shown up. Ray McGee, who was expected to play guard, was ill and his college friend who was to fill the other position in the centre trio failed to come. Thomas, substitute end on the Yale varsity, came but he had no idea of the signals and would have been badly off in that way. Behind the line there was a general misunderstanding, and had the San Remos been at all strong they must have played havoc in the ranks of the Plainfielders. With the tendency to fumble under natural conditions, a muddy field and a slippery ball would have caused many sad catastrophies.

It seems as if the Plainfield eleven had made positively its last appearance on the gridiron in its present composition. Business affairs and increased age has caused a number of the well-known players to decide that it will be conducive to their best interest to give up the game now for ever. They have not the time to train actively and without that the game assumes a dangerous feature. Neither do they care to make a burlesque of it by going into a game without practice, which is so essential to good work. There are prior claims on their time and counter attractions that rival those of football. The younger element will fill in the ranks and the game will go on, but the older set have now bid farewell to the game and will hereafter only be seen on the sidelines.

BASKET BALL.

The next basket ball game to be played in this city is scheduled for the evening of December 5th. Then the team from the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. will try conclusions with the local team. The New Brunswick boys are far newer in the game than the Plainfield players and they are likely to find the local team more than a match for them. They say, however, that if Plainfield wins, she will have to work hard to do so.

An exciting game of basket ball was played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Friday evening. It was the first of the contests for the banner to be awarded for the championship of the local association. There are three teams in the race, A, B and C. Friday night teams A and B met, and the B boys were victorious over the A athletes by a score of 9 to 4. The teams were made up as follows: Team A, Eric Moraller, captain, Carroll, Cutting, Brokaw, McKillop and Perrin; team B, George Proctor Smith, captain, Zimmer, Dolliver, Overton, McDonald.

Walter L. Long finds that he is gaining a reputation which, while flattering, is not by any means to his taste. The New Brunswick team, which plays here December 5th, heard that he was a great player and the strongest man on the Plainfield team. So, when they wrote for a game, they agreed to play if that man Long was left off the team. They wanted to have some show, they said. Now that should please Walter, but it doesn't, as he is not at all anxious to be shut out of the game in that fashion. He broke his nose in the game sometime ago and has just recovered sufficiently to be able to play once more.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The Parks will not roll a game this week in the Central Journal League. All the other teams in the league will meet tonight for their matches. As there is an uneven number of teams in the league it makes it necessary that one team should be left out each week in pairing them off.

The Bound Brook bowling team came to Plainfield last night and rolled a game with the members of the Catholic Club team. The visitors were defeated by a total score of 2,418 to 2,352. After the game refreshments were served. The scores were as follows:

HOW DO CANDIDATES STAND?

"Citizen" Wants to Know Their Opinion On the Saloon Question.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—As a Republican I desire to see the party grow in purity and increase in power. As a citizen I am deeply interested in the success of every movement that is likely to promote the material prosperity of our city and commonwealth. As a Christian citizen I do not want to forget that, in the long run, righteousness exalteth a nation, while sin is a reproach to any people. This is the teaching of the Bible and of history. Therefore I, as one voter, would like to know how the candidates for municipal offices stand with regard to the saloon question. This is a subject of public concern.

Citizen.

England's Good Wishes.

The brotherly feeling shown by Great Britain for America is not entirely an outgrowth of our war with Spain, but was most touchingly expressed a score of years ago by the English novelist, W. Clark Russell, in "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," where in chapter twenty-seven, in telling his story in the first person, he gives a most vivid description of the slow sinking of the ship he was in and the anxiety with which he looked for a rescuing sail.

He describes the joy on sighting an approaching bark, and, after telling how "she brought her bows astern of us," he writes:—

"At the same moment she hoisted Russian colors. I was bitterly disappointed when I saw the flag. I should have been equally disappointed by the sight of any other foreign flag, unless it were the Stars and Stripes, which floats over brave hearts and is a signal to Englishmen as full of welcome and promise, almost, as their own loved bit of bunting."

EIGHT CHILDREN IN ONE HOUSE ILL WITH DREAD DISEASE.

Horrible Situation in the Home of Machinist in Piscataway Township—One Child Has Just Died With It

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 29.—A sad state of things in Piscataway has just been made known to the authorities. A family by the name of Schuer, foreigners, are living together in a little two-story shanty two miles from here, and eight children are ill with the diphtheria.

One of them died Sunday, and the others are in such a bad state that they are not expected to recover. Dr. Nelson is attending them and is doing all he can for them, but there are no natural surroundings that would help to eliminate the disease. The house stands in a 20 acre farm, is low, bare and cold. There are only two rooms on the first floor with a loft overhead, and the entire family eat, sleep and cook in the same room.

Schuer is a machinist and bought this place and moved here from Plainfield five years ago. Walter Runyon has charge of the funeral of the little one, and she will be buried at once.

SHE IS THE PEARL DOCTOR.

Queer Occupation Followed by a Young English Woman.

A young English woman whose card is inscribed "Miss Blank, Visiting Jeweler," is pioneer on a path that promises to lead to fortune.

Shortly after she found herself obliged to do something to make money she chanced to see a quantity of old-fashioned jewelry which a friend had inherited. In spite of their clumsy, out-of-date settings the beauty of the stones inspired Miss Blank. She began to make sketches of different ornaments in which they might be set, and so pretty and original were her designs and so much ingenuity did she show in planning the rearrangement of the stones that her friend exclaimed:

"Why, you are a genius! Here is your vocation. You must go about, ask people to get out all their old odds and ends of jewelry, and then show them what beautiful things those some odds and ends would make."

Then Miss Blank began to study precious stones and became a good judge of their value. This knowledge soon opened another branch of her chosen calling, namely, the selling and exchanging of stones, old ornaments, etc.

Next it occurred to Miss Blank that she might also undertake the cleaning of jewels, a matter which during the season she found greatly neglected by overworked maids. She has now earned quite a reputation as a "pearl doctor," for these gems which are found lying loose in the oyster shells and need no cutting, or polishing to enhance their beauty, as if to make things, even, require more careful usage than any other precious stone. They become dull and discolored, or, as jewelers express it, get "sick" and "die."

On one occasion, when a large, badly discolored pearl given her to experiment on resisted her treatments, she determined to try an ancient recipe, found in some musty pamphlet. This set forth that the gastric juice of fowls had a wonderful effect on dull yellow pearls, and would, if applied according to directions, quickly restore their original beauty. So, in fear and trembling, Miss Blank fed the big pearl to a rooster, which she securely confined, and, as the recipe prescribed, after two hours' time killed it and relieved it of its valuable luncheon. As to the result, her own words were: "Of course, I felt like nothing more nor less than a murdress, but the pearl was ever so much improved."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

TWO SPLENDID LIARS.

Conversation Between Private O'Mars and a Regular-Army Colonel.

Here is a story told by Patrick O'Mars, a private in the Ninth regulars: Not long ago he went to the colonel, who was a severe disciplinarian, for a two weeks' leave of absence.

"Well," said the colonel, "what do you want a two weeks' furlough for?"

Patrick answered: "Me wolfe is very sick, and the children are not well, and if ye didn't mind, she would like to have me home for a few weeks to give her a bit of assistance."

The colonel eyed him for a few minutes, and said: "Patrick, I might grant your request, but I got a letter from your wife this morning saying she didn't want you home; that you were a nuisance, and raised the devil whenever you were there. She hopes I won't let you have any more furloughs."

"That settles it. I suppose I can't get the furlough, then?" said Pat.

"No, I'm afraid not, Patrick. It wouldn't be well for me to do so under the circumstances."

It was Patrick's turn now to eye the colonel, as he started for the door. Stopping suddenly, he said:

"Colonel, can I say something to yez?"

"Certainly, Patrick; what is it?"

"You won't get mad, colonel if I say it?"

"Certainly not, Patrick; what is it?"

"I want to say there are two splendid liars in this room, and I'm one of them. I was never married in me loife."—New York Tribune.

HAD TO BURN FRUIT TREES FOR FIREWOOD.

ROADS ALL BLOCKED.

COULDN'T REACH THEIR WOOD LOTS TO GET FRESH FUEL.

Aftermath of the Storm—Happenings in Passaic Valley—Road Impassable—Big Drifts at Coontown Just Removed—New Providence Roads Will Not be Opened for Several Days.

The Passaic valley is just struggling out of the bondage of the snow storm of Saturday and Sunday. Never since the famous blizzard of 1888 has that section been so thoroughly shut off from the outside world. Ten inches of snow fell there and the wind blew a perfect gale. As a result there were drifts everywhere.

In the Passaic valley road that goes from Newark to Millington, the snow was heaped up in drifts seven and eight feet high and extending along the road for distances of over a mile. Progression was impossible and George Nixdeoff, overseer of the roads in Morris county, had a large force of men at work removing the worst of the drifts so that the roads might be passable once more. Yesterday the men were hard at work with the prospect of opening up all the road by tonight.

In one place the road passes through a cut and there the drifts reached the depth of twelve feet. The milkmen living in that vicinity simply had to stay at home. Their attempts to get to town were fruitless and they had to give up until the road was opened by the county authorities.

In the vicinity of Union Village large drifts are reported. Bazilla French, who lives in that settlement, did not have a large stock of wood when the storm began. He attempted to reach his wood lot Monday to secure a fresh supply, but the drifts were so great that he had to abandon the attempt and cut down an apple tree in his yard to supply him with fuel.

George Herbert, of the same locality, was caught in a similar predicament. He made his way through the snow to a near-by tree and cut off some of the branches that served him as firewood until he could clear a path to the wood lot.

Some of the roads in New Providence township are so solidly blocked that they will not be opened until tonight.

In Warren township the worse drifts were reported in the vicinity of Coontown where they completely blocked the road. The neighbors joined forces and yesterday a way was cleared so that the people in Mt. Horeb could reach Plainfield.

VALUE OF SUMMER RESIDENCE.

Home of the Late John K. Field on the Raritan to be Sold.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Nov. 30.—The value of a summer residence was the point at issue yesterday in a case before Judge Strong, of the Middlesex County Orphan's Court at this city.

Isaac N. Field, of Plainfield, executor of the late John K. Field, applied for an order confirming the sale of the decedent's summer home on the Raritan, near Bound Brook. At the sale the only bid was $4 255.

When the application was made for an order confirming the sale Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, representing some of the heirs, opposed the motion. It was shown that the house, exclusive of the land, had cost more than $15,000. The executor admitted this, but said the sale had been the best he could arrange.

Judge Strong continued the matter for a week.

TRAMP QUESTION IN SOMERSET COUNTY.

FREEHOLDERS OBJECTED.

NOW THEY BREAK THE LAW AND HAVE TO BE JAILED.

They Used to Get Lodging Free at County Jail and Hustle for Their Meals—Freeholders Would Not Allow it—Now They Commit Some Disorderly Act and Have to be Boarded and Lodged.

The tramp question is again coming to the front in Somerset county. For several years the Sheriff of that county has been sheltering all this class of citizens in a most hospitable manner in the county jail at Somerville. That is, the Board of Freeholders allowed the Sheriff to take them in and keep them over night. He gave them no food, but a warm place to sleep, and they had to forage for their provender. For this duty the Sheriff was allowed 25 cents a head.

Last April a resolution was adopted by the Board, which read as follows:

"Resolved, That after April 12th, this day, no more tramps shall be allowed in the county jail by the Board at the county's expense."

During the summer months there are few applications for lodgings by tramps, so that this change of policy has caused little inconvenience until the present time. Since the nights have become frosty the number of applicants have increased. The Sheriff has been obliged to refuse all lodgers, but here is where comes in an important question of policy. The tramps are determined to have a night's lodging, and rather than sleep out on the cold ground, they commit some disorderly act whereby they are arrested and committed to jail.

Since Sheriff Schoonmaker was installed no less than ten tramps have thus been committed to jail under the disorderly act. It costs 75 cents to have a tramp committed, and then he must be boarded at the expense of the county after he has been landed in jail. It is estimated that nine tramps and a half can be sheltered for a night under the old system for as little expense as one tramp can be committed to jail under the disorderly act. Besides the 75 cents, which goes in fees to the justice and officer committing a tramp, the Sheriff receives his fees and is allowed 70 cents a day for the tramp's board. So a man committed for two days would cost the county about $2.50.

If the tramps succeed in being committed at the rate of the past week, it is a question whether there is any economy in the new plan adopted by the Board.

CLAIMS HE STARVES WITH INCOME DUE

John Mortimer Tries to Compel Its Payment.

THE CREDITORS OBJECT.

THEY WANT HIM TO LIVE ON SMALL INCOME

And Turn the Rest Over to Pay His Debts—Tried That in Plainfield For Awhile—Local Creditors Indorsed His Note For First National Bank—They Lost Very Nearly All of the Money.

John Mortimer, who resided in Plainfield for several years, and has since successively made his home at Asbury Park and the Clarendon Hotel in Brooklyn, claims to be starving to death. He says that he and his wife and children have been through very hard times for the past few months, all because the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company has failed to do its duty. There was placed in the hands of that company a trust fund of $51,272, from which Mortimer was supposed to receive an income of $2,400 a year. This was not done since May last, Mr. Mortimer says, and he and his family have been compelled in consequence to live without the bare necessities of life.

The complaints of Mortimer were brought to the attention of Surrogate Fitzgerald in Brooklyn yesterday and he investigated the case. His decision has been reserved.

Mortimer is a son of Frances Russell Mortimer, who died April 2d, 1894. She left a large estate, divided into four parts, one of which she left to her son John, in addition to $5 000 in cash. She appointed the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company trustee of his share, directing that the income be paid to him. He lived in Plainfield for a number of years, residing at different times on LaGrande avenue and Putnam avenue, and with his wife's mother, Mrs. W. G. Anderson He ran rather deeply in debt, it is said.

In May, 1897, Mortimer was pressed pretty hard by his creditors who insisted upon his paying them what he owed. There were seven creditors, each of whose claim reached over $100. Mortimer seemed anxious to clear up his indebtedness, and so agreed to the following plan:

He gave a note to the First National Bank for $6,500. This note was indorsed by these seven principal creditors, William K. McClure, Dr. J. T. Fritts, Louis Hummer, M. Powers, Robert Guttridge, A. D. Mallinson and F. L. C. Martin. The lowest claim, that of A. D. Mallinson, was for $100, the highest for $700.

Backed by these names, the First National Bank consented to discount the note, and Mortimer gave them power-of-attorney to collect his dividends, amounting to $2 400 a year, from the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and retain one-half of them towards liquidating these debts, while with the other half Mortimer said he could manage to live.

This arrangement existed for one year, when in May, 1898, Mortimer cancelled his agreement and revoked his power of attorney. This placed the seven creditors in a bad fix. They have no remedy against Mortimer who is out of the State and away from them. The merchants all had their money to be sure, but when the power of attorney was revoked, the First National Bank came back on the indorsers and they had to repay almost all of it.

Other creditors then united on the ground that Mortimer should be compelled to turn over part of his income to pay his debts as he had been doing, and an injunction was obtained against the Trust Company restraining them from paying him any more.

F. E. Anderson, who appeared for Mortimer yesterday, insisted that his client and family were literally starving for want of the necessaries of life, and that Mortimer had become so desperate that he feared he would commit suicide. Even his trunk had been held at the hotel to satisfy his board bill. He charged that the Trust Company, in the interest of the creditors, was acting without warrant of law in withholding the income, that it exceeded its authority and that the harsh, cruel and insulting treatment Mortimer had received was sufficient to warrant the Court in removing the trustee.

Hoping to meet claims which have been pressing him, Mortimer gave the Trust Company a power of attorney to apply $1 500 annually to the payment of his debts, thinking he might live on $900 a year. He said he found it impossible and cancelled the agree-

TOLD OF LIFE AND WORKS OF EMERSON.

Continuation of Series of University Extension Lectures.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

LECTURE TOOK PLACE IN Y. M. C. A. HALL LAST NIGHT.

Prof. A. H. Smith Gave a Very Interesting Lecture on American Literature — Emerson Figured the Most Prominently in It—Told His History in Clever Way—Brook Farm Described.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, that high spirited, even-tempered New England man of letters, was the most prominent character in the University Extension lecture given last night in Y. M. C. A. Hall by Prof. A. H. Smith. Emerson's beautiful life was the wonder of all who knew him. Born early in the present century, and coming from a long and illustrious line of ancestors, many of them having been preachers and all of them men of learning and culture, he was fitted for the ministry and occupied a pulpit for a few years.

In 1832 Emerson became convinced that he had another mission in the world, and gave up his work to cross the ocean and seek out Carlyle in Scotland, Coleridge, in England, and Landor, in Italy. He only spent a short time in the company of each of these three, but felt wonderfully benefited by his contact with them, and when he left, left behind him an impression which clung to these men all through their lives.

Emerson's books consist mostly of lectures. One book he published called "Nature," was a marvel of accuracy in the manner of its composition.

About the time that Emerson was growing up the sceptre of literature had been carried from Philadelphia to New York and then on to Boston. There were three epochs in New England intellectual life, which followed one another in regular order. The first was Unitarianism, the second Trancendentalism and the third the Anti-slavery movement.

This last awakened some of the brightest writers, brought forth some of the most eloquent orators, among whom might be mentioned Wendell Phillips, and gave Harriet Beecher Stowe a theme for that novel that has been translated in all languages and been read by nearly as many people as had the Bible, "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Prof. Smith also spent a few moments in describing Brook Farm, that "Seven Years' Day Dream" which was established about 1835 a short distance from Boston, and where 60 or 70 men and women of letters lived together in a happy group, working on the farm during a part of the day, reading Latin and Greek and writing books the other half. Here Emerson lived awhile, so did Hawthorne and Thorean, and the colony was only disbanded by a fierce fire, which destroyed the farm buildings and burned the colony out of home. This was such a blow to them that Brook Farm was never rebuilt.

Stabbed a Fellow Workmen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 30.—Frank Lafrank, of New Orange, was lodged in the Union county jail yesterday for stabbing with a knife James Rotonosh, an Italian fellow workman. The affray took place in the boarding house of Joseph Bonomo, at New Orange. The wounded man was badly hurt. Justice Woodruff committed the assailant in default of $1,000 bail.

RIGHTS OF THE FAIR SEX.

MRS. FLORENCE HOWE HALL TALKS OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Occasion of the Annual Meeting of the State Association—Mrs. Hall's Address Said to Have Been Eloquent.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Camden, Nov. 30—The New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association began its annual session in Taylor's Hall, this city, yesterday, and about fifty delegates from auxiliary associations attended the sessions. The feature of the day was the annual address of the president, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield, who dwelt at length upon the advance of the woman suffrage movement in this country and Great Britain. Her suggestions were principally devoted to the dissemination of information among women as to what rights they now possess in this State under existing laws, and urging them to exercise these rights.

The recent defeat of the school suffrage amendment was referred to as simply an incident in the missionary and educational work necessary to prepare the minds of the people in the State for what is sooner or later to come.

Mrs. Hall's address ended with an eloquent tribute to the self-sacrificing spirit displayed by the women of the cause all over the world, who, undaunted by reverses, are as enthusiastic today as though their work was bestrewn with the roses and pearls of incessant success. The association held a meeting in the courthouse tonight, at which Miss Mary C. C. Bradford, of Denver, Col., made an address upon the workings of woman suffrage in her State.

STRANGE GROWTH ON FINGER.

Mrs. M. L. McComas is Unable to Use Her Right Hand.

Mrs. Martin L. McComas, of Prescott place, is suffering from a growth on the first finger of her right hand which not only baffles the physicians, but cannot be accounted for by Mrs. McComas.

It was about four weeks ago that Mrs. McComas noticed a small red spot on the finger. At first she applied home remedies. Continued treatment of this kind had little or no effect, and a physician was called to examine the growth. One peculiar feature of it is that the lump can be moved back and forth on the finger at will.

The top portion of the growth is very sore from the fact that the skin is entirely raw and is intensely painful to the slightest touch. The lump seems to be constantly growing. Mrs. McComas has no use of the hand, and although she is able to get around, she suffers great pain in the hand.

A MEMORABLE EVENT.

Friends of V. W. Nash, Jr., Came to Celebrate His Eighteenth Birthday.

Vincent William Nash, Jr., of Prospect avenue, was eighteen years old yesterday, and the day was made a memorable one to him by his friends, for a host of them surprised him last night, came upon him in a body, and spent the evening in games and dancing.

Among those present were the Misses Lucy Jennings, Lucy Caspar, Nellie Apgar, Florence and Mabel Symons, Grace and Katie Webster, Josie Murphy, Mabel Smith, Jennie and Lillian Thorn, Ida Furman, Charles McCann, Fred Dunavan, Bert Ford, James Pope, Fred VanLew, Edward Baker, Lewis McLaughlin, William and George Pope, Raymond Pool, Albert Uzinger, Thomas Keenan, Hillaire Blatz, Fred Sebring, Howard Drake, Irwin Mills and Walter Emmons.

Entertained Departing Friends.

Miss Evelyn Simpson, of Duer street, had the pleasure Tuesday evening of entertaining several of her friends, among whom two were present who are going to return to England, namely, Miss Schenk and Miss Schimmens. A very pleasant evening was passed by playing games and dancing, accompanied by several piano selections.

THE AFFAIR WASN'T AS STARTLING AS NAME.

COMMITTEE HAD MINIATURE BLOOMERS PINNED TO GOWNS.

A Literary Programme Was Rendered During the Evening—Included Musical Selections and Recitations—A Short Comedy, "No Cure, No Pay," Formed a Good Part of the Entertainment.

Last evening in K. of P. rooms, Washington Hall, Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, gave a "Bloomer" social, together with a literary and musical entertainment. Despite the very stormy night there was a large crowd present and the entire programme was given in a manner that pleased all.

The programme opened with an orchestral selection by Miss Laura Radin, Bert Naylor and Chris. Sorensen. This was followed with recitations by Miss Hallard, Miss Bird, Miss Westphal and Mary Radford. There were vocal and instrumental solos by Miss Lillie Duckworth, and violin solos by Miss Hickey and Master Guttman. A feature of the programme was the mandolin and guitar selections by Arthur Sherman and James Hallard. A pleasing number was the piano duet by Miss Kinzey and Miss Laura Radin.

The last part of the programme was devoted to a comical sketch entitled, "No Cure, No Pay," which produced a great deal of laughter. Those who took part were Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. Cox, Miss Teller, Miss Try Mattox, Miss Radin and Miss Higgins. Each one took his or her part in a very efficient manner.

At the close of the entertainment there was a drawing for a handsome quilt made by the members of the lodge and bearing their names. The chances were sold for ten cents each and brought in $17 40 net. Miss Lillie Duckworth drew the ticket bearing the lucky number. It was held by Mrs. Wm. Claassen, a member of the lodge.

After this part of the affair all were invited to the banquet room, where refreshments were served by the committee in charge consisting of Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Baker, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Chamberlain and Mrs. Higgins. Here is where the bloomer part of the event appeared. Each member of the committee had fastened to her dress a minature pair of bloomers, and it was announced that they would serve refreshments in bloomers.

MURRAY HAS EIGHT ON HIS SIDE.

Plainfield Assemblyman's Contention Not Well Supported.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 30.—The attendance of politicians at the State House was light yesterday. The newly furnished executive chamber was thrown open for public inspection and its rich appearance was much admired.

Acting-Governor Watkins was on hand early, but only matters of minor importance claimed his attention. Assemblyman-elect Murray, of Union, was one of the few members of the next Legislature on hand. He announced that he had eight votes against Watkins' re-election as Speaker of the House, but the statement was scarcely credited as one that would hold good until caucus time.

Assemblyman-elect Wood McKee, of Passaic, was also here. His friends are urging him for the leadership on the floor of the House. He says his presence at home every night during the session excepting Monday nights is necessary, owing to pressure of business, and unless he can leave Trenton in time to get home at a reasonable hour at night he cannot accept the honor.

Senators Reed and Johnson came on to attend the meeting of the State Board of Canvassers. They are both in the race for the presidency of the Senate, but did not discuss their prospects. No representatives of Essex county were seen yesterday. Their conspicuous absence occasioned a remark to the effect that the county was quite certain that it would get what it was asking for, and that it was needless now to agitate any matters in which the county was interested.

A Plucky Driver.

An unknown young man was thrown out of a sleigh on Somerset street this noon and was dragged a considerable distance. The driver held fast to the reins and finally managed to get control of the horse. No damage resulted.

PECULIAR POISONS.

GENERATED IN THE HUMAN BODY.

The Result of Imperfect Digestion of Food.

Every living thing, plant or animal, contains within itself the germs of certain decay and death.

In the human body these germs of disease and death (called by scientists Ptomaines), are usually the result of imperfect digestion or food; the result of indigestion or dyspepsia.

The stomach, from abuse, weakness, does not promptly and thoroughly digest the food. The result is a heavy, sodden mass, which ferments (the first process of decay), poisoning the blood, making it thin, weak and lacking in red corpuscles; poisoning the brain, causing headaches and pain in the eyes.

Bad digestion irritates the heart, causing palpitation, and finally bringing on disease of this very important organ.

And this is so because every organ, every nerve depends upon the stomach alone for nourishment and renewal, and weak digestion shows itself not only in loss of appetite and flesh, but in weak nerves and muddy complexion.

The great English scientist, Huxley, said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take after each meal, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package or by mail by enclosing price to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., but ask your druggist first.

THE DAWN OF PEACE

ANXIOUS TO END LABORS

Points Remaining to Be Settled. Secretaries of the Commissions Formulating the Articles of the Treaty. Topics for Discussion at To-days Joint Session.

Paris Nov. 30.—The American demand, accepted by Spain at Monday's session of the peace commission, implied undoubtedly an ultimatum.

The Spanish reply uses the word harsh (dura) and says that they yield not in principle, but in fact to save Spain from the greatest trouble.

The Gaulois, after an inspired statement of the Spanish side, admits that the solution as made is practically the best for Spain, Europe, and the former Spanish colonies.

It says that the decision does not involve an immediate signing of the entire treaty, but an agreement on the single clause respecting the Philippines, and that other points to safeguard the existing commerce of Spain, as promised by the Americans, and some financial questions remain to be settled.

A competent authority considers that ten more days will be reasonably sufficient to conclude the treaty.

The Americans have not mentioned the purchase of the entire group of the Carolines.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The secretaries of the two peace commissions, Messrs. Moore and Ojeda, began their joint task of formulating the articles of the peace treaty late yesterday afternoon, as directed by their respective commissions.

This work will be easy and rapid as far as the relinquishment and cessions referred to in the protocol are concerned. The terms of the protocol will be transferred bodily to the treaty.

The secretaries, moreover, will embody in tentative articles, for discussion to-day, the subjects of the religious freedom of the Caroline islands, a naval station for the United States in the same group, cable landing rights at other points within Spain's jurisdiction, the release of the insurrectionist prisoners and the revival of the treaties broken by the war.

On all the points outside of the protocol and its now settled interpretation there will be friendly negotiation Spain having the right to name the prices she wants for her territory and to reject or accept the American offers. The Spaniards, no less than the Americans, are now anxious to conclude the business which brought them here.

The commercial and general treaty of 1785 will be revived, to be recast later; the treaty of 1834, for the settlement of certain claims, will be revived, the Cushing protocol of 1877, providing for extradition, will be revived; the trade mark treaty of 1882 and the supplemental extradition treaty of 1882 will also be revived, inaddition to several modus-vivendi agreements.

It is expected that the secretaries will submit the treaty articles at the joint session to-day, when all the other points for negotiation will be discussed.

The Soleil reviews the situation at length, and says: "Probably the greatest difficulty the United States has before her will be the strong differences of opinion in the Senate and House on the question of territorial expansion."

Threatened Impeachment of Gov. Russell.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 30.—Whether Governor Russell will be impeached by the overwhelming Democratic majority in the incoming legislature may depend, Democratic politicians say, on how the governor acts in the meantime.

He is asked by the Republican politicians to refuse to furnish certificates of election to Bellamy, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Sixth (Wilmington) district, and to other Democratic representatives-elect, in order thereby to strengthen the contests which the Republican candidates contemplate making.

Other reasons than fear of impeachment may influence the governor in this matter.

The Republican nominee in the Sixth district is Oliver H. Dockery, whom Russell defeated in the contest for governor in the Republican convention two years ago, and who is the governor's most bitter political enemy.

The Democrats, therefore, anticipate that Russell will do nothing to aid Dockery.

Mrs. Cody's Trial.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Mrs. Margaret Cody's trial on the indictment for blackmail was begun in the Albany county court before Judge Gregory yesterday.

Mrs. Cody has been in the county jail since May, having been indicted on the charge of blackmail.

It is alleged in the indictment that she wrote letters to Miss Helen Gould and George Gould on February 11 and March 9, 1890, respectively, asking them to call on her and promising that she would give valuable information to enable them to effect a compromise or discontinuance of the action then pending against the heirs of the late Jay Gould, to establish the dower rights of Mrs. Angell to that estate on the grounds that she was the first wife of Jay Gould.

The entire morning session was devoted to the selection of the jury to try the case.

Tidal Wave at Trieste.

London, Nov. 30.—The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Mail sends the following:

"On Sunday Trieste and vicinity were flooded by a tremendous tidal wave, which did considerable damage to property and ships and caused the loss of many lives.

"There was a violent earthquake throughout the southern provinces of Austria. From various causes no fewer than twenty-eight lives, it is reported, were lost."

POST OFFICE ECONOMICS.

A Determined Movement for Consolidation.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—Postmaster General Smith has buckled on his armor for a fight for the repeal of the Gorman amendment to the post-office appropriation bill for 1897, prohibiting the consolidation of smaller postoffices with the large ones about which they are grouped, if the consolidation would affect the independence of a county seat.

The present administration set out with a determination to consolidate, if possible, the suburban offices surrounding every large city with the main office in that city.

In Greater New York, for instance, a saving of nearly $63,000 a year has been figured out as the result of combining all the offices under one head; and this would be the saving in salaries and commissions alone, and leaves out of account a score of minor economies which would go to swell the sum.

And all the proposed changes are held up because Senator Gorman wished to spite Postmaster Warfield of Baltimore, who belonged to another faction of the Democratic party from himself, and was a prominent member of the Maryland Civil Service Reform Association.

Gorman was backed by every old-fashioned man in the Senate who objected to changing the village postoffice from a club and meeting place for the neighboring farmers into a mere business machine, as well as by most of the enemies of the merit system of appointment to government office.

A large part of the money now spent in an attempt to build up a system of rural free delivery could be turned to better account, in the estimation of some of the experts of the department here, by improving free delivery where it is already established and where a more pressing need for it seems to exist.

The extension of the system would, they think, work itself out normally by a process of consolidation applied in the districts surrounding the great cities, these districts being widened from time to time to take in more outlying postoffices. The successive widenings of the districts would, in the ordinary course of events, and as the population of the country increased, bring the boundaries of the several districts near to or against each other, so that eventually free delivery would exist everywhere at a much lower cost and with much less friction than if established sporadically here and there under the present hap-hazard practice.

Another thing which the postmaster general will use his utmost efforts to promote will be the increase rather than the decrease of free delivery facilities in the more densely populated parts of the great cities.

He is looking forward with much hope to the effect of the tour of the commission appointed just before the close of the last session of Congress to investigate the workings of the postal system.

Personal examination is so much more convincing than any argument, that he believes the members of the commission must have satisfied themselves, when inspecting the business districts of three or four of the great cities, that it would be quite out of the question to cut down the present number of deliveries and collections.

The estimates sent in on the first day of the coming session will contain an item for a considerable increase in the appropriation for the free delivery service, at which there is fair reason for hoping that neither house will balk.

Choate at the White House.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—Mr. Joseph H. Choate of New York called upon the president yesterday, and his visit naturally gave rise to much speculation as to the vacant ambassadorship.

He was accompanied by Attorney General Griggs and remained with the president about fifteen minutes.

White House officials represent this as merely an act of courtesy, since Mr. Choate was in Washington conducting a case at the supreme court. They say that had he not called upon the president it would have been more worthy of remark.

Union Pacific Land Case.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 30.—The Union Trust Company of New York has made application in the United States court for a decree of mortgage foreclosure in its land case against the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the receivers.

The case involves $1,500,000 and title to the lands granted to the Union Pacific in Nebraska, Colorado, Utah and other western states.

The interest for two years is now due and unpaid.

The Waring Memoral Fund.

New York, Nov. 30.—The memorial fund that is being raised for the support of the widow and daughter of the late Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., has reached $52,328.

The largest contribution in the latest list announced by ex-Mayor Strong, the treasurer of the fund, is from John D. Rockefeller, who gave five thousand dollars.

Big Natural Gas Strike.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Nov. 30.—While boring for oil on Summerland Beach a marvelous flow of natural gas has been struck, throwing sand and rocks a number of feet into the air.

It is pronounced the biggest strike of natural gas that has ever been made in the West.

This dispatch asserts that he embarked at Rotterdam.

GOLDEN JUBILEE WEEK

OLDEST MONARCH BUT ONE

Francis Joseph Now 68 Years Old Has Ruled for Half a Century. The Succession to the Crown is Uncertain. Program for the Celebration Has Been Considerably Modified Owing to to Death of the Empress.

Vienna, Nov. 30.—The golden jubilee of Kaiser Francis Joseph of Austro-Hungary, now in progress, ends with a great celebration December 2, the anniversary of the accession to the Austrian throne. He was not crowned King of Hungary until June 8, 1867. The assassination of the Empress Elizabeth has made necessary a modification of the programme and it will not have the international character which was originally designed for it.

The Emperor Francis Joseph is 69 years old. His sorrows have been numerous. The events of his reign include rebellion against authority, disastrous wars, and the loss of rich provinces.

Among his personal afflictions are the loss of his wife, of his only son and heir, and of the brother who, in the order of succession, stood next to his son. All of these met a tragic death. The succession to the crown is in an unsatisfactory condition. The heir presumptive, a nephew of the emperor, is physically and mentally ill qualified for the throne.

There has been some talk in relation to a possible second marriage of the emperor, but in view of his advanced age, this seems to be gossip without any foundation.

The emperor has two daughters and a grandchild who is a daughter of his son, the late crown prince. But the female line cannot succeed to the Austro-Hungarian crowns while representatives of the male line survive.

On December 2, 1842, Francis Joseph, the present emperor of Austria, king of Hungary and king of Bohemia, though he has never been crowned as such, succeeded Ferdinand IV, who abdicated, and his coronation took place in Vienna.

Austrian monarchs with a record of fifty years upon the throne are rare in history. Indeed there has been only one other such since the founder of the house of Hapsburg, Rudolph I, ascended what was then the throne of Austria and of ermany as well in 1279 more than six centuries ago.

Rudolph of Hapsburg reigned only thirteen years, and the one Austrian or Austro-Hungarian monarch in the long line between Rudolph and Francis Joseph who ruled for more than fifty years was Frederick IV. He was known as the Pacific (possibly the attribute of placidity accounted for his long reign), and ascended the throne in 1439 and retained it until 1493.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

The condition of affairs in Austro-Hungary at present is not propitious for a very hearty celebration of any political anniversary commemorative of the events of fifty years ago. These were somewhat exciting. An insurrection in Vienna began on March 13. An insurrection against the power of Austria among the Italian speaking subjects of the emperor began one week later; an uprising against the emperor caused his flight to the Tyrol in May; an insurrection among the Bohemians against the power of the emperor of Austria began in June, in the city of Prague, and in the autumn of the same year the Hungarian rebellion against the power of the Vienna government and the establishment of the Hungarian national government under Kossuth, took place in September.

With one exception Francis Joseph is now the senior of European monarchs in length of reign, the exception being Queen Victoria, who ascended the throne in 1837. Francis Joseph was 18 when he ascended the throne.

Czar Reassures Sultan.

Constantinople, Nov. 30.—The czar of Russia, replying to the sultan's telegram of November 26, in which the latter urged the czar to abandon his intention of sending Prince George of Greece to Crete as high commissioner of the powers, declares that the friendly sentiments of Russia toward Turkey are unchanged, and while Prince George is going to Crete as commissioner of four powers, the sultan's rights of sovereignty will be safeguarded.

The Nevada Senatorship.

San Francisco, Cay., Nov. 30.—A dispatch to the Examiner from Virginia City, Nevada, says that W. E. Sharon has announced that Representative Frank G. Newlands will be a candidate for United States senator to succeed Senator Stewart.

War Board in Boston.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 30.—The war investigation commission began its hearings in this city yesterday. The first witness called was Leonard W. Johnson, who signed a contract as nurse on August 29.

LET US ARM YOU!
It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

ANTI-ANARCHIST CONGRESS

Rome, Nov. 30.—The actual work of the anti-Anarchist congress has now begun, and it is noticeable that it takes place during the jubilee of the Austrian kaiser, the assassination of whose wife brought about this conference.

The striking character of the anti-Anarchist conference, though not its presiding official, which will be Admiral Canevaro of Italy, is M. de Nelidoff, Russia's representative. He is the greatest diplomat Russia has had since De Giers, and it was his masterful policy which has practically controlled the affairs of the Turk until recently. His hand has also been apparent in the far East, although more recently internal affairs have demanded his attention. Whatever united action as against Anarchists is taken up by this conference will undoubtedly receive its stimulus from M. de Nelidoff.

M. DE NELIDOFF.

One of the questions to be decided is: Shall Anarchists be extradited or expelled simply as Anarchists, without having committed any overt act? And shall a state have the right simply to drive them out or must it deliver them in custody to the state of their origin? Upon these and some cognate questions there will doubtless be much variance of opinion and more debate than upon all the rest.

Another question will be the prevention of Anarchist propaganda and the surreptitious circulation of Anarchist literature, and the fourth will be like unto it, namely the prevention of morbid publicity of the doings, sayings and characteristics of Anarchists.

These two will not be passed without some debate, since they affect directly freedom of speech and the liberty of the press. Finally the conference will consider the best forms of punishment to be inflicted upon Anarchists guilty of overt acts of criminality. There has been some dissatisfaction expressed because the murderer of the Empress of Austria is imprisoned for life, and not put to death. There is, however, a widespread notion that silence and oblivion, such as rigorous life imprisonment assures, might, and probably would, be more powerfully deterrent to Anarchists than the scaffold, which gives them opportunity to poge as martyrs.

Pay for Spaniards in Cuba.

Havana, Nov. 30.—Colonel Pagliery, until recently chief of police, will accompany Marshal Blanco to Spain as his aide de camp. On Saturday last Pagliery resigned his office in favor of Domingo Martinez Gonzales, the former inspector.

The treasury here has received cable transfers from Madrid amounting to 1,840,000 pesos (nearly $1,700,000), to be applied to military and civil requirements and back pay. The civil employes received one month's pay yesterday.

Upon the completion of the evacuation of Pinar del Rio the Havana division of the Spanish army will embark.

The first troops to go on board the transports will be General Valderraya's brigade, then General Tejeda's division, next General Fernal's division, whose headquarters are at Cardenas, and then General Molina's division at Matanzas.

The evacuation will be ended with the embarkation of the Las Villas division under command of General Aguerre.

Aguinaldo Has Rivals.

Manila, Nov. 30.—It is reported that a section of the insurgents, called the Guards of Honor, who are opposed to Aguinaldo, have captured San Ignacio, in the province of Pangasinan, island of Luzon, at the instance of the Spanish priests.

Advices from Iloilo say the natives of the Visaya islands have established a republic, independent of Luzon. In some of the islands hostilities are proceeding between rival republics.

At the Loyal Legion banquet here Monday evening there were sixty-four guests present. Nearly every commandery was represented.

General Anderson presided and Rear Admiral Dewey was received by a guard of honor from the Oregonians. The speakers were Generals Anderson, Harrison, Grey, Otis, Reeve, King and MacArthur, Captains Glass and Coghlan and Colonel Hawkins.

Gen. Brooke Coming Home.

San Juan de Porto Rico, Nov. 30.—Major General John R. Brooke, who is about to retire from the command of the department of Porto Rico, will return to the United States by the first steamer available.

He will be succeeded by Brigadier General Guy V. Henry, who is in turn succeeded at Ponce by Colonel John B. Castleman.

A Wreck at Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 30.—An unknown four-masted vessel is ashore at Herring Cove, entrance to this harbor.

One body has washed ashore. The vessel is fore and aft rigged. All on board have perished.

Magowan Placed in Jail.

The couple have been placed in the county jail.

THE PORTLAND LOST

All Her Passengers and Crew Are Drowned.

OTHER DISASTERS OCCUR

Nearly One Hundred Lives Lost. The Steamer Foundered on Sunday Morning During the Storm Off Highland Light, Cape Cod.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 30.—A report brought here by messenger to the Herald from North Turo, says that the steamer Portland of the Portland Steamship Company, plying between Boston and Portland, was totally wrecked at ten o'clock on Sunday morning off Highland Light, Cape Cod, Mass., during the storm.

The passengers and crew, numbering all told, according to the lists furnished here, nearly one hundred persons, perished within a short distance of land.

A large quantity of wreckage, including trunks and other material, has come ashore, and thirty-four bodies have been recovered from the surf by the life saving crew at High Head station. One body was that of a woman.

The news of the disaster was brought to the Herald by a special train, as communication with Boston by wire from points on Cape Cod is impossible on account of the havoc wrought by the storm.

The first body was found by Gideon Bouley, a surfman at the station, who at once gave the alarm. Then a thorough search was made. The bodies saved were evidently those of passengers. The body of the woman was well dressed.

It is thought here that the Portland encountered the storm outside the harbor Saturday night, causing her to break down, and finally to drift on to the lee shore at Cape Cod of her own destruction.

The Portland was built in Bath in 1890, and was a side wheel steamer of 1,317 tons net burden. Her length was 230 feet; beam, 42; depth, 13 feet. She was valued at $250,000, and is fully insured.

Other Storm Disasters.

Boston, Nov. 30.—From reports that have come by wire, mail and messenger, from New England points, it is difficult to estimate the total loss of life and property along this coast, as the result of the recent storm.

The list of disasters seems to grow every hour, and from dispatches thus far received it appears that at least thirty schooners have been wrecked at different points from Eastport, Me., to New Haven, Conn.; eighty-six schooners have been driven ashore; fourteen barges, loaded or empty, are aground, besides a large number of smaller craft.

This list does not include the thirty vessels either wholly or partially destroyed in Boston harbor, nor half a dozen or more craft which are reported missing including the Boston and Portland steamer Portland, nor the big Wilson line freighter Ohio, which is ashore on Spectacle island in this harbor; the steamer John J. Hill, which is ashore at Atlantic; the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation steamer Fairfax, on Sow and Pigs ledge, off Cuttyhunk; nor the small steamer George A. Chaffee, foundered at Rockport, Mass.

The loss of life is equally hard to determine. It is known that about forty persons perished in and about Boston harbor. Reports from other places in some cases say that the crew of this or that vessel escaped; many, however, say that the fate of the crew is unknown.

Some survivors have turned up at life saving stations, and incoming vessels have brought a few sailors from wrecks.

Storm Ravages Italian Coast.

Rome, Nov. 30.—The whole Italian coast line has been swept by a terrific storm, which has caused the greatest damage everywhere, havoc having been wrought by both wind and sea.

Suezzia, Genoa, and Messina have suffered greatly and most of the Sardinian fortifications have been seriously damaged.

Hundreds of vessels have been wrecked and many lives have been lost.

Fortifications Damaged.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 30.—The recent storm did considerable damage to the government fortification works on Gardiner's Point, at the entrance of Long Island Sound, washing away a part of the wall.

The government will now rush work upon the fortifications, so as to get them ready as soon as possible beyond storm damage.

To Seek Gold in Cuba.

Wichita, Kansas, Nov. 30.—Dr. J. W. Longford and twelve of Roosevelt's Rough Riders have gone to San Juan Hill, Cuba, to prospect for gold.

Dr. Longford says that he thinks Cuba is one of the best prospecting countries in the world, and he expects to locate a claim on San Juan Hill that a company will be able to work at a large profit.

Rough Riders' Muster Roll.

Prescott, Arizona, Nov. 30.—The muster roll of Roosevelt's Rough Riders' Association has been formally opened here and has met with a response from every member present.

Numerous telegrams were received. Colonel A. O. Brodie is president and Lieutenant J. D. Carter secretary of the organization.

Plans of Don Carlos.

Madrid, Nov. 30.—The Heraldo publishes a dispatch saying:

The Heraldo expresses the belief that the Spanish government does not know the whereabouts of Don Jaime, the son of Don Carlos.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.

About 16,000 Enlisted Men Now in the Vicinity of Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 30.—The entire Second United States artillery regiment with the exception of the two light batteries, A and F, is now in camp near Savannah.

Six batteries, under command of Lieutenant Colonel W. T. Haskin, are here attached to the Seventh Army Corps, and the Third Georgia make about ten thousand enlisted men now stationed in and around about this city.

This is the first time that the entire Second artillery has been in camp together since the civil war.

Ever since 1866, or soon thereafter, it has been scattered all along the coast from Portland, Maine, to Virginia.

Troops Leaving the Knoxville Camp.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 30.—The headquarters of the old Second division, First Corps, which has been here since August 27, will be broken to-day and go to Macon.

Only two regiments remain here at present.

The Thirty-first Michigan and the Sixth Ohio are under orders to be ready for departure to Cuba, but orders to marc hhave not yet been received.

Owing to a conflict of orders the Fourth Tennessee did not get away until late Monday night. It will have to wait several days in Savannah for transportation.

First Tennessee at Manila.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—The war department has received the following dispatch from General Otis, dated at Manila yesterday:

"The transport Zealandia, with headquarters and seven companies of the First Tennessee, arrived this morning. No casualties."

AN OPEN DOOR FOR CUBA.

New Tariff Rate to be Issued Soon.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—The Cuban tariff will be issued in a day or two. It will be based upon the old Spanish tariffs, and modified with some reference to our own Dingley law.

This tariff will apply equally against ourselves and the rest of the world It is an open door.

If the Teller resolution is maintained this tariff is likely to be of more importance than any other of our colonial tariffs. It will apply to the island presumably until complete civil government is again established, and when that time comes, unless we annex the island, somebody else will make the tariff. If we keep faith this will be our last Cuban tariff.

Most of the revenues of the island have been derived from customs duties on food products. Under the Spanish regime $35,000,000 out of a total of $61,000,000 came from food.

Our duties will be considerably lower than the old Spanish maximum rates, and in general will resemble our own Dingley tariff duties on foods, about 25 per cent.

There is an element of illusion, however, in comparing such a schedule with our own, since we import almost no grains or meats, and so the home prices are in no way influenced by our tariff.

The Government of Crete.

Constantinople, Nov. 30.—The czar of Russia, replying to the sultan's telegram of November 26, urging the czar to abandon his intention of sending Prince George of Greece to Crete as high commissioner of the powers, declares that the friendly sentiments of Russia towards Turkey are unchanged, and while Prince George is going to Crete as commissioner of four powers, the sultan's rights of sovereignty will be safeguarded.

The battleship Wisconsin, when she was launched at the Union Iron Works at San Francisco on Saturday, shot from the ways with such speed that she went into the mud flats beyond. It has been impossible to pull her off, and the company has decided to use dredges and construct a channel all around the hull of the ship and out to deep water.

A man who gives the name of Henry Williams has been arrested at Fulham, England, for the robbery of the Dowager Duchess of Sutherland's jewels, valued at between twenty thousand and thirty thousand pounds, in Paris, about the middle of October. A quantity of the stolen property was found in his possession. Another man has been arrested on suspicion of complicity.

Mayor Wilson's Methods.

North Plainfield is particularly favored at present with a good Mayor. Not that Mayor Wilson's predecessors were not up to the standard set by the present chief executive of the borough, for North Plainfield has had a number of very satisfactory officers at the head of her government. Mayor Wilson has introduced some new methods, however, that have not hitherto prevailed. His Honor is a great believer in the power of moral suasion, and he often uses it when other men might exert their official power. His methods have, however, met with a wonderful degree of success.

The Mayor's latest achievement is in ridding the borough of several gambling dens. Now it is exceedingly difficult to detect these haunts as the police of every city in the country has found. Evidence, it is next to impossible to secure. Now within the confines of the borough there were three places where the youth of the community gathered and risked their money in an exciting game of chance. The Mayor was positive they were there and yet lacked the necessary proof, if he had wanted to, to bring the offenders to justice. Instead, he tried the strength of moral suasion. He approached the proprietors of the places and placed the case very plainly before them. He also talked to the men that haunted the dens. His persuasion had its effect. Two of the gambling dens were closed up and the usual habitues regarded the Mayor's injunctions. The remaining resort will probably soon follow the example of the others, and the borough will then be free from such disgrace. Under the circumstances, who can say that Mayor Wilson's methods are not a success.

Divided Against Itself.

The Union County Country Club stands divided against itself this year While the club itself has never taken any stand in politics, most of the members have been Republicans and many were prominent in party politics. This year Mayor Fisk and his friends are working for the interest of the Republican ticket, while the secretary of the club is on the Citizens' ticket as candidate for School Trustee.

The artillery section of the Citizens' movement has been preparing the ammunition for its guns and will open up on the Republican party again this evening in the Fourth ward.

Of course it's all right to ride a wheel whenever you want to, but it does look rather unseasonable to go spinning along with ten inches of snow on the ground.

The straw ride is as popular as ever this year. There has also been a wonderful demand for tin horns in this city during the last few days.

Those who have been in New York city since the snow storm have discovered just how dirty and sloppy a place it can be.

The country hasn't quite recovered from the effects of the blizzard of Saturday and Sunday yet.

DR. NANCY GUILFORD.

Charged with causing the death of Emma Gill, of Southington, Conn., Dr. Nancy Guilford is incarcerated in the jail at Bridgeport. She has been indicted for murder in the second degree. She disappeared on the day that the body of Emma Gill was found, but was recently taken in London and brought back to this country.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Among the candidates on the Plainfield city Republican ticket is William N. Runyon, he of the cultivated and powerful baritone voice, which has so often contributed to the success of State dinners, conventions, etc., held by the Republicans of Union county. Runyon is an ex Councilman and now seeks to be City Judge. He will doubtless be elected, and offenders who come before him will be made to sing doleful melodies.—Elizabeth Journal.

David McClure, counsel for the Trust Company, said Motimer had received $700 since October 1st, and the injunction obtained by a creditor prevented the payment of more. He said Mortimer had admitted that he could live on $900 a year and could not now insist that he needed the entire income.

He declared patience and ceased to be a virtue, and the trustee would treat Mortimer as a child, paying only his living expenses and with the balance see that the creditors were protected. Mr. McClure asserted that while the company was anxious to be relieved of the trusteeship, it would not withdraw under fire but would fight the matter to the end.

WILL WEIGH 150 TONS.

Giant Scales Just Installed in Government Gunshops in Washington.

Everybody is perhaps aware that the large scales upon which the entire freight cars with their loads of many tons are weighed, are considered immense, but with all their immensity Uncle Sam has gone all the railroads in the country one point better by installing at the navy yard one of the largest pair of scales in the country. This machine can outweigh the largest railroad machine by fifty tons, and its results must be accurate to a pound, while railroad scales are considered good if they approach anywhere near fifty pounds of being correct. The scales are forty-eight feet long and twelve feet wide and rest upon cement base built upon long piles. The cost was about $1,200. Much of its fine and sensitive balancing apparatus was manufactured for special use in the new machine, and the completed structure is considered a model and marvel of modern mechanism and American ingenuity.

The capacity of the new scales is 150 tons, or double the capacity of the old scales. A thirteen-inch gun weighs about fifty-five tons, and it may be readily seen that the scales can weigh two of the monsters, reclining on a forty-eight foot car track, and not tax its capacity to any great extent.—Washington Times.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Miss Marie Wainwright will appear at Music Hall Friday night in 'Shall We Forgive Her.', The play is described as a domestic drama of exceptional strength. The principal scenes are laid in England, although the story of the play begins in Australia. Perhaps the most important feature of the engagement in this city will be the appearance of Miss Marie Wainwright in the leading role. Miss Wainwright has for years been identified with the high-class comedies. She has starred in them and has established herself pretty firmly throughout the country as an actress of ripe ability and rare intelligence. She is also an attractive woman. Her impersonation of the chief role in "Shall We Forgive Her" is quite certain to be an admirable one, for whatever Miss Wainwright has done heretofore she has done well. Her appearance, therefore, in the cast gives assurance of an artistic performance. There are few better emotional actresses in the country than Miss Wainwright.

Washburn's Minstrels, the largest double minstrel company in the United States, two complete black and white organizations, make their annual appearance at Music Hall next Monday night, greater and bigger than ever. There are lots of new features this season, and some of the most noted people in the profession are now members of Mr. Washburn's mammoth enterprise, notably Lew Benedict, whose fame as a minstrel king is universal. He is the leading white comedian of the company, and will be seen at his best.

Liebler & Co., the managers of Miss Viola Allen in "The Christian," have made a contract with Israel Zangwill, the noted Hebrew writer, to produce his forthcoming play, "Children of the Ghetto," founded on his widely read novel of the same title. This is the result of negotiations extending over one year, which were only completed on Mr. Zangwill's arrival in this country for his present lecturing tour. Mr. Zangwill is to have the play completed next April. It will be presented at a Broadway theatre in October, 1899. The piece will be a distinct novelty, dealing entirely with Hebrew types of character. The story will be entirely on comedy lines and will, it is predicted, prove as strong an attraction as "The Christian."

Some of the members of James K. Hackett's Company who will appear with that star in the production of "Rupert of Hentzau" in this city are Mabel Amber, Mr. Hackett's leading lady; George Alison, Mrs. Owen Marlowe, Miriam Nesbit, E. W. Thomas, Gertrude Rivers, Longley Taylor, William Eville, Arthur Hoops and Henry Motto. Daniel Frohman, who is directing Mr. Hackett's tour, personally selected the company, several of its members being culled from the famous Lyceum Stock Company from New York.

He Couldn't Be Bought.

A bright little Senate page sat at one of the entrances the other day when a lady approached him with a visiting card in her hand and asked to have it handed to Senator Blank. The boy replied that all the cards must be taken to the east lobby. The woman was inclined to be angry, and went away muttering. Then a thought struck her, and, taking out her pocketbook, she found a quarter, and, with it in her hand, she went back to the boy. "Here, my lad," she said, in a coaxing tone, "here is a quarter to take in my card." "Madam," said the boy, without a moment's hesitation, "I am paid a larger salary than that to keep cards out."

How to Make a Savage Your Friend.

Mr. Rougemont, the modern Robinson Crusoe, who has lived so long among the aborigines that he learned to understand them thoroughly, pleads against the ignorant habit which white men have of shooting at black men as soon as they see them.

All that is necessary to do, if you wish to make a black man your friend is to clap the hands smartly on the back of one's trousers, at the same time putting out one's tongue. This is a universal sign, in the sign language which all the blacks understand that the stranger wishes to sit with them and to hob nob with them generally. If to these signs the stranger will only add a few steps of a lively jig, accompanying himself, if possible, upon a whistle, the severest savage will be instantly placated and will abandon his hostile attitude.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

For originality and elaborate ornamentation this season's styles far outshine the confections of former years, and the ruffles, flounces, embroideries, laces, and startling combinations of materials and colors is something wonderful to behold.

In wraps and costumes for evening wear the couturieres art is given the fullest play and brocades and satins, the filmiest chiffons and nets are employed with decided lovely if somewhat daring results. Embroideries in intricate and aresbesque designs with the narrowest of bebe ribbon on dainty gauzes is one of the novel modes of ornamentation used to enhance the beauty of the evening gown and applications of the finest lace, and velvet in the most delicate shades are extensively employed with charming effect on these toilettes whose workmanship is almost beyond description.

Fur, velvet, satin and the richest brocades are popular fabrics for the handsome opera cloak or wrap, and as the season is now at hand when entertainments and balls are in full swing, a description of a few of these exquisite garments would be very timely. In the first place the wraps designed this year follow the graceful, flowing lines employed in the outdoor capes, many of them having the short front and long shawl-like effect in back which is one of this season's innovations. The richest materials are used for linings, a satin or brocaded garment in many cases being lined throughout with fur. Never before have the materials for developing these lovely toilettes been so gorgeous, or the styles so numerous and it is safe to say that the swell dressmaker will make good use of this fact.

The Medici collar, that becoming fashion which tends to impart a chic and stylish appearance to the simplest toilette, is seen on the majority of the evening wraps, many of the ball and reception gowns also having this finish.

A magnificent opera cloak, recently imported, built of plain amethyst blue satin, has the fashionable curved effect in front, but does not dip in the back. The entire garment is bordered with a finely pleated ruche of white chiffon, headed with a band of sable, which rich fur is also employed for the small shoulder cape, made with high Medici collar, which overlaps another cape of white chiffon. A fold of amethyst velvet, caught on either side with dazzling jeweled buttons, fastens the cloak in front, and from beneath this depends stole ends of exquisite white lace. The garment is lined with cream white satin.

Bands of fur will be employed to a great extent for bordering the bottom and outlining the panels of handsome dinner and ball gowns, as well as on the wraps, and though many people object to using fur on gowns designed for the house, it certainly imparts a finish and a richness to a costume which nothing else can give. Chinchilla, ermine and sable are all employed for this purpose with charming results.

A dainty and attractive theater wrap turned out by one of our swell dressmakers for a dainty young debutante, is composed of cream white crepe de chine and embroidered satin, trimmed with fur and velvet. The cape proper, of pleated chiffon is made with scalloped edges, to which the satin flounce is attached, headed with a narrow band of fur and embroidered satin, the latter textile also forming the small yoke and high collar. Stole ends of the pleated chiffon bordered with embroidered satin, extend down the front and are finished at the end with a band of the fur and a deep ruffle of satin.

A smart blouse, made of pale blue China silk is prettily combined with guipure lace. The fronts are made of silk covered with guipure, over which are arranged the crossway tucks, sewn on in three groups of four tucks each. The right side of the front fastens across to the left side, forming three van dykes, and is edged with a pleated frill of silk. The back is plain.

The upper portion of the sleeve is tucked to form a sort of epaulette and trimmed with four crossway tucks at the wrist to correspond with the bidouse front. A high collar band and jeweled waist belt completes the toilette.

One could go on for an indefinite time describing these lovely articles of feminine finery, and suffice it to say that some of the most beautiful toilettes will be seen this winter, and the "winter girl" attired in soft draperies of filmy tissues, adorned with the most exquisite needlework, has a very fair chance of outshining her attractive rival, the "summer girl."

Useful Boxes.

The shops are filled with cretonne-covered boxes, neatly made and of several sizes, that may be put to a variety of uses. One may well go with the young freshman to college to keep his shirts fresh and unrumpled, and with his sister to her Alma Mater for the care of her shirt waists. In the sewing-room they are invaluable to hold work and pieces often needed promptly. One covered in some good dark material may stand in the family sitting-room to hold the games, a favorite toy, or other impedimenta that children want at hand. Those covered in plain denim stand in some homes behind the hearth-piece for the three or four reserve sticks of hickory needed in the open fire. Plain wood chests are preferable for this use, the denim-covered boxes being suggested only as a cheap substitute that is not objectionable.

Exasperating.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are: "It might have been."
But none can cause one so much woe
As these short words, "I told you so."

VARIETY IN FASHION.

Coats and Waistcoats for Women—Machine Stitching on Skirts.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

The diversity in style is perhaps more apparent in the coats and skirts than in any other branch of dress, yet there is no end of variety, whichever way you turn. Eton coats, as a part of the costume matching the skirt, are shown side by side with the long cutaway, among the French models, as equally good style. Waistcoats are the proper thing with any coat, however plain or dressy, whatever the shape may be, providing it is worn open in front. Some of the most stunning waistcoats are quite masculine in cut, fitting the figure closely, and made double breasted with the same narrow round revers of a man's vest. It is low cut like an evening vest, and in place of the stiff shirt front, there is a chemisette of lace, shirred chiffon, or sheer linen lawn, finely tucked and worn with a linen collar and narrow necktie. The lace front with color to match, is more becoming and feminine in appearance, and a rolled collar of the silk turning over at the back adds very much to the effect. The double-breasted front forms two blunt points just below the waist, and is fastened with two rows of large fancy buttons, either two or three on each side.

Other waistcoats have draped fronts folded and crossed to one side, surplice fashion, but in either case it is the soft white chemisette that makes them so attractive.

Machine stitching is decidedly the thing for trimming all cloth gowns, whether they are light or dark in color and despite the fact that there are so many new novelties in braid and applique trimmings.

The expense in this sort of decoration is in the labor, of course, but it is enough to offset the price of some of the other garnitures. It is especially genteel when it is well applied, however, and truly elegant for its very simplicity.

Entirely plain skirts are not in sight this season, and this simple mode of trimming is a sort of compromise between those which are overtrimmed and the plain ones which have been so much in favor. The striking effect which is needed to complete every stylish gown is produced by the use of elaborate embroidery, which forms the vest or yoke according as you have a round waist or a coat. With the vest there may be double revers of contrasting velvet and satin and an additional frill of lace, all of which serves to accentuate the elegance of the plainly stitched skirt.

OUR YOUTHS' COLUMN.

TED'S SIX DAYS.

"Monday I think is the very best day,"
Said Ted, "it's such a good time to play."

On Tuesday, too, 'twas the very same song,
So happy he'd been the whole day long.

"Of Wednesdays I wish I had a ton,
They bring a fellow such heaps of fun!"

Thursday, tho' raining the morning through,
Was pleasant he had so much to do.

Friday he made a cart for his brothers,
And somehow the day surpassed the others!

Saturday, full of errands to run,
Really equalled his Wednesday's fun.

Don't you think Ted's the wisest way—
To make the most out of every day?

A. F. CALDWELL.

An English Hobson.

Lieutenant Hobson's deed of bravery on the Merrimac reminded an English officer of an English boy named Hobson. He lived at the time in the Isle of Wight. One day news came that the English fleet was in the offing. Young Hobson ran down a back lane to the shore, shoved off in the first rowboat he found handy, pulled for the foremost vessel, and then and there enlisted in what proved to be the admiral's own ship. Out to sea they sighted the enemy. The two fleets engaged in the channel and the admiral's ship was locked yardarm and yardarm with the leading ship of the French fleet. While the fight raged the lad Hobson asked an able seaman:—"What are we trying to do?" "Do you see the flag up there?" said the sailor, pointing to the Frenchman's masthead. "Yes," said the boy. "Well, we want to get that down," said the man. Presently the English crew raised a mighty shout of exultation and the French saw that their flag was gone. Instantly the order to board was obeyed and after a short resistance the French ship surrendered. "Who saw the French colors shot away?" Nobody could answer till a little figure was seen sliding down the shrouds with something wrapped around his arm. It was young Hobson. Unobserved he had crossed the yards from his own to the enemy's masthead, and in the heat of the action had cut the Frenchman's flag from its halyards and taken possession of it. The boy was promoted to the quarter deck and by continued gallantry he rose step by step till he became Admiral Hobson.—New York Herald.

How the Pig Fooled the Dog.

Here is a true tale of a dog and a pig. They were both passengers on the same ship, and quite warm friends. They used to eat their cold potatoes off the same plate, and but for one thing would never have had any trouble. This was the fact that the dog had a kennel and the pig had none.

Somehow the pig got it into its head that the kennel belonged to whichever could could get into it first. So every night there was a race. If the dog won he showed his teeth, and the pig had to lie on the softest plank he could find. If the pig got in first Toby could not drive him out.

One rainy afternoon the pig found it rather unpleasant slipping about on deck and made up his mind to retire early. But when he reached the kennel he found the dog snug and warm inside. "Umph!" he said, but Toby made no reply.

Suddenly an idea flashed upon him, and trudging off to where their dinner plate was lying, he carried to a part of the deck to where Toby could see it, and turning his back to the kennel, began rattling the plate and munching as though he had a feast before him.

This was too much for Toby. A good dinner, and he not there! Piggy kept on until Toby had come round in front of him and pushed his nose into the empty plate.

Then, like a shot, he turned around and was safe in the kennel before Toby knew whether there was any dinner on the plate or not.

Noblesse Oblige.

"Here, boy; let me have a 'Sun.'"

"Can't, nohow, mister."

"Why not? You've got them; I heard you a minute ago cry them loud enough to be heard at the City Hall."

"Yes, but that was down t'other block, ye know, where I hollered."

"What does that matter? Come, now, no fooling; hand me out a paper; I'm in a hurry."

"Couldn't sell you no paper in this here block, mister, cos it belongs to Limpy. He's just up to the furder end now; you'll meet him."

"And who is Limpy, pray? And why does he have this special block?"

"Cos us kids agreed to let him have it. Ye see, it's a good run on 'count of the offices all along, and the poor chap is that lame he can't git around lively like the rest of us; so we agreed that the first one caught sellin' on his beat should be lit on an' thrashed. See?"

"Yes, I do see. So you newsboys have a sort of brotherhood among yourselves?"

"Well, we're going to look out for a little cove what's lame, anyhow, you bet!"

"There comes Limpy, now; he's a fortunate boy to have such kind friends."

The gentleman bought two papers of him, and went on his way down town, wondering how many men in business would refuse to sell their wares in order to give a weak, halting brother a chance in a clear field.—True Flag.

THE CAPTAIN'S STORY

BY ALBERT DELPIT.

It was just after the scandal at our club and a little group of us were talking in a very animated way of the affair. Captain Joubert did not join in the conversation, and did not even seem to be listening to us.

"What will you take for your thoughts?" I said to him at last.

"Oh! they are not worth much. I was thinking just then of an incident which occurred once at a club in a small provincial town where I happened to be staying."

"Tell us about it!" exclaimed one of the other men, and the captain lighted a cigarette and, putting his elbow on the mantel-shelf against which he had been leaning, he began his story:

"Well, it was when I was in garrison at M——, one of the dullest and most stupid of provincial towns.

"When I was off duty I gradually got into the habit of turning in to the Union club, which, by-the-bye, was the only one the town possessed.

"There was very little play at this club, except at the time of the three annual fairs, each of which lasted a week. One autumn afternoon, just at the opening of one of these fairs, I happened to go to the club rather early.

"'They are playing high to-day,' said one of the habitues of the club to me. I turned round towards the table to watch the game, and was so surprised at the sight of one of the players that I almost exclaimed.

"It was a young man of some twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, whom I knew by sight. I was very much interested in him, for his father had fought courageously at Magenta, and had been killed on the field of battle, leaving his widow and son by no means well provided for. The young man came very rarely to the club, and I had never seen him touch a card before. I was stupefied, therefore, to see him holding the bank, and a good bank it was, too, for there were plenty of notes and gold coins heaped up in front of him.

"'How much?' called out one of the players.

"'Oh,' laughed a wealthy farmer. 'M. de Mertens is in luck's way; he can safely keep his bank open.'

"I noticed that the young man's face was deadly pale, and that there was an excited look in his eyes.

"'Open bank!' he said, and it seemed as though the very words had changed the luck.

"Ten times running Mertens lost, and in a quarter of an hour his bank was cleared out. Another man took his place, and the play went on. It got so exciting that I, too, was fascinated, and joined in. There was no room to sit down at the table, so I continued standing, holding my hat in my hand, and throwing my winnings into it. I had a run of luck, and went on playing in the most excited way, until I was startled by some one calling out:

"'You are being robbed, Captain!'

"I started, and instinctively seized a hand which had knocked against mine through my sudden movement. It was M. de Mertens' hand, and he held the forty pound note which he had just taken out of my hat. The wretched man's face was convulsed with emotion. Our eyes met; his were dilated with terror, and there was a look in them that seemed to hold me spellbound.

"'M. de Mertens is my partner,' I said, haughtily, to the man who had warned me; 'and I am surprised that you should dare to bring such an accusation against a gentleman whose reputation is so well known.'

"The individual who had called out had never been to the club before, and did not know M. de Mertens at all. We had all been standing round the table close to each other, and on seeing another player put his hand into my hat, it was very natural that the man should have thought it his duty to warn me. On hearing my explanation he apologized most humbly to M. de Mertens, and several of the acquaintances of the latter gathered round and expressed their regret that such an insult should have been offered him.

"We then continued our play, and M. de Mertens soon left the club. Three days passed, and I heard nothing more of the young man. In shielding him as I had done, my first thought had been of his father, and I had determined to save from disgrace the name of the brave soldier of Magenta.

"One evening, however, just as I was going out to pay some visits, my orderly informed me that a lady wished to see me. I went into the drawing-room, and there I found a woman of about forty-five years of age. She was very dignified-looking and there was an open, honest expression about her face which fascinated me.

"'I am Madame de Mertens,' she said, simply. 'My son told me everything about the affair at the club, and I have come to thank you with all my heart for having preserved for us intact the honor of our name.'

"'Madame——' I began, but she interrupted me in her emotion and nervousness.

"'My son had got entangled in various ways, and in desperation had taken to play. It appears he had lost every penny he possessed that night. You know the rest, alas!'

"I felt very much embarrassed, for the poor mother's grief was terrible to witness. She was still standing there in front of me, her face was deadly pale, and the tears were trembling on her long dark eyelashes.

"'He is young, madame; you must not take it to heart so,' I stammered. 'It was just a moment's weakness. I will see your son, and——'

"'No, captain,' she said, shaking her head sadly, 'he is no longer here . . . he has enlisted, and is already on his way with the regiment.'"

We had all been listening attentively to Captain Joubert's story, and when he stopped speaking there was silence for a few minutes.

"And what happened to M. de Mertens, captain?" asked one of the group. "Did you ever hear?"

"He is dead. . . . Six months ago I received a leter from Kelung—a pitiful little letter—written with very pale ink, on a sheet of paper that was all crumpled and yellow with age. There were only a few lines for me to read. I know them by heart. They were as follows:

"I am mortally wounded. . . . Admiral Coubert has just brought me the cross; but . . . I am dying. I am sending it to you, my poor cross . . . for you saved me, and I should like you to wear it . ."

"This is why, my friends, instead of wearing the decoration which I received from the chancellor, you always see me with the sergeant's cross which poor Mertens sent me. Poor boy! To think that he started as a thief, and died a hero's death at Kelung."

A STRANGE MISSION.

BY ELLA M. HESS.

"I should like to do something to help the missionaries," said Gertie White to Mr. Storm, the near-sighted, good-natured old pastor.

"Are you in earnest, Gertie?"

"Of course I am in earnest!" said Gertie, a pretty, dark-eyed lassie, with waving hair and lips red as holly berries.

"Because," said the old gentleman, thoughtfully, "I've heard of a vacancy that wants filling. But it is rather a menial position."

"Nothing is menial in the details of missionary life," said enthusiastic Gertie.

"The Reverend James Marshton is going to Brazil on a special mission to the heathen——"

"Oh, that is glorious!" cried Gertie, with kindling cheeks and eyes.

"And he wants a help."

"A help?"

"Well, my dear, to put it in plain English," said the old man, "I suppose he means a servant maid. He has written to me to know if I can recommend a meek-spirited, efficient young woman, who would not shrink from the path of duty, however thorny the path might prove."

"The very thing!" cried Gertie. "And as for servants are we not all the servants of one Master? Yes, I'll go to Brazil—that is if the Reverend Mr. Marshton will take me. Since poor mamma died and my sister Mary married, there is nothing on earth to keep me in one place more than another. But what sort of person is this Reverend James Marshton?" with a little natural curiosity.

"I don't know, my dear," said Mr. Storm. "Our communications have been carried on entirely by letter, and I shouldn't know him if I were to meet him to-morrow face to face. But I saw Mrs. Marshton once—a pretty, little, old lady, with white curls and a face like a winter apple."

"I'll go!" said Gertie, promptly. "I can sew, cook, wash and iron; and, whatever I can't do, I shall be glad and willing to learn."

"That's the right spirit, my dear!" beamed Mr. Storm.

"How soon will my services be required?"

"At once so my correspondent says."

"Then I'll go at once," said Gertie. "Please give me the address."

* * * * * * * *

James Marshton was sitting alone in his litle study, before a meagre fire, drinking a cup of poorly made tea, for the landlady didn't think it worth her while to put herself out for a lodger who was so soon going to emigrate to Brazil.

He was a tall, pleasant-faced young man with dark, pensive eyes, dark beard, and features that betoken delicacy of character and extreme refinement; and, as he sat there, he was mentally taking himself to task, in that his heart should fail at the very outset of the career he had most coveted ever since graduating from the theological institute.

"Alone!" soliloquized Mr. Marshton. "Of course I must go alone. What right have I to expect anything else? Is it for me, one of the humblest workers in my Master's vineyard, to pick and choose how, when and where I am to be employed? And——"

Just here came a soft, little flutter at the door. Mr. Marshton paused and listened.

"It's my landlady's cat," said he. "Poor thing! I'm almost sorry that I made a pet of her. She'll be lonesome when I am gone; and perhaps, on the whole, it may be better for me not to let her in."

Tap, tap, tap! Again came the hesitating, uncertain sound.

"The cat never made a noise like that before!" cried the Reverend James Marshton, much marveling.

And he rose, set down the cup of lukewarm tea, and opened the door.

There stood a pretty young woman, in a dark, well-fitting suit edged with fur, and a face like a rosebud, all blushes and sparkles.

"Does the Reverend Mr. Marshton live here?" asked Gertie White.

"That is my name," said the reverend gentleman.

"If you please, sir," said Gertie, feeling an instantaneous sensation of awe thrill down to her heart, "Mr. Alexander Storm sent me here. The young person, sir—the help."

"Oh!" said Reverend James Marshton. "Be so good as to walk in. Yes, exactly."

And Reverend James Marshton took up the tray and put it down again, in some embarrassment.

"Did he think you would suit?" said he.

"Yes, sir," said Gertie. "Here is his letter."

Reverend James Marshton unfolded the letter and read:

"Dear Brother Marshton: Allow me to introduce to you Miss Gertie White a truly worthy and industrious young female, who I think can scarcely fail to suit you in the capacity mentioned.

"Yours with many good wishes,

"ALEXANDER STORM."

Reverend James Marshton folded up the letter again, and looked helplessly at the tray before him, as if for further inspiration.

"It's a very important step that you are taking, Miss White," said he.

"Please don't be so ceremonious, Mr. Marshton," brightly interposed Gertie. "Call me by my name—Gertie. Oh, yes, of course it is important but I've fully made up my mind to it."

"You are young," said Mr. Marshton.

"I can be all the more useful," said Gertie.

"You look—excuse me," stammered the young clergyman, "but you look delicate."

"Indeed I am quite well and strong," said Gertie. "And I understand all the branches of housework, and I really think I can suit you."

"But your friends."

"I have no friends who will miss me much," said Gertie, speaking with dew in her eyes and a little quiver in her voice. "Henceforward, my mission will be all in all to me."

"I wish I could have seen a little more of you," said the Reverend James Marshton. "All this is rather sudden, you know."

"Everything is sudden—just at the last," said Gertie, cheerily. "You need have no fears, sir; I am certain I shall suit you."

He held out his hand with a bright smile.

"Well spoken, Gertie!" said he. "There is an electricity in your look and voice that encourages me in a most marvellous degree. But I desire you to think it well over before you decide."

"My decision was made the first hour that Mr. Storm mentioned your name to me," said Gertie White.

"Strange—very strange!" said Mr. Marshton, instinctively stroking his silky beard. "And you really think, Miss White—Gertie, I would say—that you will bear all the hardships and difficulties incident to the life of a missionary's wife?"

"Of a—what?" questioned Gertie, not quite certain she had heard aright.

"Of whose wife?" asked Gertie.

"Of my wife!"

Gertie rose to her feet, blushing like a rose.

"I—I never dreamed of this!" said she. "Mr. Storm told me that you wanted a help."

"A helpmeet," gravely explained the young clergyman.

"But Mrs. James Marshton?"

"Eh?" said Mr. Marshton.

"A little old lady with silver curls, and a fresh complexion," faltered Gertie. "Mr. Storm said he had seen her."

"That was my mother," said the missionary-elect. "She died a year since. Had she been with me still, I should have needed no one to hold up my weary hands or cheer my solitary hours."

"Oh! how could Mr. Storm make such a blunder?" she cried.

"I'm afraid it was partly my own fault," said the young man. "My handwriting is apt to be illegible at times. I—I am very sorry, Miss White."

"What must you think of me?" faltered the girl.

"I think you are a sweet looking young woman," said the missionary, gaining courage, "and you seem very much in earnest. I don't see why you can't be my helpmeet in good earnest. It is true we have not known each other long; but we have each Mr. Storm's kind recommendation, and if I am not postitively disagreeable to you——"

"Oh, I don't dislike you at all!" interrupted Gertie, laughing in spite of herself, at the comicality of the situation.

"Then," said the Reverend James Marshton, "we will send for a college-mate of mine, whose parish residence is in the next street, and we'll be married at once."

Gertie White hesitated.

"But will that be helping the missionaries?" said she.

"It will be helping one particular missionary very much indeed," said the Reverend James Marshton.

"Well—perhaps—if it won't seem so very strange," said Gertie.

"Is it yes?" pressed the young clergyman.

"I—suppose—so," said Gertie.

And when the ship Monitor sailed for its future destination, containing in her list of passengers the names of "The Reverend James Marshton and wife," few who read the register knew how it had all happened.

But the Reverend James Marshton was very happy, and so was his wife.

Highly Sensitive.

"I'm going to report that post office clerk," indignantly exclaimed the young woman with ink on her fingers.

"He always seemed very polite," said her companion.

"Well, he isn't. What business has he to try to criticise my writing? When I went to mail a lot of poems he asked if they weren't second-class matter."

IN THE PHILIPINES.

SPAIN'S EXTORTIONS AND CRUELTIES DESCRIBED BY A SPANIARD.

Sources of Weyler's Fortune—The Tax Burdened Natives—Blanco's Punishment of a Wholesale Murderer—Tragedy of Dr. Rizal—Duck's Eggs Hatched by Natives.

Dr. Pinto de Guimares, a Spaniard and a resident of Manila, prints in the Revue des Revues of Paris an article on "The Spanish Reign of Terror in the Philippines." In it he says:

"No stranger can form any idea of vexations, formalities and regulations so ruinous to private and public interests as those which the Spanish officials have invented and put in force in the Philippines. These gentlemen have but one object in life, to make as large a fortune as possible during their terms of three or six years in the archipelago and then return to Spain to escape the curses of the unhappy natives. The notorious Gen. Weyler was Governor-General of the Philippines for three years and was a shining model of well-regulated economy. His annual pay was $40,000. Out of this custom compelled him to disburse large sums for his personal expenses and to subscribe generously to various public works and charities. Notwithstanding all these demands upon his purse this prudent General contrived to economize and deposited in bank at London and Paris, an amount which his own compatriots estimated at from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000. The conduct of his successor, Despajol, gives a clue to the mystery of the General's economies. On the day of the arrival of the new Governor-General at Manila one of the richest Chinese merchants of the city offered him a present of $10,000 as a tribute of respect and esteem and was struck in the face for his pains.

"The officers composing the central Government at Manila are many and well paid. The islands are divided into military, civil and mixed provincial Governments. Each is composed of a Governor and a numerous staff, all paid from the revenues of their Governorships. This system gives ample opportunity for fiscal malversion and oppression which fall upon the unhappy natives. Under Spanish law every inhabitant of the colony is compelled to carry a personal card which answers the purpose of a passport. No one can travel without one. Its cost varies from $2.50 to $25 and it must be renewed annually. Those who pay less than $3.50 are compelled to give their personal labor to the Government for fifteen days or pay an additional tax of $7.50. As the daily wages of workers ranges from 5 to 50 cents, the severity with which this tax weighs upon the masses can be imagined.

"Throughout all of the islands the taxes are uniform and innumerable. Every native who keeps and fattens an animal for food is taxed; if he has a horse or some cocoanut trees he is taxed for each. If he wishes to make cocoanut oil he is again taxed for the privilege. There are taxes on weights and measures, on stores and shops; a tax on land, on all kinds of manufactures and on alcoholic spirits. Native tax collectors are made responsible for the collection of the total taxes in their districts. At Siquijor forty-four of these native functionaries were exiled to Bohol after their houses, land and cattle had been confiscated, because they had not been able to make good the arrears due by their fellow countrymen. This is the price which the natives of the Philippines pay for their Government on Christian principles.

"And yet, owing to the marvelous fertility of their soil, the oppressed, tortured, ruined islanders manage to exist. A primitive system of cultivation has produced, in one year, eight millions of dollars worth of hemp, six of sugar and four of tobacco! Gold, iron, copper and coal are found on the islands.

"Such was the state of the colony when, as suddenly as a flash of lightning, the insurrection of 1896 came. It was the result of speeches made by Spanish officers at an army reunion and banquet, who then and there proposed to 'exterminate the savage natives in their lairs,' and declared 'that they would give no quarter, but slaughter these rascals to the last man.' At first the insurgents were checked by want of arms and supplies, but the first detachment of Spanish troops which opposed them were so few and behaved in so cowardly a fashion that they were easily cut to pieces, and the rebels secured several hundred rifles and thousands of cartridges.

"The memory of the Death Hole of Manila will never be effaced while the present generation of natives and their children live. The Death Hole was a noisome dungeon, built in the foundations of the city rampart, on the River Pasig side of Manila. This prison had been unused for more than 100 years. It was half full of foul water, the home of rats, snakes and all kinds of vermin. One hundred natives were shut in it. During the night they were heard shrieking and begging to be knocked on the head or be taken out. The Spanish Lieutenant in charge, annoyed by their groans and complaints, stopped up the only opening by which fresh air could reach them. All were found dead in the morning. Gen. Blanco was then Governor-General of the Philippines. When he heard of this atrocity he summoned the butcher Lieutenant before him, and, after upbraiding him for his cruelty, kicked him downstairs! The General knew that if he had court-martialed this officer the latter would have been acquitted.—New York Sun.

HIS DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

AUTOPSY ON THE BODY OF THE LATE ROBERT RANDOLPH.

Made Necessary to Determine Payment of Accident Insurance — His Death was Due to Concussion of the Brain.

Last evening at the undertaking establishment of A. M. Runyon & Son, of Park avenue, an autopsy was performed on the body of Robert Randolph, of Elmwood place, who died so suddenly last Saturday night. The autopsy was performed at the instigation of the insurance company that was carrying an accident insurance for Mr. Randolph. There seemed to be some doubt as to whether Mr. Randolph's death was due to an accident or natural causes, hence the examination. Dr. Tomlinson was in charge of the autopsy, and he was assisted by Dr. E. W. Hedges. A thorough examination was made, and the physicians decided that death was due to concussion of the brain, thereby making the death an accidental one.

In examining the body no dislocation of any kind was discovered and every organ was apparently in a healthy condition. The heart was found to be all right. According to the opinion of the physicians the cause of death is veiled in mystery. There was no external evidence of bruise or injury, but so far as the physicians are able to determine, death was caused by concussion of the brain, a disarrangement at the nerve centre.

The funeral services of the late Robert Randolph were held from the home, on Elmwood place, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The attendance of friends and neighbors was very large and was strong evidence of the esteem in which the departed was held by all. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, where the deceased attended, conducted the service. He spoke words of comfort and consolation, and his remarks were strongly addressed to the living. He spoke of the domesticity of the deceased and how he loved his home.

The floral display was beautiful and included a large pillow from the employes at the Pond Machine Tool Works, where Mr. Randolph was employed. It bore the words "Our Comrade."

Those who served as pall bearers were James Smith, Daniel Page, Mr Conklin, M. C. Dobbins. The remains were removed to the rooms of A. M. Runyon & Son, on Park avenue, where they were held for burial today.

BICYCLE THIEF CONVICTED.

Wm. Grey, Colored, Found Guilty of Stealing Frank Dencklau's Wheel.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, November 30th—William Grey, the colored man who was charged with stealing the wheel belonging to Frank Dencklau, was tried in the Union County Court here this morning and found guilty. He will be sentenced by Judge Vail next week.

Grey's defence was rather weak. He claimed that he purchased the wheel from a man named Green residing in Rahway. Prosecutor English was able to trip him up in the cross questioning several times.

It will be remembered that Dencklau lent his wheel to a friend one Saturday afternoon and that evening the friend returned it and left it standing in front of Hall's pharmacy where Dencklau was employed. There was no clue to the thief.

A week or so later Grey was arrested in New Brunswick after a lively chase. He had a wheel and acted in such a suspicious manner that a policeman there questioned him.

He broke away from the officer in front of the station house, but was tripped up by a passerby and captured. He first said that he bought the wheel in Metuchen.

It is believed that he will be sentenced to the State Prison for a year.

He Won't Find White Now.

Marshal Wise arrested Harry Decker in the borough last evening Decker is about 35 years of age and was acting suspiciously in several places. When asked what he was doing he gave the officer some sauce and impudence. He finally said that he was looking for a man named White, who he said, resides in the borough. White could not be found and Decker was locked up. He said that he had no home and was traveling about the country. Recorder Long gave him five days, and he is now serving his sentence.

Plants in Mexico.

Down in Mexico the castor bean, which we think does pretty well for us if it stands up ten or twelve feet "in its stockings," grows to be a tree thirty feet high, with hard wood and orthodox bark. Our common field daisy is pruned into a shrub two or three feet high and made to cover itself with a wealth of its yellow-eyed flowers; its stem becomes as large as one's wrist, and it is much used as an ornamental shrub in cemeteries. Hibiscus, a rare greenhouse shrub with us, which has large, flame-colored flowers, with curious plume-like centres, is planted for hedges, and is said to make very beautiful ones. The foliage is a lovely green, and the freedom with which it produces its flowers makes it very attractive.

Thad Stevens and the Judge.

Thad Stevens was once engaged in trying a case before a Judge noted for his ignorance of the law. During the trial the Judge made a ruling which greatly incensed him, when, with hands trembling and his thin face reddened, he began to tie up his papers. "Do I understand," asked the pompous Judge, "that you are trying to show contempt for this court?" No, sir," retorted Stevens; "I am not trying to show contempt for this court. On the contrary, I'm doing my best to conceal it."—Time and Hour
